Dr. Roland Dille, president of Moorhead state university, was voted president-elect of the American association of state colleges and universities (AASCU) Tuesday at its annual meeting in San Antonio, TX.

AASCU, a national organization working on behalf of public education, represents 333 four-year state colleges and universities. Dille has been a member of the association's board of directors since 1978 and will assume its presidency in November of 1980. He was one of nine college and university presidents elected to national office at the San Antonio meeting.

In his 11th year as president of Moorhead state, Dille taught English at the University of Minnesota, St. Olaf college and California Lutheran college before joining the faculty at Moorhead state in 1963. He held the titles of academic dean and professor of English when he was appointed the university's eighth president in 1968.

Dille, 55, was raised in rural Dassel and taught high school English and speech there after serving in the army infantry during World War II and earning a bachelor's degree "summa cum laude" at the University of Minnesota. As a university student, he edited the campus literary magazine, was elected to Phi Beta Kappa and served as a student senator.

Dille later went on to earn his doctorate at the University of Minnesota specializing in modern British literature, and published a book, "Four Romantic Poets," in 1969.

As treasurer of AASCU last year, Dille was part of a 13-member delegation that toured Egypt and Greece on an educational mission. He is currently a member of the Minnesota humanities commission.

John Barnard, president of Western Michigan university, assumed the office of president of AASCU this year.

HEW Allocates $343,170 For MS Chapter

Department of health, education and welfare grant totalling more than one third of a million dollars has been received by the Minnesota North Star chapter of the National multiple sclerosis society.

Allocated through the Office of Human Development services and rehabilitation services administration, these grant monies will improve Vocational rehabilitation services to persons with multiple sclerosis (MS) in the state of Minnesota.

Three project coordinators to be hired in January of 1980 will work over a three-year period, facilitating workshops under the auspices of already existing MS Patient support groups throughout the state.

As well as familiarizing MS patients with DVR services, the coordinators will conduct in-service trainings for DVR counselors to increase their awareness of the work potential of persons with MS.

In addition, the coordinators will encourage the medical community to make early DVR referrals when appropriate for newly diagnosed MS patients.

Multiple sclerosis is the most common disease of the central nervous system among young adults between the ages of 20 and 40. Minnesota has the second highest incidence rate of MS in the nation. There is no known cause or cure for the disease.

The Minnesota North Star chapter of the National multiple sclerosis society provides guidance and information to more than 1,000 patients and families in Minnesota. The MS Society also offers therapeutic recreation, transportation and equipment services to Minnesotans with MS.

The $343,170 recently allocated to the North Star Chapter represents the first Federal grant ever received by the MS society.

State To Get More Funds To Heat Homes

Minnesota will receive an additional $66 million in the next two years for help with high heating bills due to a move led by Senators Rudy Boschwitz and Ed Muskie.

Their action came as the senate considered the home energy assistance act, which authorizes $3 billion in 1981 and $4 billion for the program nationwide.

Originally intended as aid with heating bills, the bill as reported from committee had changed form. Due to its distribution formula, southern states would have received a good share of the money to help with general energy costs, including air conditioning.

Under the committee's formula, Minnesota would have received only $78 million in 1981 and $106 million in 1982. The Boschwitz-Muskie formula means the state will instead receive, respectively, $106 million and $144 million.

"Our amendment means the emphasis of the program is now back where it belongs — on helping with increased fuel costs. I was very concerned, for without this change and the increased help, even in Minnesota, there are people who would have been forced into the choice between fuel and food. And that's a choice that should not have to be made," Boschwitz explained.

CREED CONTEST winner at the regional leadership rally for Future Farmers of America in Thief River Falls Thursday was Kevin Gunderson of Mahnomen.

UMC Appoints Director Of Development

Appointment of Lowell Larson for the newly created position of director of institutional research and development at the university of Minnesota technical college — Crookston (UMC) was announced by Provost Stanley D. Sahlstrom. Larson, 32, will begin his assignment on December 1.

A Minnetonka resident, Larson has been executive vice-president of the Minnesota Jaycees since 1976. His major responsibilities with the volunteer organization of over 18,000 involved management in the various areas of the association.

He developed, coordinated, and promoted all statewide programs through supervision and guidance of four volunteer vice-presidents and their staffs; he coordinated all Minnesota Jaycee conventions and meetings; he supervised and directed the five-member full-time paid Jaycee support staff; and he prepared and supported a $700,000 budget.

Prior to his Jaycee position, Larson was a mathematics instructor in the St. James public school system from 1969 to 1976. He taught seventh, eighth and ninth grade students mathematics, including algebra and computer science. In 1971 he was appointed middle school mathematics team leader. He was also meet manager for varsity wrestling tournaments, and he coached middle school wrestling and track.

"I've been in education before," said Larson. "I'm anxious to get into an educational setting again."

Larson received his bachelor of science degree in 1969 from Mankato state university with a major in mathematics, education, and a minor in chemistry.

He has been active in professional and community activities as a member of the National association of Jaycee Executives, the American society for training and development, and the Minnetonka schools long range plan task force.

The main responsibility Larson sees for his new position is "to seek additional funding other than tax dollars to assist staff in offering better classes and facilities to help meet students' needs."

Larson and his wife Carole have two children, Melanie, 8, and Brian, 5.

Gasohol Meet Slated Dec. 12 At Bird Island

Minnesota Gasohol commission has been receiving hundreds of inquiries about on-the-farm alcohol stills. Because of this strong interest in gasohol, farm and commercial stills and alcohol fuel, the commission has decided to sponsor an all day public information meeting December 12 at the Bird Island ballroom, Bird Island, beginning at 9 a.m.

Many different display and information booths will be set up, highlighted by an operating alcohol still, an alcohol fueled tractor motor, an alcohol burning car, an operating see-through distillation column and much, much more. This event is scheduled to take place shortly after the national gasohol commission meeting being held in San Antonio, Texas, Dec. 3, 4 and 5, therefore, the information available at Bird Island will be the latest.

In setting up this meeting, the commission is receiving much encouragement from various groups such as the Farm Bureau, Minnesota AAA, Cenex, the Corn Growers association, and the surrounding townships. Selected state officials are being invited to participate along with leaders in the alcohol fuel program, such as Dr. Lance Crombie of Webster, Dr. Paul Middaugh from South Dakota state university and Dr. Al Rusk from South West state university. Doug Snyder has been asked to represent ADM and Bob Butler will represent Butler research and engineering.

"We are hopeful that Archie or Alan Zeithhamer will be present as they have a farm alcohol plant up and operating. They did much of the early pioneer work throughout the United States. Many more well qualified individuals and companies will also be in attendance," a commission spokesman said.

Price for the noon meal will be included in the registration fee which will be $20 for members of the Minnesota Gasohol commission and $25 for non-members. Advance registration is encouraged and those registering early will be given priority in all the day's activities. Advance registration is strongly encouraged and anyone desiring may send a check to the address listed below. Please be sure to include your name and address. Minnesota Gasohol Commission, Highway 212 & 71, Olivia, MN 56277, phone (612) 523-2150.

Local Dealer Shows Fuel Saving Habits

To emphasize fuel saving from good driving habits, Northern Motors in Thief River Falls has equipped a car with special electronic metering equipment to give an instant read-out of the vehicle's fuel consumption in miles per gallon following a test drive.

Owner Bob Dondelinger of Northern Motors said that the mini-computer also provides cost information as well as other calculations. The driver will be able to compare his miles per gallon when using good driving habits as compared with bad driving habits.

The equipment will be used during Chevrolet's national economy drive which began Monday and will continue through December 10.

"We want visitors to our showrooms to test their driving skills, pick up a few new fuel efficient driving techniques and, while they're here, to learn first hand about advances in fuel efficiency in our 1980 models," Dondelinger said.

"You can read about improved fuel economy and higher EPA mileage numbers but there's nothing like checking it out yourself," he added.

Appoint Sen. Durenberger To Commission

Senator Dave Durenberger has been selected as one of 11 congressional advisors to a presidential commission on the 1980s. The commission, created by President Carter in October, will design a national agenda for the new decade.

"This is a great opportunity to bring some creativity and fresh ideas to the issues our country will face in the next 10 years," said Durenberger. "The president has given the commission a high priority. The recommendations this panel makes will carry a lot of weight."

Durenberger said the commission will study a wide variety of issues, including the economy, the use of natural resources, energy and civil rights. "An important focus that I'll bring to the commission will be the study of how we can change the role of government, not just its impact. We're going to find ways to shift some of the responsibilities government has assumed to private institutions, especially voluntary organizations," said the senator.

Durenberger said the commission will be more than a study group. "We're going to define issues and make specific recommendations for action. An important task of the commission will be to involve private citizens, state and local governments, business and civic groups and other organizations in our work. It is absolutely vital that we make this truly a national agenda," he said.

The 50-member commission will be headed by President William McGill of Columbia university. Eleven members of Congress, four Republicans and seven Democrats, will serve as advisors. Durenberger was appointed by Senate minority leader Howard Baker. The commission is to make its report to the president and Congress by Dec. 31, 1980.

"This is an exciting challenge. It gives me the opportunity to shape our programs for the 1980s and to bring to national attention some of the ideas that have worked so well in Minnesota. For example, in Minnesota we've seen how well our profitable and non-profit institutions can take over the delivery of some public services. That's a program that must be expanded nationally," said the senator.

Durenberger urged anyone with ideas or recommendations for the commission to forward them to him. His address is 353 Russell Office Building, Washington, D.C., 20510.

Employees who work with mentally restored workers should keep a friendly eye on them and help them over rough spots, according to a brochure published by the President's Committee on Employment of the Handicapped.

U of M Daily Dispute Goes To Legislature

Debate on the mandatory student fee that helps support the Minnesota Daily — a debate spawned by the Daily's notorious June 4 humor issue — moved from the university of Minnesota campus to the state legislature November 14.

The move, complicated by questions of press freedom and university autonomy, left possible legislative action in doubt.

Ken Zubay (IR-Rochester), who chaired the hearing of the House Education committee's higher education division, acknowledged that the legislature has "very limited authority" over the university's fee structure. Zubay said the hearing was called because opponents of the required fee felt the university had not given them a chance to air their views.

An orderly crowd of 250-300 gathered to hear 18 people speak for and against the required $1.75 per quarter fee that provides the Daily with 15 per cent of its revenue. Former Gopher football coach Cal Stoll was one of those testifying against the Daily.

Each member of the higher education division will submit a written recommendation by Wednesday, Nov. 21. Those recommendations will be studied by a committee of four division members, who will decide what action to take. Action could vary from "nothing to a resolution," Zubay said.

Most legislators who spoke at the hearing indicated that they were opposed to the required student fee for the Daily. The audience, bolstered by a bus-load of "Save the Daily" supporters, gave more applause to speakers who favored the mandatory fee unless a change comes from within the university.

University President C. Peter Magrath told the legislators that the hearing has caused anxiety on campus. "Many highly respected faculty and students. . .fear that this hearing could be a threat directly to a student newspaper and, even more fundamentally, to cherished First Amendment rights and to academic freedom."

While stating that he did not regard the hearing as a witch-hunt or inquisition, Magrath said: "It would be, I respectfully suggest, profoundly unfortunate if a controversy over the fee support of a student newspaper were allowed to escalate into legislative proposals that might be legally questionable. . ."

Magrath emphasized that "proven mechanisms" already exist within the university for changing student fees and that regular polls taken on campus indicate a majority of students want the mandatory fee for the Daily.

Since the June 4 humor issue, a number of changes have been made and additional reforms may yet be made, Magrath said. The student services fees committee has suggested that students who oppose the Daily on moral or religious grounds be provided with an appeals process that could reimburse them for the fee that goes to the Daily.

Kathy Sackett, the leading critic of the Daily and co-chairman of the ad hoc anti-defamation committee, said her side was not given a fair hearing at the university. "We believe firmly that we are in the minority, and that this issue will not be resolved by a referendum," she testified.

"I have no qualms about the Daily printing whatever it wants, but I have many qualms about being forced to pay for that," Sackett said.

Dan Lundberg, co-chairman of the same committee, testified that the humor issue was "the straw that broke the camel's back." Included in the June 4 issue was a mock interview with Jesus Christ.

"I'm tired of being forced to pay for a newspaper that takes it upon itself to publicly mock everything that I, as a Christian, hold true," Lundberg said.

Also testifying was Cal Stoll, former varsity football coach, who said that he is unemployed. Although Stoll was listed as an opponent of the required fee, he said his concern was a Daily story that had alleged NCAA violations in Stoll's football program. A special committee of the university investigated the allegations and cleared Stoll.

Stoll claimed the Daily never printed a retraction of the story. "There were 21 untruths in that article," he said.

Robert Shaw, manager of the Minnesota newspaper association, told the legislators that he and the board of directors of the association were "surprised, astounded and ashamed of the Daily humor issue." But, he added, "by and large, the Daily functions as a professional newspaper and serves as a valuable training ground for Minnesota journalists. We think that, unless you drop this sort of inquiry, you're coming kind of close to harassment of people who had nothing to do with the original humor issue. Let this thing rest."

BLAIR FROSETH, Plummer, receives congratulations from Richard A. Skok, dean of the college of forestry at the University of Minnesota. Froseth was recently awarded the Dr. Stanley J. Buckman memorial scholarship at the university. He is a senior in the department of forest products, college of forestry, and a transfer student from Northland community college.

Boutiette And Stromberg Meet President

At the invitation of Vice President Walter Mondale, Fran Stromberg and Darwin Boutiette of Thief River Falls were among 150 Minnesota DFL members to visit at the White House in Washington, D.C., last Wednesday.

Mrs. Stromberg is Pennington county DFL chairperson and Boutiette, a member of the Lincoln high school faculty, is active in legislative areas of the Minnesota Education association.

President Jimmy Carter spoke to the group and took time to shake hands and pose for individual pictures with each guest, Mrs. Stromberg said. Also speaking to the group were Patricia Harris, secretary of health and human resources; Stuart Eizenstat, domestic affairs aide to the President; Dr. Zbigniew Brzezinski, national security aide; Dr. Alfred Kahn, chairman of the council on wage and price stability; Jack Watson, senior advisor to the intergovernmental affairs commission; and Richard Moe, chief of staff for the Vice President.

Mrs. Carter also greeted the visitors and a buffet lunch was served in the state dining room.

Mrs. Stromberg noted that Vice President Mondale stressed to the Minnesota delegation what he considered to be accomplishments of the current administration. The Vice President credited the administration for the nation's first farmer controlled grain reserve, 35 per cent overall increase in farm prices since 1977, reduction of $36 billion in federal deficit spending, 8.3 million jobs created, civil service reform, a solid social security system and 60 per cent funding increase for educational programs.

Vice President Mondale also spoke of perserving peace through a strong defense and reminded the group that for the first time in 40 years no American soldier has been killed in combat, Mrs. Stromberg added.

Senator Hanson And Gayle Speak At BPW Club

Senator Marv Hanson and his wife Gayle were guest speakers at the Thief River Falls business and professional Women's dinner-meeting held Tuesday evening at the Elks club.

Mrs. Hanson, who gave information on what it's like to be the wife of a legislator, stated that it was most rewarding to be able to gain insights into politics as she and the two children spend the winter months in St. Paul. The summers are spent at their farm in Hallock.

Senator Hanson spoke on the changing role of women and what the legislature is doing to better their conditions. He stated that in 1960 only 34 per cent of the women were employed while in 1977, 52 per cent were in the working force. Yet, he said there still are instances where qualified women are unable to resume greater responsibilities in government offices due to certain restrictions. Although much remains to be done to better conditions, in 1977, a program was established providing shelters for battered women. In 1976, the Council on the Economic Status of Women was established, which is now broadening its concerns to include housing and the notifications to spouses as to pension rights.

Recent legislation provided for protection from spouse abuse when threatened; increased appropriations for displaced homemakers who are faced with self support or support of their families; equal split of property in marriage dissolutions; a repeal of the gift tax, and a change in the inheritance laws.

Norma Hanson, chairman of the program committee, introduced the speakers. President Vicky Erickson presided at the meeting, which concluded with a brief business session. The December meeting was discussed and members voted to make charitable cash donations in place of a gift exchange.

An auction of new and slightly used items followed the meeting. Clarice Collins served as auctioneer. Guest at the meeting was Diane Boese of Bergan Travel.

CF Campaign At Goodridge Raises $70.75

Breath of life campaign for cystic fibrosis in the Goodridge community raised $70.75 for the cystic fibrosis foundation's programs of research, care and education, according to Ron Magers, Minnesota chairman of the breath of life campaign.

"Researchers have not yet found a cure or control for cystic fibrosis, but through the generosity of volunteers, our contributors, concerned businesses and the press, we may be coming closer to the day when CF is no longer a major genetic killer of children," Magers said.

"The research and clinical care sponsored by the cystic fibrosis breath of life campaign will also bring forth the day when lung-damaging diseases no longer take the lives of more American children than any other diseases except cancer."

Magers thanked Mrs. Eugene Frazer as drive chairman and the citizens of Goodridge for their support.

Theft and crash of a 1977 model van led to the apprehension of two female juveniles by the Pennington county sheriff's department Tuesday. The girls were 14 and 15 years of age, one from the Motley area and one from St. Hilaire, the sheriff's department said.

The van was reported stolen at 11:30 a.m. by Bob Loeffler of Bob's Auto Sales northwest of the city. At 1:23 p.m. the law enforcement center received a call regarding an accident three miles east, a mile north and three-fourths mile east of Thief River Falls involving a black van. The two girls involved in the accident were brought into Thief River Falls and apprehension was made here.

Damage to the van from the one-vehicle rollover was extensive, the sheriff's department said.

Requests Home Heating Oil Be Available

Amount of home heating oil available in rural areas in Minnesota has been questioned by Congressman Arlan Stangeland in a letter to energy secretary Charles Duncan.

"My concern," Stangeland said, "is directed toward having enough home heating oil in the right places at the right time in order to supply our rural areas with sufficient product for the coming winter. I am particularly concerned that stockpiled oil is not being moved through distribution and transportation chains at a rapid enough pace to be in place for consumers in case of an early winter."

The national target of 240 million barrels of middle distillage oil in storage is apparently close to being met, but figures supplied by the Minnesota energy agency show that primary inventory levels are lower than any year since records were first compiled in 1975.

Stangeland added that Canada's recent decision to terminate light crude exports to the U.S., coupled with the reduction of heavy crude exports, magnifies the potential problem facing Minnesota since roughly one-half of the state's crude requirements are supplied from Canadian sources.

In the letter to Secretary Duncan, the Seventh District Congressman also stressed taking into consideration the methods available for transporting additional home heating oil.

"Much of the additional middle distillate supplies to Minnesota are transported on rivers by barge, and a freeze could prevent stockpiled oil from reaching regional storage facilities and people's homes," he said.

He concluded by asking Secretary Duncan to assess the home heating oil situation in the state of Minnesota and to address the question of whether there is a sufficient supply of home heating oil flowing to regional storage tanks and people's homes.

National Tax Aide Program Helps Elderly

Every year at tax time, 71-year-old Ramsey leaves his quiet residential neighborhood in Cleveland to work in the impoverished East side section of the city. He brings with him assistants, tax forms and calculators.

Ramsey and his colleagues are volunteer tax counselors. Working through the national tax aide program, they help older people fill out their local and federal tax forms. The service is sponsored by the American association of retired persons and its sister organization, the National retired teachers association.

"The satisfaction of helping older people who live in the inner city is terrific," says Ramsey. "People are very appreciative."

His volunteers offer the free service at libraries, nutrition centers, senior citizen halls, shopping malls, churches and other community gathering places.

Ramsey works with community leaders to bring the services to as many people as possible. In the East side section, for example, the bishop of a black neighborhood church will help Ramsey expand last year's effort, which reached 100 needy older people.

In addition to the inner city, Ramsey coordinates the counseling efforts at another 200 sites throughout Ohio.

At first, many older people did not trust the tax counselors' work, "because we're not from the IRS (Internal Revenue Service)," says Ramsey. In fact, however, the IRS trains the volunteers in the areas of tax law applicable to those over 65.

In addition, most aides have business or tax-related backgrounds. Ramsey, for example, dealt with complex mathematical problems as an engineer for NASA.

An older person's tax form can be very complicated, notes Ramsey. Even the commercial tax services often overlook the various savings available to the elderly. For example, several people who have sought Ramsey's help have not known they were entitled to a $700 tax savings through the earned income credit provision.

Much of the confusion is caused by Congressional changes in the tax law. This year, older people will benefit from several provisions, such as:

—An increase in the personal exemption from $750 per exemption to $1,000. Persons over 65 continue to receive a double exemption.

—An increase in the standard deduction (now called the zero bracket amount) from $2,200 to $2,300 for single persons and from $3,200 to $3,400 for a married couple.

—A reduction in the number of tax brackets, and, in most cases, reduction in the percentage of income which must be paid in each bracket.

In addition to the new provisions, tax counselors can spot which older taxpayers need to file a return: only those with an income of more than $3,700 for a single person and $6,200 for a couple (excluding social security benefits) need to pay taxes.

During the 1979-80 tax season, an estimated 9,000 tax counselors will help prepare about 850,000 forms at 4,000 sites throughout the country. Each tax form prepared by a volunteer is usually double-checked by another aide to avoid errors.

To find out the location of programs in your region, write Tax-Aide Program, Dept. NK, NRTA-AARP, 1909 K Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20049. In addition, a new 1980 edition of "Your Retirement Income Tax Guide," will be available free in late January by writing to NRTA-AARP, P.O. Box 2400, Long Beach, Calif. 90801.

Job-Related Deaths Decline During 1978

Bureau of labor statistics of the U.S. department of labor reported that job-related deaths decreased from 4,760 in 1977 to 4,590 in 1978 for private employers with 11 or more employees. This represents a decrease of about four per cent in the fatality estimates from the 1977 level despite an over-the-year employment rise of five per cent. Based on the hours at work, the fatality rate fell from 0.91 in 1977 to 0.82 in 1978 per 10,000 full-time workers — a 10 per cent reduction.

The information on deaths results from new information supplied by employers who also report in the bureau's annual survey of occupational injuries and illnesses.

Following are some key findings:

+ During 1978, over-the-road motor vehicle accidents (cars and trucks) accounted for 29 per cent of the job-related deaths and aircraft and crashes accounted for seven per cent.

+ Heart attacks accounted for nine per cent of the fatalities.

+ Thirteen per cent of deaths was the result of falls, with one half occurring to construction workers.

+ Nine per cent of the fatalities resulted from industrial vehicles and equipment accidents.

+ The construction industries, employing five per cent of the workers, accounted for 20 per cent of the fatalities.

+ The services industries, representing 21 per cent of all workers, accounted for only eight per cent of the deaths, nearly one half due to over-the-road motor vehicle accidents and aircraft crashes.

+ Six of every 10 fatalities from contact with electric current occurred to workers in the construction and transportation, and public utilities industries.

+ Of all the deaths due to being struck by objects, over half occurred in manufacturing. This industry also accounted for 61 per cent of the deaths due to inhalation of gasses.

The 4,590 work injury and illness fatalities in 1978 for employers with 11 or more employees represent all deaths reported resulting from an occupational injury or illness that occurred in 1978, regardless of the length of time between the injury and death or the length of the illness resulting in death. Of these, nearly 500 were illness related, primarily due to heart attacks.

The occupational injuries and illnesses survey is a federal-state program in which reports are received and processed by state agencies participating with the bureau of labor statistics of the U.S. department of labor. The occupational fatality data reported through the annual survey are based on the records which employers maintain under the occupational safety and health act of 1970. Excluded from coverage under the act are working conditions which are covered by other federal safety and health laws.

The survey covers employers in private industries. Excluded are the self employed; farmers with fewer than 11 employees; and employees in federal, state and local government agencies. In a separate reporting system, agencies of the federal government are filing reports with the secretary of labor comparable with those of the private sector.

County Board Holds Brief Meet Tuesday

Pennington county commissioners held an abbreviated session Tuesday, dispensing with an unusually short agenda and adjourning before noon.

The board received an official notice from the state department of revenue that agricultural lands in the county would be subject to a 30 per cent increase in market value for the coming tax year. Pennington and nine other northwestern Minnesota counties were ordered to make the adjustment due to increasing sale prices of agricultural lands in the area.

A number of ditch levies were set for 1980 collection to maintain and improve the county ditch system. The board also reviewed a number of small account receivable and canceled about $240 among a number of accounts which had been carried since prior to 1975.

Mrs. Ron (Jackie) Schwietz was appointed to represent the county on the Agassiz health services agency board.

Discussion was held by the board with Sheriff Charles Richards regarding the 911 emergency telephone service being arranged through the state of Minnesota. Objective of the program is to have all emergency services — law enforcement, medical, fire and others — accessible to the public statewide by the dialing of telephone number 911. The board will consider the matter further at its December meeting.

Waseca Artist Wins Duck Stamp Contest

An acrylic painting of a pair of mallard ducks alighting over a foreground of reeds won first place in the 1980-81 federal "duck stamp" competition for Minnesota artist Richard W. Plasschaert.

Plasschaert's painting won out over a record 1,362 other entries in the national art contest and elevates him to the prestigious circle of duck stamp winners. He is presently employed by a Waseca printing company.

The design will be reproduced on next year's migratory bird hunting and conservation stamp which must be purchased by waterfowl hunters 16 years of age or older. Many stamps are also bought by conservationists interested in habitat preservation and by a growing number of stamp collectors. Revenues from sales of this stamp, popularly called the "duck stamp," are used to buy additional wetlands and waterfowl habitat under a program administered by the Interior Department's U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Plasschaert, 38, who has had no formal art training, works as a "stripper" in the page preparation room of a catalogue printing company in Waseca, a town of 8,000 about 80 miles south of Minneapolis-St. Paul. He prepares and lays out the photos and text that become the final printed pages of the company's publications.

"I'm without words," said Plasschaert, when contacted at his job and told of his first-place win. "I'm going to walk on the ceiling about a minute from now!"

Plasschaert had never entered the federal duck stamp contest before. "I haven't done anything for the past two months but paint 'duck stamps,' one for the federal contest and the other for the Minnesota state waterfowl stamp which I just entered."

The artist chose a simple design against a background of medium-blue sky for his entry. "I wanted it simple, thinking that it would have the best chance to win. I chose mallards because they are very common," Plasschaert said. "You've got to make the birds as large as possible without being overbearing, yet you've got to think small and imagine what it will look like as a stamp."

Mallards are the most common and one of the hardiest varieties of ducks, wintering as far north as they find open water.

Plasschaert is a high school graduate who learned the printing trade on the job and took occasional art courses in night school. He then spent 20 years in the fields of sign painting, landscape and portrait painting, and free-lance commercial art.

About four years ago, he decided to abandon commercial art and divide his time between wildlife art and his job in printing. "I just got sick of the rat race in commercial art and decided it would be wildlife art or nothing." Plasschaert added that he may now become a professional wildlife artist full-time.

His recent landscapes have been exhibited in several Minnesota and New York art galleries, though he now exhibits solely in a St. Paul wildlife art gallery.

Entries in this year's duck stamp contest increased nearly four-fold over last year's record number of 374, reflecting the increasing interest the general public is showing in the goal of waterfowl habitat protection. The art world, too, has elevated the contest to national prominence as a means of uncovering the talent of previously unknown wildlife artists.

The entries are judged on the basis of immediate visual impact, composition and design, style, lasting first impression and distinctiveness. Each category is assigned equal weight by a judging panel of five prominent artists and conservationists. Contestants are allowed only one entry.

Minnesota artists swept the contest this year, with David Maass of Waterville winning second place and Stuart Ferreira of Edina taking third place. Maass won the 1974-75 contest.

This year's judges included George Harrison, field editor of International Wildlife magazine and nature editor of Sports Afield magazine, of Hubertus, Wisconsin; Dr. Robert Meeks, manager of the Winous Point shooting club, of Port Clinton, Ohio; James Phillips, correspondent for the Associated Press and columnist for Outdoor Life magazine, of Washington, D.C.; Mrs. Betty Crystal, chairman of the women's membership division of Ducks Unlimited, Inc., of Jackson, Mississippi; and John Madson, assistant conservation director for Olin Industries in East Alton, Illinois.

Prior to 1964, wildlife artists were commissioned to provide a design for the annual stamp. Since this time, the design has been chosen by a contest open to all artists who are residents or citizens of the United States.

The winner's financial reward is significant. The federal government offers no prize, but commercial wildlife art dealers in the past have been eager to market limited edition reprints for the winner.

The competition is the only annual art contest regularly sponsored by the federal government. The colorful stamps constitute the longest running, annually issued series of stamps in U.S. revenue or postage stamp history.

Since 1934 when duck stamps first went on sale, nearly 2.4 million acres of prime waterfowl habitat have been acquired with over $315 million in revenue ($198 million from duck stamp receipts and $117 million from accelerated wetlands acquisition loan funds). By purchasing the stamps, more than 2.2 million conservationists provide close to $16.5 million in revenue yearly.

Interior Department encourages non-hunters who also enjoy wildlife through photography, birdwatching, and other activities to contribute to the U.S. conservation effort by buying a stamp. Next year's $7.50 issue will go on sale at post offices on July 1, 1980.

Turkey Shoot Held Sunday At Marshallton

A turkey shoot was held at the Marshallton gun club Sunday, with shooters from Thief River Falls, Newfolden, Viking, Greenbush, Badger, Holt, Strandquist and Mentor competing for the birds.

Top score of the day was a 46x50 shot by Bill Moreau of Thief River Falls. Three shooters tied at 43x50 for second place honors: Stan Wilson, Thief River Falls; Ike Ellingson, Viking; and Jim Sethre, Newfolden. The shoot-off saw Ellingson and Sethre walk off with turkeys.

High lady for the day was Mert Wilson of Thief River Falls with a 43x50.

Chicken shoots followed, with Loyd Melby, Chuck Clow and Tony Dorn winning birds.

Marshallton gun club plans one fun shoot of this type each month. The next shoot will be Dec. 16. All shooters are invited to take part.

TRF Bowlers Raise $700

"Early results indicate that 1,500 Minnesota bowlers raised over $155,000 for the Cystic Fibrosis foundation during Sunday's Bowl-For-Breath," announced Ron Magers, Minnesota CF campaign chairman. "These funds support research and treatment programs such as those at the Mayo clinic and the University of Minnesota where scientists work to find a cure or control for this fatal, inherited disease."

Locally, Thief River Falls was one of the 68 participating bowling centers. "We had eight bowlers who raised $699.40," said Judy Evenson, Thief River Falls Bowl-For-Breath coordinator.

Evenson urged participating bowlers to collect their pledges as soon as possible because the deadline for prizes is November 25. State grand prize winners are eligible for the microwave oven, a stereo, a color TV and a videotape recorder.

Fish Advisory Changed After PCB Studies

As a result of recent laboratory studies, which suggest that polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs) may be more toxic than previously thought, and because of regulatory actions by the U.S. food and drug administration (USFDA), the Minnesota department of health has reassessed its April fish consumption advisory.

Department has concluded that increased concerns regarding the intake of PCBs are justified. To establish revised consumption guidelines, however, the affected waters will have to be studied intensively, to determine more accurately the levels of PCBs in fish. Results will be available before next summer's fishing season, at which time new numerical consumption guidelines can be set.

In the meantime, consumption of fish from the Missippi river between the St. Anthony Falls dam in Minneapolis and Alma, Wis., and from the Minnesota river between New Ulm and Fort Snelling, should be limited according to the following guidelines:

(1) Frequent consumption (more than about four times per month) of all game and rough fish species should be avoided.

(2) White bass, channel catfish and carp from the affected stretch of the Minnesota River should not be eaten.

(3) Large fish from the affected stretches of both rivers should not be eaten.

(4) Fish fillets should be skinned and cooked or smoked before eating.

(5) Women of child-bearing age, especially nursing mothers, and children under six years of age, should eat no fish from the affected stretches of either river.

Additionally, channel catfish from Zumbro lake should not be eaten. (Recent sampling of Zumbro lake fish indicates elevated PCB levels in channel catfish.)

PCBs are toxic materials which tend to accumulate in the fatty tissues of fish living in contaminated waters. Although the use of these substances was curtailed in 1971, they are still present in some waste water effluents and river bottom sediments.

Recent laboratory studies indicating that PCBs may cause cancer or lead to reproductive difficulties led USFDA to lower the allowable level of PCBs in fish which are sold in interstate commerce. USFDA also has strongly urged individual states to take necessary action to limit the intake of PCBs by sportsfishermen and others who may be eating fish not controlled by the regulation of interstate commerce.

Laser Beam Used In Wildlife Study

While once only food for science fiction movies, laser beams and computer technology have found their way into wildlife research.

Using a last beam and a compact computer, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service (FWS) has begun a project that will attempt to simulate the effects of a high-voltage power line might have on birds.

Each year it is estimated, thousands of birds die or are injured when they strike power lines. Until now, wildlife biologists could merely speculate about the degree of magnitude of this problem, but by employing space-age technology new information is close at hand.

A power transmission line located in an area with a diversity of wildlife and across a major migratory route can prove to be a major obstacle. A variety of birds have been injured or killed from striking fixed objects such as power lines. Such occurrences have been documented at several locations and are not merely isolated situations.

"Birds strikes with fixed objects such as power lines are quite common," according to Carl Korschgen, FWS biologist and coordinator for the project. "No bird species seems immune to collision with power lines. Songbirds, eagles, ducks and geese; all sorts of birds have been known to strike power lines."

Korschgen gave the grisly details about bird strikes. "The effects on birds can be devastating. . . what we are talking about is decapitation, broken wings, broken necks and other violent after-effects. These birds are traveling 40 to 70 miles per hour and any contact with fixed objects is going to kill or maim."

The laser beam will project a two-inch diameter beam of light across a ¾ mile stretch of the Mississippi river where bird movement during migration can be quite heavy.

The laser beam is coupled to a computer that will record the total elapsed time the beam is interrupted when a bird or other object passes. This will provide researchers evidence regarding the size and type of bird passing by. The computer will provide a readout every 10 minutes as well as a total readout since the project began.

Interruption of the laser beam also triggers the shutter of a camera with a 1200 mm lense focused to record on black and white film any object passing through the beam. The unit is quite sensitive and could be triggered by falling leaves and other objects, but the film record will help to clarify this possibility.

Laser beam projection is positioned 45 feet above the water surface. The unit is manned part-time, but is capable of remote operation for periods up to seven days.

The laser beam poses no known threat to birds as they pass through the beam. It is a low-powered laser system similar to devices used in commercial telecommunications systems.

The beam, invisible to the human eye, will simulate the effects of a power line under the "worst of conditions" such as dense fog, which makes birds highly vulnerable to striking fixed objects.

"Weather does play an important part; under certain conditions and migration patterns, birds will fly lower and collide more often," Korschgen said. Korschgen pointed out that birds can and will strike power lines under ideal weather conditions. For whatever reason, birds can be distracted from their normal activities and behavior often with detrimental results.

Open water crossings in important flyways are of particular concern to biologists, but the data from the project will be applied to all flyway corridors and critical areas where power lines may be constructed. According to FWS officials, the technology and techniques learned from this project will allow biologists to get in on the "ground-floor" of powerline project planning to alleviate possible problems before they occur. Biologists are hopeful that they can monitor bird activity before, during and after construction and learn a great deal about the sensory perception of birds.

The four-year study will be a joint effort by the FWS, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) and Northern States Power Company (NSP).

NASA personnel from the Lewis research center in Cleveland, Ohio provided a wealth of technical assistance and guidance on the project according to FWS officials. NSP has provided money and equipment for the project. The laser beam apparatus is located on NSP propoerty at a site near Red Wing, Minnesota.

Attempting to monitor bird life and migratory patterns, trained observers previously recorded that they could see during daytime observations. However, night migrations, fog and human error impaired any reliable measure of flight patterns. The laser projections, when coupled with a computer to record results should provide concrete data according to Korschgen, "because the sophisticated apparatus to be used in this project is essentially impervious to weather and light conditions."

"We simply don't know at present why birds collide or avoid contact with power lines," Korschgen concluded. "We don't know whether they see them, hear them or sense some electromagnetic field. . . at present we can only speculate, but this project will put us a lot closer to knowing some of the answers."

Minnesota led the nation last year in the number of waterfowl hunters with 138,000.

Minnesota waterfowl hunters bagged 1.1 million ducks and nearly 20,000 geese during the 1978 season.

Hunting Equipment

Every hunter already knows what he needs for his particular trip, which might mean changing equipment depending upon the region being hunted.

Additional hunters to his party may necessitate adding walkie-talkie equipment. A walkie-talkie can become an important item. Hunters can easily stay in touch with each hunting party member and avoid becoming lost. When gunning a missing a target (bird or animal) you can notify others in the party to take advantage and look for the quary just ahead of them. In the event of sudden storms, a walkie-talkie can help save your lives.

Scopes

Adding a scope to your gun adds clearer and better magnification than with the naked eye. Because no one can actually focus on both front and rear iron sight plus the target at the same moment, the riflescope accuracy on target due to the crosshair aiming point and the target are in the same plane of vision one point on which to focus as an aiming point. The crosshair actually appears to be on the target.

Not only do you see clearly with a scope but you view the lower part of the target which is normally obscured by iron sights. Factor deciding correct scope for your particular rifle and for your own eyes should be carefully selected. The scope's field is rated at 100 yards. . . 100 yards being the standard comparative distance.

Basically, field of view is controlled by the diameter of the eyepiece and, the magnification. The normal position of the eye from the eyepiece (called eye relief) is also a factor.

Complete Hunt

Joe DeFalco is a successful hunter, guide, businessman and an author. He has written for numerous outdoors magazines and has lectured everywhere. He authored the book titled "The Complete Deer Hunt" and will accept letters and questions regarding hunting by writing Joe DeFalco, Box 37 Franklin Square, New York, New York 11010. Send a self addressed and stamped envelope.

His book is involved with "before the hunt", equipment needed, setting up the campsite a day ahead of time and whatever any huntsman needs to know about hunting, including the transporting of the deer, skinning of the deer and butchering (first hanging it up properly prior to skinning it out). Total procedure is explained with illustrations. Recipes for cooking the deer provides the ultimate from your successful hunting trip. The recipes are originals of Joe's.

Every hunter should know how to skin out and butcher his animal. We hope that you will read this easy instruction book. Joe DeFalco is a very famous guide, once having guided the late President Dwight D. Eisenhower. Joe has been kidded about being a latter day Davy Crocket by Frank Ketating, a sportswriter whose hunting columns appeared in the Long Island Press in New York.

Predators

What hunter would believe that the very future of his sport, and perhaps the survival of many of his favorite game birds, depends in a way upon the activities of predators? Those much maligned animals perform three real services which are believed to be indispensable. For one thing, they remove the unwary, the slow and stupid individuals. This guarantees that game will retain its qualities of strength and wildness which makes them real sporting animals in the first place. Predators also remove the diseased and the crippled very quickly.

Genetic Barrier

Frogs and salamanders have been 'cloned' with laboratory technics which have broken the genetic barrier. Considering the many experiments with livestock and artificial insemination, we knew it wouldn't be any time at all before scientiests would attempt to recreate life itself.

The thought of 'clones' is not so new. The graft-cutting from plants to replicate it. . . the navel orange was originally cloned from a mutant branch off a tree in Bahia, Brazil more than a hundred years ago.

Since then, a Nobel Prize-winning leader in his field announced in 1970 successess along the lines of discovery of the first artificial copy of an "Existing Gene." His name was Dr. Har Gobind Khorana. By 1976 they had constructed a gene of their own invention through their genetic engineering. It now appears everything is possible.

Since it is established fact that frogs and salamanders have been 'cloned' and new procedures discovered, perhaps it isn't astounding to consider that rare or almost extinct wildlife could be preserved in this manner through wildlife banks.

New laws would need to be provided by congress to maintain each specie to prevent it ebeing transmorgrified.

Eventually a world-wide congress must be formed to protect all living creatures from man's progress.

Super Bowl Super Stars

Don Chandler's 15 points are a single-game Super Bowl scoring record. He kicked four field goals (also a single-game record) and three extra points for Green Bay in 1968 when the Packers beat Oakland, 33-14, in Super Bowl II.

Pittsburgh's Franco Harris holds the single-game Super Bowl record for most carries (34) and most yards gained rushing (158). The records were set in Super Bowl IX in 1975 when the Steelers beat Minnesota, 16-6.

The single-game Super Bowl record for yards gained passing (318) is held by Pittsburgh's Terry Bradshaw. He completed 17 out of 30 passes, including four for touchdowns (also a single-game record) when the Steelers beat Dallas, 35-31, in Super Bowl XIII in 1979.

Kansas City's Jerrel Wilson holds the single-game Super Bowl record for the longest punt (61 yards) kicked in Super Bowl I during the "Chiefs' 35-10 loss to Green Bay. According to A-T-O Inc.'s Rawlings Sporting Goods Company, a punt has never been returned for a touchdown in any Super Bowl game played to date.

Ten Redheads Cost Hunters $300, Guns

Two duck hunters from Atwater paid fines totalling $300 and had their shotguns confiscated after they were convicted in a Willmar court for shooting 10 redhead ducks.

Regulations this year allowed the possession of only one redhead duck in the bag limit.

The two men — Patrick M. Walsh and Robert C. Starz — were arrested Oct. 6 on Hubbard lake in Kandiyohi county by a DNR conservation officer.

New Trails Unit Created Within DNR

A new "trails and waterways" unit has been established within the Department of Natural Resources it was announced by DNR commissioner Joseph Alexander.

At the same time, Alexander announced that Donald M. Carlson — a veteran employee with 32 years of service in the DNR — will head up the new section.

Carlson, who's most recent post was administrator of the department's seven county metro region, has served in many field and administrative positions in the DNR, including the post of assistant commissioner.

In his new position, he will serve as special assistant to the commissioner.

Alexander said Carlson will be responsible for planning, developing and maintaining the department's 10,000 miles of recreational trails, more than 1,000 public access sites, 18 designated boating and canoeing rivers, and the management of Minnesota's portion of the St. Croix scenic riverway.

Alexander said the new unit was created in response to the expanding use and growth of these recreational facilities and that Carlson was selected because of his wide and varied experience in the department.

Carlson said that establishment of the trails and waterways unit will enable the department to focus increased effort on the following programs:

+Abandoned railroad grades as a potential source of recreational trails;

+"Grants-in-aid trail program" which provides state financial assistance to local units of government to build and maintain trails;

+Acquisition of public access sites to lakes and streams;

+Designation and development of boating and canoeing routes;

+Intensified management of the St. Croix river;

+Attention to the concerns of landowners adjacent to proposed and established trails and to the problems of both users and non-users of recreational trails;

+Completion of the "statewide trail plan".

Carlson is a native of Aitkin county and presently resides in the city of White Bear Lake.

Transportation Of Endangered Species Eased

A marked increase in captive breeding of endangered species is the anticipated result of a new regulation issued by the Department of the Interior's U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. The rule eases federal regulation of interstate transfer of certain captive species covered by the endangered species act of 1973.

Action was prompted by evidence that stringent regulatory procedures have led to decreased breeding by zoological parks, bird breeders and others. Breeders have pointed out that tough federal restrictions — while intended to protect and propagate such species — have sometimes had the opposite effect. In some cases, persons who would otherwise breed endangered species have ceased to do so or have limited the number of offspring produced because they could not be readily transferred to other facilities.

Under the new regulation, a zoo, wildlife park, aquarium and other organizations or individuals can register with the Fish and Wildlife Service to become a licensed shipper and receiver of captive-born endangered species. After registration, reports will be required annually.

Wildlife affected by the regulation includes non-native U.S. endangered species and native U.S. endangered species that are sufficiently protected from unauthorized taking or are in low demand. The rule provides that native species will be designated on a case-by-case basis. One species, the Laysan teal, was designated in the rulemaking.

Formerly, breeders were required to obtain a federal permit before engaging in interstate commerce or exporting of captive-bred wildlife. This time-consuming process led to higher maintenance costs of animals awaiting shipment, increased difficulties in handling adult animals instead of young ones and unavailability of breeding stock when needed.

Fish and Wildlife Service determined that activities involving captive wildlife should be regulated as required by the endangered species act, but only to the extent necessary to conserve the species. According to service biologists, the new regulation should help reduce inbreeding — which has been cited as a factor in juvenile mortality — by facilitating exchange of animals. It is also hoped that the rule will reduce the demand for wildlife that might otherwise be taken from its natural habitat.

The service proposed the regulatory change on May 23, 1979, and received some 1,500 comments — nearly all favorable — from zoos, bird and mammal breeders, biomedical zoological, circus, and conservation organizations and federal and state governments.

Woody Hayes Featured On Clinic Staff

Woody Hayes, former Ohio State University coach, will be one of the featured speakers at the coach of the year football clinic to be held Feb. 15-17 at the Leamington Hotel in Minneapolis. Hayes had one of the top coaching records in America while coaching the Buckeyes to many Big Ten championships.

Lavelle Edwards of Brigham Young University will also be featured, along with Bill Yeoman of Houston. Edwards' BTU team has the top offensive record in the nation and the top passing offense in the nation. BYU is considered one of the top teams in the country.

Yeoman's Houston team is also top ranked. Yeoman is known for his inovative football and is given credit for developing the veer offense.

Bucky Nystrom of Northern Michigan University will also be on the clinic staff. Nystrom is known as one of the finest line coaches in the country.

Bud Wilkinson of the St. Louis Cardinals and Duffy Daughtery, former coach at Michigan State, are the clinic director. Both Wilkinson and Daugherty have been named coaches of the year.

Bob Roy of St. Louis Park high school is the clinic manager. Information on the clinic, which is open to coaches from all levels, can be obtained by contacting Roy. Rest of the staff will be named at a future date.

New Director Joins DU Work In Minnesota

According to Ducks Unlimited officials, William R. Allen, 39, has joined DU's staff of conservation professionals as a regional director responsible for the coordination of volunteer fund-raising events throughout southern Minnesota. DU regional director Richard Wettersten will continue to generate waterfowl conservation funds in northern Minnesota.

Before accepting the position with Ducks Unlimited, Allen served for two years as chief waterfowl biologist with the Illinois department of conservation. His previous wildlife employment includes work with Illinois' DOC as a district wildlife manager from 1971 to 1978, service as a waterfowl biologist with the Tennessee department of conservation from 1965 to 1971, and employment with the Indiana department of natural resources as a district wildlife biologist from 1964 to 1965.

"Minnesota has always been a key state to us in both dollars and members," said DU executive vice president Dale E. Whitesell, "and Allen's efforts in the sourthern part of the state will help push Minnesota's total 1979 contribution even closer to the million-dollar mark."

Whitesell pointed out that the funds channeled to DU by its Minnesota volunteers are critical to the waterfowl organization's race to restore waterfowl habitat in Canada where over 70 per cent of North America's ducks and geese are hatched.

In the seven seasons the American League has used the designated hitter, the Twins have led the league in hitting three times, finished second twice and finished fifth and sixth once each.

Durenberger Agrees With Carter On Iran

Senator Dave Durenberger states that he believes President Carter is doing all that is possible to secure the release of American hostages in Iran, and said he supports the way the president and his staff are dealing with what he called "an impossible situation."

"Right now we're faced with probably the most interesting challenge to the American people that we've seen in a long time — a challenge to their spirit of patriotism, to their ability to come together in a crisis. . and their ability to rally behind their president."

The Minnesota senator said he believes the president's decision to stop the import of 700,000 barrels of oil a day will have a minimal impact if everyone makes an effort to conserve.

"Everyone has got to start sharing the ride to work whenever possible, drive 55 miles per hour and do all of your weekly errands in one trip, not 10. It's those simple little things that the American people can do in a crisis, and I think they will."

Durenberger said this new spirit of independence and willingness to conserve energy will substantially strengthen America's foreign policy.

"We're going to send a message to a lot of the OPEC nations that the American people are going to learn to get along with a little less while they develop energy alternatives. For once we're going to have to stand for something and not get kicked around all over the world."

When asked if he thought Iranian students in the United States should be deported, Durenberger said each case should be decided on its own merits. "I don't think it's necessary to kick them out of this country," Durenberger said. "There's a value in being here to experience the American way of life. Besides our problems are not with the Iranian people, but with a government which violates elementary international law and human rights."

However, Durenberger said students who violate the terms of their visas should be deported.

The film examines life after death experiences and brings opinions by some of the world's most resepected Christian doctors, theologians and psychologists.

Thanksgiving Time To Recall Old Memories

was no more plowing to do, the men hauled manure.

"The money we got for working we spent on drinks or on anything we felt like having," he said. "We didn't need thousands of dollars to have a good time."

Anderson graduated from school in Sweden when he was 12, he said, and then he began working.

"We had to read for the preacher in confirmation classes when we graduated from school," he said.

"The teachers were hard on the kids at school," he said. "When we were bad she'd take us outside and lick us with a cane. A few of us got away one day when we were supposed to get hit. We never came back to school 'til the next day."

Anderson came to this country when he was 22. The boat trip, which lasted for seven days, cost $30. He first worked in Chicago for a street car company for $1.75 a day, he said. Hotel rooms were provided for $4 a week.

"The only bad part about it was, was that there were so blame many bed bugs," he said. "They'd drop down on you at night like flies.

"In the evenings we'd go out for lunch and have the best 25 cent steak ever," he said. (He claims it was even better than the goose eaten at the Thanksgiving dinner).

After working in Chicago for a period of time, Anderson traveled to Duluth to seek employment, and from there he took a ship to Canada to work on the railroad.

In 1960 Anderson went back to Sweden to visit, he said.

"I liked it in Sweden but I'm here now," he said. "My favorite place was the woods back in that country. The woods was my life."

"Time is going on . . . I'm 94 now, and working on 95," he added.

"My folks were the first settlers on the east side of the river (north of St. Hilaire) to take homestead," said Effie Johnson, 86, a resident of Oakland Park nursing home for only five months.

"They kept track of all the new settlers that came in."

Thanksgiving celebration lasted for one day, she said. Usually two or three families would get together for turkey, potatoes and cranberries picked a few days before.

"We had squash pies then," she said. "They were much better than pumpkin pies people have today.

"Mother would invite as many people as she thought she could handle," Effie said. "We'd invite old timers to talk about hardships. I'd laugh so hard at the doings sometimes."

One story she told was of an old Swede who made his own snuff and after dinner he would get his tiny bag out and sniffle it up his nose, and then pass it on to the next person to do the same.

"Oh, such a crowd of people we'd have," she said. "We had seven children in our family as it was."

Preparation for the Thanksgiving meal began the evening before the big day, she said. One dish common then was meat rolls made from the side of a pig. The meat was rolled in bread, spiced, salted and peppered, and then strings were tied around each roll before it was boiled.

"Dad would walk around the house all day during the celebration with a pipe in his mouth. There was no fire in it—just an empty pipe. Mama always told me never to say anything about it and I never did. My brother was always like a father to me, too. He took care of me all the time, when I was a baby and always told me I never let him get by without 'water on the knee'.

"People had a good time doing common things that folks don't do anymore," she said.

Elin Larson, 86, and a resident of Oakland park nursing home for two years, remembers vividly the poor people during the Thanksgiving holiday.

"My parents were not rich, but were well-to-do," she said. "There were eight children in our family—six girls and two boys. Yet, every Thanksgiving Mother would bake a box of goodies and Dad would carry the box, sometimes over two miles on foot, to deliver the food to the poor."

Elin's house was full of company every Thanksgiving day," she said. And that company included the poor—those who could make it for the dinner. The family would often walk to meet the poor who came for the occasion, she said.

"And mama would work so hard. We often said to her, 'Mama, why don't you have any help'? But she told us she never needed any."

Elin's family owned a 320 acre farm at that time—160 acres on each side of the highway. Her oldest sister and her husband (Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Ross) are still living. Elin has one daughter and two sons, all of whom live in Minneapolis.

The greatest secret ever told to Elin was when her husband came home one afternoon after a day's work.

"'Mama,' he said, (he called me 'mama' because his mother had died) I just sold my 40 cows'.

"We were all so happy then," she said. "I can't remember anything else about Thanksgiving. I just remember there were so many poor people. Our family was together. Oh, how I would like to see them just once more."

Number 13 is not always an unlucky number, according to Olava Sollom, 84, an Oakland park resident for one and one half years.

There were 13 children in her family, and they would all come for the Thanksgiving dinner along with their own children, and friends, she said.

"I was the eighth child—right in the middle."

The Thanksgiving dinner consisted of everything we, according to tradition, have today. There was turkey, pie, dressing and cranberries.

"We all helped prepare the dinner so it didn't take very long," she said. "We sometimes had to have two tables—a smaller one just for all the children."

After the dinner, everyone would sit around and tell stories; and play card games. One of her favorites was Old Maid.

Olava went to a country school near Newfolden until the eighth grade. She then moved to Thief River Falls where she graduated, and immediately afterward began teaching school. She was able to begin teaching at 17 then, after receiving a special certificate from the state department. During the summer she attended more school to advance in education, she said.

Olava taught approximately 45 students in her little country school building.

"I taught littler folks starting from six up to the eighth grade," she said.

During the Thanksgiving holiday in her school, the children would put on short programs, where they would sing and perform, and they would make designs and pictures to decorate the small building.

And, after 50 years of teaching, Olava still stated that she liked her job.

"It was nice teaching," she said.

The children were not all angels, she said, but she never punished them by keeping them after school.

"That would be punishing myself," she said. "I wanted my freedom."

Pay for the job consisted of $60 a month when Olava first began teaching.

"It wasn't much but we got along," she said. "People couldn't get very far on that today."

Teenage Pilot Flies Solo On 16th Birthday

day.

Individual ground school courses permit students to study on their own out of books since there is no class room at the Thief River Falls airport. Exams are given periodically, with a final written exam at the end of the course. Ground courses may be taken whenever the student desires — before, after or during the flying sessions. Students also have to complete a home study course before obtaining a private pilot's license, Swanson said.

Presently, Nikie has had no ground school course, but hopes to complete all her training so she may obtain her private license on her seventeenth birthday.

Northern Eagle Airways offers a discovery flight schedule with an instructor to interested students at $10 for 15 minutes of flying, Swanson. After that schedule, students take individual lessons to learn to fly.

Nikie had mixed feeling when first going up into the air by herself, she said.

"When I was alone I kept thinking, 'I can do it', and I knew once I was up there, I had to get down on the ground again."

"We never put people on solo flights until we are sure they are ready," Swanson said. "We are always sure they can handle the airplane."

"After the first landing I felt better," she said. "But during the second landing I bounced, and then I wasn't so sure."

Students fly during flight solos at a traffic pattern altitude of from 800 to 1,000 feet above the ground, Swanson said.

"When I turned 16, I was finally old enough to do something," Nikie said, smiling.

Nikie began flight training last September, practicing Fridays after school and Saturdays and Sundays, she said. The plane she flew for the solo was a Cessna 152 — a two-passenger plane.

After she acquired her private pilot's license, she plans to get her commercial license, she said. And she has even thought about becoming a stewardess some day.

A section of her T-shirt that accompanied her in her solo flight now rests with the other solo flight students' shirts in the Thief River Falls airport —an act performed according to tradition after students complete their flight solos.

Last winter Nikie tried down-hill skiing for the first time and enjoyed it, she said. She also enjoys snowmobiling.

"I'd love to try sky-diving too," she added. "No one believes me when I say these things, but I'm serious. And I'll do it someday."

Increase In Ag Valuation Ordered In Co.

amount of property taxes to be collected in the coming year. Instead, the increases may even reduce the amount of property taxes that need to be collected from certain property owners. Here is some background information on what the increases mean, and more important, do not mean.

By state law, assessors are required to appraise property at its market value — the amount it could sell for on the market today. Also, assessors must put each property into a class according to what it is used for. Under the law, each class is assigned a different percentage and the assessor multiplies the market value of each property by the percentage assigned to its class. The result is the assessed value of a property.

The assessed values of everyone's property are added together to determine the total assessed value. The percentage each person's assessed value makes up of the total assessed values is what determines the share he or she must pay of the total amount of property taxes that will be collected.

If an assessor's estimates of market value for one class of property are not as close to what the property could actually sell for compared to his or her estimates of market value for all other classes of properties, the result is this: The owners of the undervalued properties will pay less than their fair share, and the owners of all other properties will pay more than their fair share of the total property taxes to be collected.

It is a responsibility, by law, of the state board of equalization to make sure that properties in all classes are properly valued so that everyone pays a fair share of the total property taxes. If the board finds out — as it did in your county — that the estimates of market value for one class of property are not as close to what they sell for as the estimates of market value for all other classes of property are, it has to take steps to remedy the situation. And the remedy is to make percentage increases to the market value of the undervalued class of property.

So — the increases mean that the total amount of property taxes to be collected in the coming year will be spread out more fairly among owners of all classes of property in your county. It does not mean that the total amount of property taxes to be collected will change — that depends on the size of the budgets set for the coming year by local units of government.

Now, here is how owners of certain kinds of property will receive more help from the state in paying their tax bills as a result of the increases made to the market value of their property:

Farmers and cabin owners have part of their property tax bills paid for them by the state. The state's part shows up on the property tax bill as the state paid agricultural aid credit. The amount of credit each farmer or cabin owner is entitled to receive depends on the assessed value of the farm or cabin. So, the larger the assessed value of a farmer's or cabin owner's property, the bigger the amount of credit on the tax bill.

For farmers who live on the farm they own, the credit is determined like this: 15 mills multiplied by the amount of assessed value on the home, up to 240 acres of land. For cabin owners and farmers who do not live on the land they own; the credit is figured like this: 10 mills multiplied by the assessed value of buildings and land. The credits are subtracted from the tax bills of such property owners and paid by the state directly to the school districts the property is located in. Because of the percentage increase being made in your county and your neighboring counties, the total amount of the credit going to the taxpayers in these counties will go up by about $545,000.

This increased agricultural aid credit going to farmers and cabin owners does not mean that their property tax bills will be going down. The amount of property taxes all property owners in the community must pay for the coming year is now being determined by local governments — your town or city, your county and your school district — in your community. It's up to them to decide whether or not your property taxes go down through the budgets they set.

Also, it may interest you to know that in developing tax policy, the legislature has made the assumption that the assessor is doing his or her job — that is, valuing properties close to what they would sell for on today's market. If the assessor is doing his or her job properly, the result will be that the estimates of market values of certain classes of property — such as farms, homes and cabins — will be increasing more rapidly than the market values of other classes of property. Why? Because people in recent years have been paying much higher prices for farms, homes and cabins from one year to the next than they are paying for other classes of property.

This phenomenon causes a potential problem: The owners of those properties with rapidly increasing market values would end up paying a larger share of the total property taxes each year, and the owners of properties whose market values are not increasing so rapidly would pay a smaller share. The legislature has taken this situation into account in developing tax policy.

To reduce the shifts in shares each property owner pays of the total property taxes caused by uneven rises in the market values for various classes of property, the legislature has been lowering the percentages assigned each year to those classes of property whose market values has been rising rapidly. So, even though your assessor is appraising property at much higher market values each year, the assessed values on such properties are being held down because the assessor, by law, multiplies the market value by the lower percentages being assigned to the class of property each year.

Also, the legislature substantially increased the amount of the state paid homestead credit that homeowners are entitled to receive and raised the amount of farm acreage entitled to both the homestead credit and the state paid agricultural aid credit. All these law changes — and more — are aimed at reducing the impact of uneven increases in market values between classes of property.

October Milk Production Is 11-Year High

October milk production in Minnesota was the highest for that month in eleven years despite the fact that the number of milk cows on the production line last month was the lowest on records dating back to 1932, agriculture commissioner Mark Seetin reported this week.

Estimates by the Minnesota crop and livestock reporting service of the Minnesota department of agriculture put October milk production at over 75.8 million gallons. That was higher than a year ago by 116,300 gallons or one million pounds of milk.

Cows on the milk production line this October in Minnesota dropped to the 825,000 low of May through July of 1978. That was 15,000 fewer milk cows than were producing a year ago, and was lower by 131,000 cows than the 956,000 on the production line ten years ago that yielded nearly 2 million gallons less milk than Minnesota's present dairy herd.

Commissioner Seetin said that Minnesota dairy farmers are beginning to see the efficiency rewards of the several past years of intensive herd cullings and herd liquidations forced by both adverse milk prices and by the 1974 through 1976 unfavorable weather conditions.

October was the second straight month that average milk production per cow in Minnesota was higher than a year ago. This October the average Minnesota milk cow produced just short of 92 gallons of milk, up more than a gallon from last year, and 15 gallons more per cow than ten years ago.

The unofficially estimated farm value of Minnesota's milk production this year through October now stands at over $859 million, a substantial increase over the less than $743 million value of 1978 production during the same ten months.

Area Citizens Involved In Land Study

Donald Barron, soil conservation service; LeRoy Stumpf, area farmer; and Jack Quinlivan, city planner, along with approximately 80 other people from Minnesota, North and South Dakota and Nebraska participated recently in the national agricultural land study workshop in Moorhead.

This was one of 17 such workshops being held throughout the United States to obtain the views of a wide range of citizens on the future quantity and quality of agricultural land available for food and fiber production. A report will be compiled from all the workshops and given to the President early in 1981 recommending his action.

Decisions about agricultural land eventually touch all people and that is why the people participating in the workshop represented a broad background of experiences. There were farmers, bankers, real estate, business, planners, conservationists, government officials and many others.

Many participants voiced their ideas about agricultural land being the most valuable resource the U.S. has.

Hundreds of ideas, concerns and solutions were collected from everyone and at the final session the delegates ranked 39 proposals in order of importance, but the result of the complicated voting procedure will not be completed for several months.

One discussion that gathered much interest was centered on the family farm. Almost everyone agreed the family farm, large and small, is the center of our agricultural production and vital to our rural economy.

The sponsoring agencies of the workshop are the U.S. departments of agriculture, housing and urban development, interior, transportation, commerce, treasury, defense and energy and the council on environmental quality, environmental protection agency and water resource council.

Congressman Gives Support To Import Act

Beef cattle producers received a vote of confidence Wednesday as the House of Representativs voted in support of the meat import act of 1979 and the countercyclical meat import formula it establishes.

Congressman Arlan Stangeland, a cosponsor of the bill, says "This legislation will act to provide a stable market for beef producers, while at the same time encouraging greater planning for increased herd production and eliminating the threat of low market prices caused by unpredictable beef supplies. Consumers will also be provided with an adequate supply of beef at stable prices. Failure to pass this legislation would have created long range implications which would be difficult to overcome."

Purpose of the meat import act of 1979 is to reverse the procyclical formula and bring economic order to the beef production industry. "Government interference," Stangeland said, "was the primary cause of problems faced by this nation's beef industry."

The agriculture department predicted, in the late 1960's, that beef supplies would be low for consumer consumption and, as a result, production was increased. While production was in full-swing wage and price controls were implemented and, upon their removal, beef rose substantially in a very short time. Consumers reacted by boycotting beef at a time when consumption was increasing and many beef producers were not able to market their herds.

"This counter cyclical formula will help protect the consuming public in times of low beef production in the United States by allowing greater meat imports when the domestic supplies are low and consumer prices are high. It will not allow high import levels when domestic production is also high. I feel confident that this legislation will help moderate prices during times of low production, therefore insuring an adequate supply of beef and providing protection for the beef industry," Stangeland concluded.

55 MPH Limit Supported By Most Truckers

There's been high vocal disagreement, but the fact is most truckers support the 55 mph speed limit.

"Although recent focus in Minnesota has been on truckers who resent the 55 mph speed limit, the Minnesota motor transport association and its members continue to support it in concept and in fact," says James Denn, president of the MMTA, which represents over 300 motor carriers and their suppliers.

"MMTA members back the 55 mph speed limit for three important reasons: First, it saves lives. Second, it's the law and our members feel strongly that as major users of our highways, it is up to us to set an example by voluntarily complying with the speed limit. Third, operating at the 55 mph speed limit does save money as a result of better fuel consumption, longer tire wear, improved engine life and reduced driver strain."

While no one denies that 55 mph saves lives, the controversy between truckers has been one of economics, and some feel that their rigs run more efficiently at speeds higher than the legal limit. U.S. department of transportation tests driven by independent truckers in Ohio last year showed that 26 of 52 trucks got up to 27 per cent better mileage at 55 than at higher speeds. Continental Trailways bus company has saved so much on fuel and maintenance by operating at 55 mph that it has installed governors on its buses to set driving limits at 55 mph. And Continental oil company's 200 trucks have, increased their gas mileage by 25 per cent by complying strictly with the 55 mph speed limit.

In voicing support for the Minnesota safety council's "55 Makes Sense" campaign to encourage voluntary compliance with the 55 mph speed limit, Denn states, "The facts are that 55 means safer roads and more fuel for everyone to use."

For information on how driving 55 mph can save money and maybe your life, write the Minnesota safety council at 145 Hamm building, St. Paul, Minnesota 55102.

Dairy Industry In State 2nd To Wisconsin

Minnesota's dairy manufacturing industry continued to increase its output of American cheese and to reduce butter production during the first three quarters of 1979 and the changes in September were among the sharpest in the past year, reports agriculture commissioner Mark Seetin.

September American cheese manufacture was estimated at 30 million pounds and that was 19 per cent more than the output for that month in 1978.

Minnesota's September butter production dropped to only 9.8 million pounds, a 53 year low for any single month and a 14 per cent drop from a year ago.

But, Minnesota continues to be the nation's second leading dairy products manufacturing state, behind only neighboring Wisconsin.

During the first nine months this year Minnesota's dairy processing plants have manufactured an estimated 313.9 million pounds of American cheeses and over 124.2 million pounds of butter.

Those volumes related to national estimates of average per capita consumption indicate that Minnesota is supplying almost 36 million butter consumers and 24 million cheese consumers.

Minnesota's cheese production this January through September was greater than the same period last year by over 31.7 million pounds, while butter manufacture this year was lower than in 1978 by nearly 11.8 million pounds.

Compared to national cheese and butter manufacture for the first nine months of 1979, Minnesota's totals represented almost 19 per cent of the cheese and nearly 17 per cent of the butter of domestic origin.

In Loving Memory

Children's laughter, grownups chatter
'Tis that season here once more.
But our household's missing member
Walks beyond the Golden Shore—
Though our table will be empty
With that certain "someone's" smile
We will feel his ever presence, ever with us; All the while!
Yes! We know our son is happy,
And no longer bears his pain—
Our hearts will give Thanksgiving
When we're with him once again!
So give thanks, you eager people
Whether blessings, large or small,
'Cause we know not when our Master,
Our dear loved ones He will call!

In loving memory of our dearest son and brother, Monti, who passed away May 24, 1965.

Sadly missed by his dad and mom, Bennie and DeLores Miramontes, sisters: DaniLe, Monica and Anita and brothers: Vince and Paul.

All memoriams for Monti are originals by Dolly and are not to be reprinted without her permission. 1192c

COUNTY BOARD PROCEEDINGS

November 21, 1979
Official Proceedings
Board of County Commissioners
Pennington County, Minnesota
November 6, 1979

Pursuant to adjournment the County Board met in the Commissioner's Room in the Courthouse in Thief River Falls at 10:00 A.M., Nov. 6, 1979.

Members: Grabanski, Koop, Stenberg and Tasa. Members absent: Hoffman

Vice-Chairman Tasa called the meeting to order in the absence of the Chairman.

Herman Kjos, Jr. appeared and protested the condition of County Road 13 as it runs along Sec. 5 in Sanders Township. It was indicated that Contractor Thygeson was hauling gravel on this road and he is not maintaining it. The County grader cannot spend all of the time on this road and the extremely heavy truck traffic makes the road next to impassible. It was determined that some method of forcing someone that is using a stretch of road to the extent that it is ruining the road should be required to maintain the road.

Mr. Kjos also mentioned that a part of the road is not being plowed by the snowplow on the first trip out because of the plow taking a shorter route to the north end of his run and while the north route should be opened early it leaves a bus route unplowed. The Engineer was apprised of the problem.

Engineer Olson announced that Ronald Tollefson the Motor Grader Operator for this area had tendered his letter of resignation to go into retirement after 20 years of working on the grader. The Board indicated appreciation for the 20 years of service and instructed the Engineer to advertise for replacement.

Vice-Chairman Tasa announced the meeting convened to conduct a Public Hearing on the Revenue Sharing Allocation for the 11th Entitlement Period that ends Sept. 30, 1980, and upon the total County Budget. It was indicated that the hearing would be held open throughout the day to allow any Public imput that may be presented.

Alex Easton of the Junior College and Ken Murphy representing the Oakland Dormitory appeared with a problem that the Dormitory Board is having with the operation of the Dormitory which is located in the old Oakland Park Nursing Home. The building has inadequate insulation, the heating system is not designed to heat a dormitory and the equipment is antiquated. The doors and windows are not energy efficient.

The County Board was asked if they has a plan for the future of the building. The monthly cost of fuel oil for the Dormitory may force the Dormitory Board to close the building at the end of the semester and the County Board was asked to think about the problem. It appears that there are no funds available to the County for remodeling a facility of this kind and with the County owning it the Schools that may be able to qualify for some Federal Aid cannot apply for Aid to someone elses building. And the fact that the building is old and the feasibility of spending a great deal of money on such a building is a real question. The Board agreed to think about it.

Landowners in the south central part of the County with property in the area charged with maintenance of the County Ditch known as Ditch 21 appeared before the Board with questions relating to the filing of a recent Lien to pay for the cost of the repairs of said ditch. The Auditor reviewed the problems that had arisen by the fact that some landowners originally assessed for benefits to the ditch had petitioned the Court in 1949 for relief from the assessments and a Court Order had been drawn moving some of the area from the 'benefited' area of the ditch. A copy of the Court Order was not found in the Auditor's Office and some difficulty had been experienced in getting the proper Lien filed. The Board indicated that the Lien would have to stand as finally filed but that a recent State Law prescribed a procedure for reviewing the area completely to provide for a proper and equal participation in the benefits of the ditch. The Board asked that a petition be filed by Landowners to give the Board direction.

Doug Dehnert the owner of land on the East end of the proposed bridge at the south edge of St. Hilaire appeared with a request that the County Board reconsider their approval of the placement of the bridge. Mr. Dehnert restated the various limiting factors that he had enumerated previously in public hearing and before the County Board. Additional objection was voiced about the traffic pattern that exists and voiced the opinion that with the bridge in place the people will still not use the road because of its position in the area.

Objection was presented in that such an expenditure of funds should only apply to an area where some plans were in existence for expansion, and none exist for either side of the river at this time. Objected also to routing any additional traffic past the St. Hilaire City Park, and finally believes that a bridge with center piers will cause ice jams in the spring of the year and cause flooding.

Mrs. Dehnert feels that another site could be found and should be found to better use the large amount of money that is to spent, and also believes that sentiment in St. Hilaire is not all that great for the placement of the bridge. He closed with a re-statement of his request that the Board reconsider their action in approving the bridge, and try to relocate the bridge at a better site.

The Board proceeded to other matters but came back to this proposal later in the day and determined that the board would take no action at this time.

Norm Cruse, representing the Chamber of Commerce appeared with a presentation relative to the feasibility of and the possibility of use of the old Lincoln High School if the School Board determines to build a new school at another site. The type of Auditorium that does exist in the Lincoln School will probably never be built again and it does have a valuable function in Community Affairs. The Gymnasium is the same way. A task force from the Community is being formed to study the matter and the Board was asked to appoint a Commissioner to that group. Moved by Stenberg seconded by Koop that Commissioner Grabanski represent the County on the Committee. Carried.

Mary Enerson and Fr. Bernauer representing the Pennington County Historical Society then presented a budget to the Board for 1980 and a request for an increase of the County subsidy to cover their anticipated maintenance costs of $7,000. The matter was taken under advisement to be discussed when the Board finalized the Revenue Sharing at the close of the Public Hearing.

Carlus Espelo and Larry Burzinski, representing the Dept. of Welfare, State of Minnesota, Chemical Dependency Programs Division appeared and asked questions of the Board relating to the area of Chemical Dependency in the County. Welfare Director Gary Erickson joined the group to add his experience in the administration of whatever has been done and is planned. It was indicated that the County through the Welfare Department is presently in the business of hiring an Alcohol Counselor. The Inter-County Community Council of Oklee had filed a request for a Grant to implement a program through their organization. Federal Formula money is available from the State and the best way of spending it is the thought behind the question and answer session of the group. No action.

Moved by Stenberg seconded by Koop that the Road Committee and the Bridges and Culvert Committee inspect roads, bridges and culverts at 9:00 A.M., Nov. 29, 1979. Motion carried.

A Plat was presented in behalf of Don Magner covering 7.5 Acres in Rocksbury Township along the West side of the river and the Plat was approved. A preliminary Plat having been presented earlier.

Harry Oen presented a proposed Plat of property entitled Harry Oen's Riverbend Second Addition which includes 17 Acres in Govt. Lots 7 and 10 in Sec. 3 in Rocksbury Township. Objections were presented because although the new Plat is in the vicinity of two other Plats some intervening land is still not Platted. After assurance that the unplatted intervening land owned by Harry Oen would be included in the revision being planned of Harry Oen's Riverbend First addn. the preliminary Plat was approved.

The Board then proceeded to conclude the Public Hearing relating to the Allocation of Revenue Sharing Funds to be received during the period Oct. 1, 1979 and Sept. 30, 1980 referred to as the 11th Entitlement Period.

The published allocation was reviewed and it was moved by Stenberg seconded by Koop that all unallocated interest that has been earned by the unspent funds should be reallocated to increase the Social Services allocation to $6,000.00 from the amount previously set aside for Historical purposes in the amount of $3,500.000 and any other unallocated interest in excess of the amount needed for the $6,000.00 shall be allocated to the fund to be used to update the Courthouse to make it barrier free and further that an allocation unspent from the 1977 budget for Health be reallocated to the Barrier Free Fund officially known as Multi-purpose and Gen'l. Govt. Motion declared unanimously carried.

Motion by Grabanski seconded by Stenberg that the Public Hearing for review of Revenue Sharing and of the total County Budget be closed and the Allocations for Revenue Sharing be approved as revised and the total County Budget be adopted as presented. Motion unanimously carried.

The following bills were read, audited and allowed.

Home Is Where Dessert Is

What better way to capture the flavor and goodness of the season's fresh apple crop! A combination of Jell-O butterscotch flavor pudding and pie filling, sliced apples and a crunchy topping of 40% bran flakes, Apple Crisp provides a hearty, nourishing dessert. Serve it warm or cold for all-family appeal.

APPLE CRISP

4 medium apples, peeled, cored and sliced (4 cups)
1 package (4-serving size) butterscotch flavor pudding and pie filling
1/4 cup butter or margarine
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
1-1/2 cups 40% bran flakes

Combine apple slices and half the pudding mix in greased shallow baking dish. Cream butter with remaining pudding mix and cinnamon; add cereal. Sprinkle over apple mixture. Cover and bake at 375° for 30 minutes, or until apples are tender. Serve warm or chilled. Makes 8 servings.

Estimate 2 Million To Have Diabetes

Not everyone who has diabetes knows it. In fact, estimates indicate there may be two million unknown diabetics in this country.

Why? Because diabetes is a "sneaky disease," particularly in adults, says RN. Sheila Ryan, a diabetes educator at a St. Paul hospital. The onset of diabetes in adults often occurs over a long period of time. The symptoms aren't always obvious and in some cases are non-existent. In addition, conditions that signal diabetes can also be indications of other problems.

"Persons can go for some time feeling fatigued and generally unwell and not suspect diabetes," Ryan said. "They blame their condition on overwork or medications they are taking."

Diabetes is a disease that prevents your body from properly using the sugars and starches you eat. When you have diabetes, your body can't make enough effective insulin. Without effective insulin your cells can't use the glucose (sugar) in your blood.

When that happens, Ryan explained, the cells burn fats and proteins for energy. As a result, you lose weight, feel weak and tired, are always hungry and thirsty and urinate more than normal. Other symtoms may include itchy skin, blurry eyesight, skin infections, aching or numbness in the fingers or toes.

Symptoms occur when the kidneys pull sugar from the blood and pass it into the urine, Ryan said. It's also possible to have no symptoms if the blood sugar is above normal, but not high enough for the kidneys to produce the "spilling" effect.

Anyone can get diabetes at any time, Ryan said, but it is found most often among the elderly, obese or relatives of known diabetics. The disease is 10 times more frequent after the age of 45. In persons over 65, more women than men become diabetic.

Juvenile diabetes accounts for five per cent of the diabetic population. It is usually acquired during childhood or youth and is more severe than the adult king. Its onset is often sudden and the disease can be difficult to control.

At this time no one knows what causes diabetes. It is known, however, that obesity, pregnancy, infections, injuries, operations or emotional upsets can trigger its onset. It is not caused by eating too much sugar.

"The best prevention is to maintain normal weight, eat regular well-balanced meals and exercise regularly," Ryan said. "If you don't feel well over a period of time or have a persistent infection, consult your physician."

Because no one is immune and early detection improves the chances for good control, it is a good idea to be tested yearly for diabetes. Your physician can test you anytime you can take advantage of public screening programs available in most communities, especially during November, National Diabetes month.

Commonly called the "finger-prick test," these simple blood tests effectively single out persons who probably have diabetes. The person is then referred to a physician who conducts follow-up tests to determine the presence of diabetes and its severity.

Although diabetes can't be cured, it can be controlled through regulated diet and exercise, with or without medication. Not all diabetics require medication — medicines taken by mouth or injection but all diabetics must control their diet and balance their activity with it.

Many diabetics live normal, fulfilling lives, Ryan said. "Because they lead well-regulated lives with a proper balance of good food, exercise and rest plus regular contact with a physician, they are among the healthiest people I know."

History Day Competition Slated At MSU

Moorhead state university will host the Northwestern Minnesota district competition next spring for national history day, a contest for sixth through 12th grade students designed to encourage their appreciation for history.

This is the first year Minnesota has been organized for district and state competition in history day, modeled on the successful national science fair event.

District history day competition at Moorhead state will include students living in the counties of Kittson, Roseau, Marshall, Pennington, Red Lake, Polk, Norman, Mahnomen, Clay, Becker, Wilkin, Traverse, Otter Tail, Grant and Douglas.

Students can start preparing papers, projects or performances now for the Saturday, April 12 competition at Moorhead state. This year's contest theme is "The Individual in History."

Does the individual make history, or does history shape the individual? "Scholars don't agree," says Dr. Ken Smemo, professor of history at Moorhead state and district chairman of history day competition. "We'd like to see how students feel."

To enter the contest, Smemo said, Students should select and investigate an individual who played a role in the history of their family, community, the state, nation or world. That individual may be well-known — a king, writer, business or religious leader; or not so well-known, like someone from your family or community. How they affected or were affected by events in history should be the focus of the competition.

Students may write a paper — 1,000 to 2,500 words (poetry, diaries or fictional accounts are acceptable if based on historic fact); design a project, which may include maps, charts, models or photographs; or create a performance — a play, film, slide-tape show or other kind of presentation limited to 10 minutes.

Details for the history day contest are available from 240 history teachers in the 14-county district of northwestern Minnesota or from Professor Smemo at (218) 236-2812.

Winners of the district competition at Moorhead state will advance to the state contest May 3 at the university of Minnesota. The national event is set for May 29-31 at Georgetown university, Washington, D.C.

The Moorhead state history department and the northwest Minnesota historical center will sponsor the district competition. The historical center is an adjunct of the university's history department and a branch of the Minnesota historical society. Its archives contain hundreds of documents, manuscripts, letters, business papers and recorded oral histories preserved as part of the Red River valley heritage.

Only Half The Story

Staff writer Ole Peterson of the Land O'Lakes Mirror commented in a recent article on a deceptive demonstration which had come to his attention. He points out that what is needed is greater cooperation rather than a divisive attitude. The point is well made and the column is as follows:

Some public speakers are using an immensely effective demonstration these days to dramatize the cost-price spread in foods and the small profit involved. It works like this:

The speaker steps to center stage with a loaf of bread in hand, saying that each slice represents a portion of the cost that went into the baking and selling of the entire loaf. Then he removes three slices and says this is what the farmer gets for raising the wheat. Other slices are quickly removed to represent handling, transportation and milling costs.

With wheat now milled into flour which has been shipped to the bakery, about half a loaf still remains. One-by-one the speaker peels off the remaining slices, saying they represent the cost of other ingredients, baking, wrapping, utilities, store rent, shelf stocking and all the other many costs associated with producing and displaying the finished loaf.

Eventually, only the heel remains, and this represents the retailer's profit. Then, in sonorous tones, he reminds the audience that the farmer took three slices of bread off the top and the retailer was left with only the heel.

The drama makes its point. But it is only one act of what should be a two act play, and thereby the farmer emerges as the unscrupulous Fagin and the retailer as poor, little Nell.

In Act II, which the audience never sees, the farmer's three slices are represented by the cost of land, machinery, borrowed money, seed, fertilizer, fuel, labor, storage, taxes, and many other overhead items.

If insects, disease, hail, drought or floods don't get the crop first, the farmer's three slices are sometimes diminished to a mere crumb. The crumb, of course, is better than nothing, but its infinitesimally small along side what Act I portrays as the retailer's insignificant heel.

I don't know any Land O'Lakes farmers who begrudge anybody making a fair profit, least of all their friends and "partners" in the food industry, the grocers who sell their products. And I don't think any of them consider "the heel" as excessive profit. Most of these farmers, I'm sure, would say it's far too little.

It is disheatening, however, to learn that some retailers are leaving some facts untold in order to emphasize their modest returns. After all, there's enough confusion among consumers as to who's responsible for today's higher food costs. For one segment of the food industry to infer that another is the villian serves no constructive purpose that I can see.

Savings And Productivity

Following editorial is from the Morris Tribune:

The current inflation rate in this country is at least 13 per cent, but the maximum legal rate of interest which a bank or savings institution can pay on a savings account is just over ten per cent. Thus, even with a savings certificate that pays the highest interest the government will allow, the individual is losing purchasing power by putting money in savings.

As such, it is not surprising that more and more small investors are taking their money out of savings and either spending it or investing it in everything from gold and silver to antiques, stamps, or rare coins. All of this only adds to the inflationary cycle, as people rush to exchange money for things which are thought to have more stable and demonstrable value.

Furthermore, the lack of personal savings decreases the amount of capital which is available for investment and job creation. Americans now save only five per cent of their disposable income, compared with eight per cent earlier in this decade.

By contrast, West Germans save fourteen per cent of disposable income; thus German banks have plenty of funds to finance business investment and expansion. This enables German firms to update equipment and acquire the necessary technology to increase the output of goods per man-hour.

Productivity is rising five times faster in West Germany than in the United States, and this explains how the West German economy can outpace the United States and still hold inflation at four per cent a year.

Yet the United States government persists in maintaining stringent interest rate ceilings, and adds insult to injury by taxing savings account interest "income," even though the saver has no real gain on his investment. In comparision, the West German government offers a cash bonus of up to $100 a year to savers, and the French government provides for generous tax breaks on savings account interest.

The United States Congress should increase the appeal of savings accounts for the small investor by making interest on the first $4,000 of savings exempt from the income tax. The benefits from such a measure would far outweigh the small loss of tax revenue. And it may be necessary to raise or eliminate the ceiling on savings account interest rates in order to encourage the capital formation which is so essential for American economic progress

Military Overrun

Folowing comments were written by William Flannery of the Center for Defense Information:

Suppose a large private company—and one without a union at that—offered a retirement plan that allowed any of its workers to retire after 20 years of service at half pay. And suppose the company did not require that the workers pay anything into the retirement program.

You can be certain the company's program would generate a lot of loyal employees, but it would also set off a stockholder's revolt and the company's board of directors would not be in their chairs very long.

But that is the exact situation the U.S. is facing with the present military retirement program.

The current military retirement system is about 30 years old and is credited with being one of the major inducements for making the military a profession. As it is presently set up, an officer or enlisted man can retire at half pay after 20 years. If they wait until after 30 years, they receive ¾ pay.

In the early 1950s, the program did not cost that much, since the number of military retirees was rairly small. But starting about 10 to 15 years ago, with the large scale retirement of World War II veterans, cost began to rise sharply. Today, this program is costing the American taxpayer $10 billion a year. If the present program is not reformed, the military retirement cost, assuming very low price and wage growths, will, according to the Congressional Budget Office, reach $37 billion a year by the year 2000.

Now the American people—and their government have a moral duty to support those disabled veterans who fought in this country's wars, but only about 20 per cent of the retirement money is going to disabled vets and their families.

The remaining 80 per cent is going to those military personnel who put in their 20 or 30 years, then retired. The average 20 year retirement age of an enlisted man is 39, for an officer it is the mid-40s. In both cases, retirees can start a second full time career, with two pay checks.

The Carter administration, seeing the danger of runaway costs, has put forth a retirement reform under which the present system is replaced by cash payments after ten years of service and delaying the half pay retirement benefits until the age of 60. It is an attempt at reform, but it will not offer any real savings until 2010, since those currently serving are "grandfathered" in under the old system.

Politically this is a very difficult issue and making major cuts in retirement benefits will have a serious effect on getting enough people to serve in the military. But changes have to be made.

One change would be to require higher ranking officers and enlisted men to pay in a certain amount to a retirement fund, not unlike the seven per cent a year required by civilian government workers. Another change would be to differentiate between combat and non-combat personnel. Retirement benefits should be more liberal for those who spend their 20 years as combat infantrymen or as fighter pilots as opposed to supply officers who spend their time manning computers in the U.S. This latter reform could be adjusted on the basis of time spent in combat and non-combat jobs.

Military retirement reform will not come quickly, but it must come. Military retirement costs are growing at $1 billion a year, and are cutting into funds which could be used for the defense of the United States.

HOW TO BUY AN ELECTRIC BLANKET

As the cold winds of winter approach, Americans are looking for ways to keep warm at night while "dialing down" home thermostats to save on energy.

The "cheap heat" of an electric blanket is the ideal way to help everyone conserve, comfortably. An electric blanket costs only four cents a night to operate, and when the blanket is used in combination with a ten-degree thermostat reduction, a household can save an average of 28 percent on home heating bills.

When selecting an electric blanket, there are several points to keep in mind, according to Northern Electric Company, the world's largest manufacturer of electric blankets.

• Know exactly what type of blanket you're buying and be sure to read the packaging carefully. Look for automatic blankets which carry a U.L. (Underwriters Laboratories) Seal which means that samples have been tested and approved. All good blankets carry this seal.

• Electric blankets are produced in a variety of fabrics and fabric combinations. The most popular fabrics, in order of quality and cost, are: 100 percent Acrilan®; 100 percent Polyester; 100 percent Acrylic; 50 percent Polyester - 50 percent Acrylic; 80 percent Polyester - 20 percent Acrylic.

• Electric blankets are available in standard sizes: twin, full, queen and king.

• Look for controls that feature large, illuminated numbers that are easy to read in the dark, and ones with a separate on and off switch as well as an indicator light.

• If you're an extremely light sleeper or sensitive to heat changes, consider an electric blanket with solid state controls. Their silent operation eliminates the on and off "clicking" sound.

• When two people sleep in the same bed, consider the advantages of dual controls which allow both people to select and maintain the level of warmth they desire on their side of the bed.

• Always check the manufacturer's warranty. Look for blankets with warranties ranging from two to five years.

• If you prefer your blanket fitted at the foot of the bed, look for an electric blanket that has bottom snap closings; the blanket stays in place and makes bed-making easy.

• Look for electric blankets which offer convenient hangers that allow the control to be hung on the bed frame or side board.

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

The matter of the complicated negotiations between the teachers of School District 564 and the board of that district has recently been in the news. It would seem that the complications have arisen because the board has seen fit to abdicate their responsibility to negotiate with the teachers and hire a lawyer from St. Paul for that purpose. Now they would further abdicate that responsibility by authorizing their negotiators to ask for arbitration, complicating matters with an addition of another third party.

Surely as elected representatives of this community, the responsibility for negotiations belongs to them and I would ask that they exercise it.

The teachers of the district are not asking for an excessive settlement, in fact, it does not cover a cost of living increase. Nor does it bring salaries to a comparable between Thief River Falls and other communities in our area.

This should not be a difficult matter to settle, nor should it require so much time. I trust that this board wishes to deal fairly with them employees and in view of past settlements, this increase seems justified. The teachers are now working without a contract and I feel this matter should be settled between the board itself and the teachers as soon as possible.

Teachers are the most important factor in a classroom. When you consider the responsibility we as parents share with them in eudcating our children, it seems inconceivable that we are not willing to pay them a salary commensurate with the responsibility we are giving them.

Sincerely,
s-Jacqueline Schwietz,

I was very disappointed to see the high-lighted coverage the Texas Cowgirls received in recent issues of the Times. I can't help but wonder why I had to search for our Lincoln high school Queen and her attendants a month earlier, and why our local youth programs don't receive the same front page glamour accorded these paid female "entertainers."

Some Simple Arithmetic Could Mean a Healthy Change

How does our country's present income tax structure affect a waitress in Bloomington? A shoe store owner in Wadena? A fledgling tool and die company in St. Paul? A farmer in Winnebago County? Our economy as a whole?

Not well, you may well say.

These were the kinds of questions I addressed recently on the floor of the Senate as we debated desirable economic directions for the United States in the 80's. The debate came on the 50th anniversary of "Black Tuesday," the beginning of the stock market crash—we sought to apply lessons from the past to routes for the future.

I believe one of the most significant lessons can be learned from income tax legislation and what it has done to this country and our people.

Specifically, looking at six, so-called "tax reform" laws of the last decade, we learn that—through tax credits, exemptions, deductions, revisions, rebates and refunds contained in those "reforms — about $75 billion has been left in the hands of the private sector instead of going into government coffers.

These credits, deductions, and all the rest, of course, are known more informally as loopholes.

I suggest that instead of all these loopholes, we instead leave that same amount of money in the private sector by simply reducing income tax rates across the board.

Why? First of all, by eliminating the loopholes, my method means that rates for personal taxes would lower from the present range of 14-70 per cent to one of 10-53 per cent. Corporate rates would then range from 15¼ per cent to 42 per cent instead of 17 per cent to 46 per cent.

Second, a general rate decrease would be much fairer and more helpful to those in the lower income brackets. These are the people not often eligible for all the special deductions and exemptions. They find themselves left out in the cold. My proposal, with rates lowered for all brackets, would include them in the benefits.

Finally, and very important, the economic base built in this country has been founded in large part on incentives—incentives to produce, to work hard, to build up one's business and hence provide more jobs, to achieve and be better able to provide for one's family.

When these incentives are reduced, and they certainly are when the tax load takes away more and more of one's take home pay or reward for doing business, productivity falls. People find less reason for working hard, for advancing. Businesses have less to spend on investment in new and more efficient equipment. Money for research and development is not available in sufficient quantities.

My plan returns these incentives far more effectively than does the present complex arrangement of loopholes. For, a general rate decrease spreads incentive to all segments of the population and the business world rather than to limited categories.

Also, a rate decrease would be something on which people could count and make plans. It means money in their hands. In contrast, rebates and credits and all those kinds of arrangements are "iffy" at best . . . maybe you'll be one of those judged eligible for an exemption but maybe you won't . . . and maybe the exemption won't come at all. It's hard to plan for that kind of thing. It's much easier to plan ahead when the rate is lower and you know you'll have more money available.

If our nation's present decline in productivity is to be reversed, we must start now to return incentives through the tax system.

We saw this happen with President Kennedy's tax action in his administration. Rates were lowered, yet actual revenues rose as productivity increased and vitality again became a feature of the nation's economy.

This is surely one of the most important lessons to be learned from the years since the Great Depression.

Making Family Life More Fun

Are You Playing Games?

There's a man in Santa Barbara, California, who has a rather novel response to the energy problem—he plays games. And not just anybody's games; they're all his own.

Ken Kolsbun, along with his wife, Jann, is the owner and inventor of the Animal Town Game Company which specializes in board-games about "cooperation, self-sufficiency, conservation and Old Mother Nature." And he thinks the rising cost of gasoline and shrinking fuel dollars have given people a perfect opportunity to rediscover the fun of doing things together at home as a family.

"Just like they used to 30 years ago," Ken says. "You know, until this fuel shortage hit, parents and kids had pretty much gotten into the habit of scattering to their own individual activities. A poll done last year found that fathers, on the average, spent less than 7-1/2 minutes alone with their sons each week!

"Now, with people watching their gas supply there's a chance for families to get together again. And playing games—particularly cooperative games—can serve as a real bridge between parents and children."

An unexpected boost for Animal Town Game Company this year came from Duraflame, Inc., a firelog manufacturer in Oakland, California. For the past four years Duraflame has sponsored a national media tour for an individual or small company that encourages family-shared activities.

"It was an interesting connection," says Jann. "A fireplace is such a natural setting for game-playing. We found out when we decided to do the tour that they'd kind of been keeping an eye on us for about three years."

For people interested in developing their own game libraries the Kolsbuns offer the following tips.

Be more selective when buying games and toys. Purchase realistic games that deal with cooperation, Mother Nature, the arts and sciences—games that promote peace and harmony, require creative thinking and spark the imagination. And ask your local game store to stock them.

Read newspaper and magazine reviews of games just as you now look at reviews of books, movies and TV shows. Encourage school teachers, principals and school boards to include regular periods for creating games in student curricula.

Throw a "game party" and have everyone bring a favorite game to share. Make your own games or purchase do-it-yourself ones.

To help you plan such a party Duraflame has developed a fireside package that includes a fire safety game, Master Sweep, and coloring poster and a 12-page booklet of additional games, fire-building tips and more.

To order the kit send $1.00 with your name and address to "Fireside Kit," P.O. Box 24305, Dept. NM, Oakland, CA 94623. For a free Animal Town catalogue write Animal Town Game Company, P.O. Box 2002, Santa Barbara, CA 93120.

Ag Structure Hearings Met With Caution

Minnesota Farm Bureau federation, the state's largest general farm organization, is approaching with caution the upcoming "Structure of Agriculture" field hearings to be held by the U.S. department of agriculture (USDA) this month and next, according to Merlyn Lokensgard, president.

National dialogues begin on November 27 in Montpelier, Vt., and conclude December 8 in Lafayette, Ind. USDA has invited citizens "representing a wide range of interests" from all over the country to present comments and suggestions on economic and social issues affecting the future of farming and rural life.

Lokensgard, St. Peter area cash grain and livestock farmer, says he will attend USDA's December 4 public forum in South Sioux City, Neb. "I intend emphasizing that the kind of agriculture this nation wants and needs in the 1980's and beyond is an agriculture that is as free as possible from regulation and government interference," Lokensgard says.

"It's difficult to be against public discussion, or oppose fact-gathering, about something that involves the entire national fabric," the state farm organization leader comments. "All the elements of American society are, of course, affected by agriculture and we would hope that any discussion of 'farm structure' would be useful."

However, according to Lokensgard, Farm Bureau has some reservations—all of which revolve around the question, "Who shall speak for farmers?" With a presidential election year in the offing, the state Farm Bureau spokesman says the "political overtones" of the hearings cannot be overlooked. "They (hearings) have as their plainly announced objective shaping new federal farm legislation to replace the 1977 law which expires in 1981," explains Lokensgard.

While involvement of "all the people" in such hearings may be laudable, Lokensgard fears the primary purpose of USDA's public dialogues is "an effort by the executive branch of government to politically determine what is best for farm families." Should that be the case, he says, farmers will "resent and resist this sort of social and political exercise."

Farmers, says the Minnesota farm leader, "get awfully nervous" whenever government invites the non-farm public to help direct their business. "We've always resisted pressures by outside forces to shape or control our industry," Lokensgard says.

The question, "Who shall speak for farmers?" has held "a peculiar attraction" for politicians and others since the Depression 30's, the Farm Bureau executive points out. "That's why we caution against letting government perform the function for which farmers' own organizations are formed," he says.

In Lokensgard's view, farmers cannot permit any government-sponsored or directed effort to presume to do the job when it comes to issues that concern them because "no matter the political party in power, no political appointee can effectively speak for farmers—or decide what is best for them."

Most Hold High Regard For Vets Of Vietnam War

Although only one in five Americans still supports America's involvement in the Vietnam war, a great majority of the public has a high regard for the veterans who fought that war.

This was a major finding in a preliminary survey ordered by President Carter and conducted for the Veterans administration by Louis Harris and Associates, which was released recently by Max Cleland, Administrator of Veterans affairs.

"The fact the public now makes a clear distinction between the warriors who fought an unpopular war and the war itself is a great tribute to all our Vietnam veterans," Cleland said. "The findings clearly indicate there is 'fertile soil' for further efforts to dispel any lingering negative stereotyping of Vietnam veterans in association with the war.

"I am enormously pleased the survey shows a very high regard for, and great sympathy toward Vietnam-era veterans," Cleland added. "To me, the survey is a strong mandate for VA to push even harder in carrying out its many programs to assist our veterans. It also demonstrates to me that the new readjustment counseling program recently passed by Congress and approved by President Carter — a program we have long sought — is right on target in helping those veterans who most need help with readjustment problems."

A survey to determine the public's attitude toward Vietnam-era veterans and their problems was ordered last year by President Carter to assist VA in carrying out its programs. Survey request was revealed in a comprehensive message sent to Congress October 10, 1978, by the President in seeking increased assistance for Vietnam-era veterans.

Advance survey was conducted among a nationwide cross section of 1,200 persons. Additional Harris studies of the general public, Vietnam-era veterans, educators and employers are being conducted and the results are expected early next year, Cleland said. A somewhat similar survey was conducted for VA by the Harris firm in 1971.

Most recent survey found that "by a margin of 62-32 per cent, the public agrees that "Veterans of the Vietnam War were made suckers, having to risk their lives in the wrong war in the wrong place at the wrong time' (A proportion which has increased significantly from the 49 per cent who held this view in 1971).".

Other survey findings included:

Public sympathy for the "plight" of Vietnam-era veterans seems to have increased since 1971. In that year, only 48 per cent felt returning veterans were being treated worse than veterans of earlier wars; today 64 per cent hold that view.

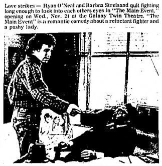
Public sees emotional or mental problems, problems in finding work, discrimination because of military service, problems with alcohol and drugs, and alienation and lack of purpose as serious concerns for Vietnam-era veterans, but it sees only the emotional problems and substance abuse as being more pronounced because of combat experience.

Public is generally aware of the major benefit programs operated by VA and regards them either as absolutely essential or quite valuable.

One in three of those interviewed blames increased distrust of government and public institutions on the war.

Only 30 per cent of the public gives the Federal government as a whole a positive rating in the job being done for veterans, but 41 per cent gives VA good marks and, among households containing at least one veteran, VA performance was rated even higher.

Love strikes — Ryan O'Neal and Barbra Streisand quit fighting long enough to look into each others eyes in "The Main Event," opening on Wed., Nov. 21 at the Galaxy Twin Theatre. "The Main Event" is a romantic comedy about a reluctant fighter and a pushy lady.



A hopeful rock singer, played by Michael Ontkean, vents his anger on a fast-talking agent, Allan Rich's role, in "Voices". Will open Sun., Nov. 25 at the Galaxy Twin Theatre.

Remembering what Thanksgiving really is...

Thursday, November 8, thirteen registered at the center for our weekly get together. Antoinette Kuznia and Hulda Stromberg were our visitors.

We filled and sewed up ends on a few pairs of bed pillows. Many want them for Christmas gifts, so we must have some on hand. They make lovely birthday or wedding gifts also, so if you are in need of a useful gift come and see us at our center. We also sewed around a piece quilt and the crochet ladies were busy on the afghan.

We received some very good rummage from Leona Chwialkowski and also from Hulda Stromberg. Thank you, ladies. Polly was busy pricing and hanging up the articles.

We signed and sent off two get well cards to Bertha Holmstrom at Karlstad hospital and to Arma Holmstrom at United at Grand Forks and also sent a belated birthday greeting to Nannie Lefrooth.

There were five door prizes given away. Ruth Harper gave a prize won by Irene, Ida Bruce received Irene's, Mabel received the one donated by Ida and Sophia and Amanda received the prizes Mabel gave.

You could bring a few bingo prizes so there will be enough when we decide to play some Thursday. Mabel and Irene brought some on Thursday. They can be left there. Mabel Borsvold served a delicious lunch.

ENERGY UPDATE

Since Three Mile Island, Are Utilities Doing Anything To Improve Nuclear Safety?

Bill Lee is president of Duke Power Company in Charlotte, North Carolina. He is also chairman of the board of directors of the newly-created Institute for Nuclear Power Operations (INPO) and a member of the Three Mile Island Oversight Committee.

- At Duke Power as well as at other plants across the country, we have made modifications in our operating nuclear plants as well as changes to those that are under construction and under design and we have retrained our operators.
- We have installed additional pumps and motors in order to provide even more tiers of backup systems that will provide cooling water in the event of loss of one of the other sources. We have redesigned the controls of some of the pumping systems based on what we have learned at Three Mile Island.
- We have changed instrumentation and information that is brought to the attention of the operators and retrained the operators in the use of that information.
- We have trained the operators in what happened at Three Mile Island so that they can recognize any symptoms like that and take the proper corrective action so that we can avoid a similar accident.
- In addition, we have tried to find other scenarios of emergencies and accidents so that we can better prepare the operators to cope with those situations. Part of our training now emphasizes the use of simulators which are really control rooms but they don't operate power plants. There's a computer behind the control board. The operator can simulate all sorts of power plant operations, emergencies and accidents. We can train the operator in how to cope with those situations.
- We have taken action to make sure that we have assurances of safety under all situations, but there is always the possibility that we haven't thought of everything. This is why we have multiple lines of defense in a nuclear plant. It's sort of like wearing life jackets when you're in a boat. One life jacket is safe but in the nuclear business we wear five or six jackets.
- The entire industry is working closely together to make sure that what one company or one utility learns is immediately shared with all, and I'm confident that what we have already done in these months since Three Mile Island gives us substantial assurance of additional safety compared to the way we were before Three Mile Island.

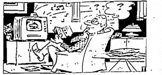
PRESBYOPIA: A MID-LIFE EYE CRISIS



Are you at that dangerous age—for eyes?

As we approach 40, our eyes gradually lose the ability to focus on objects near us.

This condition is called presbyopia, and though it's not dangerous, it may necessitate reading glasses.

According to the American Association of Ophthalmology—representing physicians who specialize in eye care—presbyopia results from the gradual hardening of the eye's lens. When we are young, the lens is elastic and can change its shape allowing us to focus on objects both in the distance and very close to us. With age, the consistency of the lens changes, making it more resistant to changes in shape, which result in a decreasing ability to see objects close to the eye.

When the nearest point of clear vision has moved too far from the eyes for comfortable work, the ophthalmologist, a medical doctor (or osteopath), will prescribe corrective glasses for close work.

"Initially, after prolonged close work, distance vision becomes blurred," says Abraham L. Kornzweig, M.D., a New York ophthalmologist. "This is because the hardened lens is slow to return to its proper shape for clear distance vision."

Another sign of impending presbyopia is early morning difficulty in reading. Contrary to some popular opinion, presbyopia cannot be cured with eye exercises.

Since presbyopia is linked to the aging process, the ability to focus on near objects may grow progressively weaker even after the first pair of reading glasses has been prescribed. To maintain proper near vision, progressively stronger glasses may be required until about 65, after which time the eye's ability to see close up will remain fairly constant.

Dr. Kornzweig, chairman of AAO's Committee on Aging, points out that there is no perfect near vision lens. Every lens has an optimum focusing distance depending on its power. The correct lens depends on the range of the individual's close work. The presbyopic person with a typing job two feet from the eyes might require much stronger glasses if shifted to a bookkeeping job requiring a range 14 inches from the eyes. A stronger lens does not mean sharper vision, but a closer range of vision.

Since reading glasses tend to blur distance vision, some individuals suffering from presbyopia may need half-glasses or bifocals.

When the patient requires distance glasses as well as reading glasses, the ophthalmologist will also prescribe bifocals, which contains two lenses in one. The patient looks through the lower segment of the lens for close work, and out of the upper portion for distance vision.

A period of adjustment is usually required for the bifocal wearer to get used to gazing down instead of straight ahead while reading. There may also be difficulty at first walking up and down steps or across street curbs.

Because of the potential difficulties, bifocals must be carefully fitted. If the lower segment is set too high or too low, the user may be conscious of the edge of the bifocal which could cause discomfort. Post fitting consultation with your ophthalmologist will usually rectify any fitting difficulty.

HOW YOU CAN HELP CAMBODIA

You may help save the lives of starving children.

Two and a half million Cambodians are threatened with starvation. Because of the fighting in Cambodia, only about 12 percent of the country's farmland is now being cultivated. In the countryside, people are existing on bark and leaves and digging for roots. Only 50 doctors remain to serve a population of four million.

Fortunately, there are some things being done—and some things you can do to help.

A small, permanent relief team is setting up an office in Phnom Penh, the capital of Cambodia, to distribute aid. World Vision International, a Christian humanitarian agency, has already flown 15 tons of relief supplies into Phnom Penh, including five tons of supplies especially designed for the many orphaned children: food, clothing, medicine, educational material and mosquito nets. This is just a beginning, however. The country needs 700 tons of rice every day for minimum survival.

World Vision has made an immediate aid commitment of one million dollars. This includes a $250,000 medical and feeding program for some 175,000 refugees who have fled to makeshift camps along the Thai border. The interdenominational agency's goal is to raise another four million dollars to help the Cambodian people rebuild their shattered nation.

You can help by responding to the international appeal for five million dollars for relief and rehabilitation in Cambodia announced by the agency. Or you can help one of the other organizations trying to rescue the people of Cambodia.

A contribution may be sent to World Vision International, Box O, Pasadena, California 91109.

Hints for the Holidays

GIVE A GIFT OF SOUND

Music today is an undeniable and important part of our lives. This year, why not give a gift of sound? Whether it's a simple harmonica or sophisticated stereo system, a gift that makes music may be the most welcome of all. But before you buy a single stereo component, here are three simple shopping tips from Denmark's Bang & Olufsen, makers of some of the world's finest audio equipment.

First, review your needs carefully with a knowledgeable and reputable audio dealer. Making a good turntable, receiver or tape recorder involves the careful union of intricate electronic and mechanical systems. Long-term reliability depends on how good these systems are, and your dealer is the one to guide you.

Secondly, know what's out there first. With so much to choose from, you may feel a little overwhelmed. But you don't need to be an electronics engineer to make a wise decision. Fine audio components represent a substantial investment, so do your homework—some background reading and careful comparison shopping.

Finally, don't neglect good looks. Once upon a time, a great cargo of visible controls was a sign of superior technology. This is no longer true. Today, unnecessary and complicated dials can be left to those who would rather manipulate music than listen to it. A remarkable example of how music can look as good as it sounds is Bang & Olufsen's new Beocord 1900 cassette recorder. Like other components in the company's renowned collection, the recorder is a shapely silhouette of polished wood and stainless steel. The technical superiority of the Beocord 1900 is kept out of your way—behind a sliding panel adjacent to the main controls. Operation is convenient and uncomplicated—all functions are handled by finger-tip touch controls or push buttons on the angled front panel. Best of all, the three-inch-high unit is so elegant to look at, you'll want to give it center stage, near the best seat in the house.

Dealers in fine audio equipment can show you the Beocord 1900 or the equally remarkable Bang & Olufsen turntable, receiver and matching speakers.

Treasury To Sell Old Silver Dollars

Nearly one million silver dollars — minted in Carson City, Nev., in 1878 through 1893 — will be sold early next year, the U.S. general services administration has announced.

The historic coins — the last of the government's holdings from America's great silver mining era — were part of nearly three million 90 per cent silver dollars stored in U.S. treasury vaults for more than 60 years.

There will be two sales. The first, beginning February 8 and ending April 8, 1980, will offer 923,287 silver dollars to the public by mail at fixed prices. The sale will feature three categories of the "cartwheels": 1883-CC (195,745), 1884-CC (428,152), and "Mixed Years-CC" — 1878-1885 and 1889-1893 — (299,390). There will be no limit on the number of coins that may be ordered. Coins in the 1883 category are $42 each, and in the 1884 category, $40 each. "Cartwheels" in the mixed-years groups are $20 per coin.

The second sale, to be conducted later in the spring, will offer 54,847 in three mint-year categories: 1880-CC (4,284), 1881-CC (18,996), and 1885-CC (31,567). The coins will be sold at public auction by mail bid. A minimum bid price will be set just prior to the sale. There will be a limit of five coins from each category per bidder.

Prices in each sale include delivery by registered mail to addresses in the United States, its territories and possessions, and to APO and FPO numbers.

Prospective buyers should send a post card, giving name, address and zip code, to: Carson City Silver Dollars, San Francisco, Calif. 94170. Information and order forms will be sent to those on the list in time for the first sale.

From 1972 to 1974, GSA sold some 1.9 million of the silver dollars in five public sales, netting $55.3 million for the benefit of taxpayers. Sales were discontinued in 1974 because of diminishing demand.

The decision to return the coins to the marketplace — made by Congress and signed into law by President Carter in March 1979 — has received an enthusiastic response from the public. The agency says it already has heard from more than 200,000 persons interested in acquiring some of the historic coins.

Each coin is in a plastic case — appropriate for display — inside a velour-lined gift box. A brief history of the coin is enclosed in each box.

The Carson City mint produced only 13 years of the silver dollar designed by George T. Morgan. Known as "Morgan Dollars," they feature the head of Miss Liberty on one side and an eagle within a wreath on the other. The letters "CC" — for Carson City — appear under the wreath.

Each silver dollar measures four centimeters in diameter and eight mils in thickness. It weighs 412.5 grains and is .900 fine silver. Although the market price of silver fluctuates daily, when silver sells for $12 per troy ounce, the silver content of one coin is worth about $9.27.

In the late 1800s, the increasing popularity of paper money plus the large number of silver dollars in circulation lessened the demand for the "cartwheels" produced at Carson City. The mint struck its last silver dollar in 1893. Coins stored there were shipped to other mints and to Federal Reserve Banks throughout the country.

Legislation in the early 1900's plus the demand for silver in the 1940s to support the war effort resulted in massive coin melts. All but about three million of the government's holdings of the 90 per cent silver dollars in Treasury vaults revealed the secret of their historic and numismatic value. Most of the remaining "cartwheels" — many still in their original mint bags — were from the long-closed Carson City mint.

Health Warning: Pneumococcal Pneumonia Is Fifth Largest Killer

Senior Citizens Risk

Why is Massachusetts one of the few states taking a major stand in the fight against the nation's fifth largest killer — pneumonia?

The vaccine now available to help prevent pneumococcal pneumonia, the most common and severe form of bacterial pneumonia, is expected to lower the death rate from this cause in Massachusetts, where 130,000 high-risk individuals have already been vaccinated. But what about the remaining 60 million elderly and chronically ill Americans across our nation who are candidates for protection? Response in most other states to the vaccine has been poor, thus far.

Undoubtedly, many are not aware of the pneumococcal pneumonia vaccine that comes on the heels of adverse publicity surrounding the swine-flu vaccine. But experience with the pneumococcal pneumonia vaccine to date is that it has been generally well tolerated, though mild reactions at the injection site occur commonly, mild fever occurs occasionally, and serious reactions have been reported rarely. The vaccine is reported to be highly effective in inducing immunity against the bacteria that cause over 80 per cent of pneumococcal pneumonia cases in the U.S.

Furthermore, this is not a vaccine for "every man, woman and child in America." Only those over 50, and particularly over 65, or with a chronic debilitating disease such as bronchitis, emphysema or congestive heart failure, are considered to be at high risk from pneumococcal pneumonia. Others who should receive the vaccine include those with sickle cell disease and asplenia (surgical removal of the spleen). All these patients have increased susceptibility to the complications of pneumococcal pneumonia. Patients, of course, are advised to consult with a doctor to determine whether the vaccine is right for them.

But high-risk patients in many states are apparently not being reached. A recent editorial in the Journal of the American Medical Association commented on the low utilization of this new tool in preventive medicine, and attributed the problem, in part, to an apathetic attitude of the public toward vaccinations of all types.

In addition, many people have become complacent about pneumonia as a cause of death, confident that penicillin will wipe it out. This, unfortunately, is not always the case. In many cases of pneumococcal pneumonia, damage done to the lungs is already so severe that antibiotics cannot save the patient. In fact, this disease causes some 54,000 deaths a year in the U.S., according to the Surgeon General.

The success of the Massachusetts program has been credited mainly to the awareness and determination of that state's vociferous senior citizens. Let's not forget that pneumococcal pneumonia is still a serious disease...one that can now often be prevented.

Mullon Named Regional VA Hospital Head

Thomas P. Mullon, director of the Veterans administration medical center in Omaha, Neb., has been named midwest regional director for the VA's hospital system — the largest in the nation.

One of six regional directors appointed by the head of the VA, Max Cleland, Mullon will be responsible for 35 Veterans administration medical centers in 14 central states stretching from the Canadian to the Mexican borders.

His area will cover Montana, Iowa, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Wyoming, Utah, Nevada, Colorado, Oklahoma, Texas, Kansas and Missouri. The 35 medical centers in these states have a combined yearly budget of some $800 million, approximately 14,500 hospital beds and almost 31,000 full and part-time employees.

Mullon, 41, said today that plans call for him to remain in Omaha and that he will shortly announce the address of his new office. Until a new director for the Omaha VA medical center is appointed, he said that Dr. J.J. Matoole, the current chief of staff, will be the center's acting director.

Cleland said he made the major management shift in VA's department of medicine and surgery to enhance the efficiency of medical care for former servicement and women. The agency's health care system includes 172 medical centers 228 outpaitent clinics and 16 domiciliaries (veterans' homes).

Mullon was named director of the Omaha VA medical center about three and one-half years ago. He had been a hospital administration specialist in the VA medical district office in San Francisco.

Vietnam-era veterans with no service in the Korean Conflict average 31.2 years of age. The average age of all veterans is 47.2 years.

Is land a good investment? It took 5,000 years for the world population to double before Christ. The last doubling took 75 years. Statisticians say the next doubling will take only 25 years. About 5 percent of the world's surface is Grade A farm land and about 25 per cent is here in the midwest. There is (in our opinion) not a better investment than in this land that must supply food for our present and future population!

Real Estate with all improvements thereon is being sold as is, in its present state or condition!

Maintaining Our Defense Capabilities

The military status of the United States has been a topic of great interest during the last few months. Our ability to ward off an attack by the Soviet Union; either in this country or in Western Europe; has been examined carefully. As a result of this recent defensive examination, the Administration and Congress have increased spending authorization for the Defense Department.

The United States must increase defense spending or face the unfortunate proposition of falling behing the Soviet Union in military capability in every category. This unnecessary arms race, which could easily end in destruction, is, however, not the fault of the U.S. It began in the early 1960's following the Cuban missle crisis. The Russians were so embarassed during that incident that they vowed they would never again be put in such a position. As a result; they began massive military development programs and have since become the second most powerful military country in the world. The sad part about this scenario, for those of us who live in this country, is that if things continue at the rate they have in the past, the Soviets will pass our capabilities in the 1980's. Morally, I cannot support arms buildups for an offensive purpose, like that of the Soviet Union; but I think we, as Americans, have no choice but to keep up from a defensive standpoint as a deterrent to war.

Any military weak country encourages aggression from its enemies. This has been reflected in the attitude of the Soviet Union by their increased willingness to intervene in the internal affairs of other less militarily able counties. The United States has at the same time pursued a policy of decreased strength and lessened the level of preparedness. We must remember that we can only gope to maintain peace by maintaining a strong defense.

To further point out the need for increased defense spending it is important to note that the disparity in spending between the two countries is great. During the last five years the Soviet Union has invested almost $100 billion more than the U.S. for military hardware. During this time, the Soviet Union also produced more tanks (6,400), International Ballistic Missiles (720), submarines (36) and tactical aircraft (1,600).

Additional statistics for conventional military hardware also display a need for increased spending: Uniformed Personnel, U.S. 2,026,345; S.U. 4,400,000; Aircraft Carriers, U.S. 13, S.U. 2; Cruisers, Destroyers, Frigates, U.S. 161, S.U. 284; Tactical Aircraft; U.S. 5,364, S.U. 8,000; Field Artillery, U.S. 5,500, S.U. 20,000; Tanks; U.S. 12,100, S.U. 50,000; Attack Submarines, U.S. 81, S.U. 195.

In the nuclear arena, the United States leads 9,200 to 4,900 in the number of individually targeted warheads; but the Soviets lead in the amount of payldad pounds 12.0 million to 7.2 million.

In 1960, the United States spent 10.4 per cent of the gross national product for defense purposes, while today defense spending only encompasses 5.2 per cent – a drop of 50 per cent. Soviet expenditures; meanwhile; have accelerated to 13-15 per cent of their gross national product.

The issue is not more defense spending; it is the sole element that makes this country great—freedom. It is unfortunate that there are nations which hope to destroy our way of life, possibly by force; but until this aggressive threat is eliminated a strong defense will be necessary. Let's be prepared.

Minn. Teens Win 4-H Honors

Zimmerman

Erickson

Renner

Nieland

Katlack

Five Minnesota young people from a tri-county area have earned state honors for their 1979 4-H projects.

Dean Zimmerman, 18, of McLeod County; Timothy Erickson, 17, of Meeker County, and Wanda Renner, 18, and Sheila Nieland, 18, both of Sibley County, have each won an expense-paid trip to the 58th National 4-H Congress in Chicago Nov. 25-29. The fifth winner, Steven Katlack, 18, of Meeker County, will receive a $50 U.S. savings bond donated by Agricultural Chemicals Division, Mobay Chemical Company.

The 4-H'ers are among some 30 Minnesota state winners selected by the Cooperative Extension Service this year.

Zimmerman is state winner in the automotive program, sponsored by The Firestone Tire & Rubber Company.

The seven-year 4-H'er painted his 1972 car last summer and applied nearly 10 coats of acrylic lacquer to achieve the best results. Since that time three people have asked him to paint their cars.

A diesel mechanics student at Hutchinson Area Vo-Technical Institute, he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Orville Zimmerman, of Brownton.

Erickson won top honors in the petroleum power program, sponsored by Amoco Foundation, Inc.

The high school senior says his 4-H project has taught him that while a good quality oil may cost more initially, in the long run it saves money in equipment maintenance and repair.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Erickson, of Grove City.

Renner earned state honors for her safety project. The General Motors Foundation will sponsor her trip to Chicago.

The college freshman has taught bicycle safety to the entire student body at Winthrop Elementary School as well as defensive driving techniques at Winthrop High School.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Renner, of Winthrop.

Nieland is state winner in the food conservation and safety program, sponsored by Reynolds Metals Company.

The seven-year 4-H'er has the following tip for campers: wrap frozen meat in tin foil and store it in a cooler with dry ice for freshness and great flavor.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lavern Nieland, of Arlington.

Katlack won state honors for his entomology project.

The high school senior's insect collection has grown from 25 to 115 specimens, representing no less than nine orders.

His parents are Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Katlack, of Litchfield.

Awards were arranged by National 4-H Council.

A CHIP OFF THE OLD BLOCK

Children who want to lend a hand in do-it-yourself projects often succeed only in getting underfoot. But if you make a little extra time for them, you'll have an eager, delightful — and adept — companion.

Plan a task for the youngster — a real one, not just busy-work. Explain how to do it, what the hallmarks of a good or bad job are, and why. After a demonstration, let the child try. Mistakes? Expect them and be corrective, not critical.

Long before the child is ready to work with tools, instill the habit of tool care and safety by providing a good example, advises Cooper The Toolmaker. The manufacturers of Crescent adjustable wrenches, screwdrivers and pliers offer these guides to keep kids working well and safe alongside you:

- Keep the work area clean and well-lighted. Cluttered areas and benches and poor visibility invite accidents.
- Disconnect electrical circuits when working with light fixtures.
- Place a heated soldering iron on a tip rest.
- Ground power tools that are not double insulated.
- When file-sharpening a power lawn mower blade, disconnect the spark plug wire.

Make your child your chief assistant on do-it-yourself projects.

- Use clamps or a vise to hold work. It's safer than using your hand, and it frees both hands.
- Use safety glasses with most tools. If a cutting operation is dusty, use a face mask as well.

The key is common sense. If one "thinks ahead," there's less likely to be trouble from the "unexpecteds."

FIRE SAFETY TIPS FROM SNUFFY

Home Heating By The Hearth

As fuel costs soar and temperatures inside are lowered, a crackling fire in the fireplace is a cozy and cheerful way to keep warm.

But these fires, if not carefully tended, can cause tragedy as family and friends gather for the holiday season. Snuffy® the Burger King® Talking Fire Engine, says, "Your children are big enough for fire safety. Teach them to maintain a fire safely."

Begin by teaching your children to build a "controlled" fire which will be lit by an adult. Place kindling on top of a layer of tightly crumpled paper. Add three hardwood logs stacked triangularly, with the largest laid toward the back of the fire box.

Arrange your andirons so that the logs can't roll off. Leave air spaces at the back of the fireplace and between the logs. And, always use a screen around the fireplace to keep sparks from flying out.

Have your child see that the damper is open before the fire is lit to prevent accumulation of smoke and explosive gases in the room. When your fireplace is not in use, make sure the damper is tightly closed to keep the warm air inside the room. Hold a hand mirror inside the flue to check for light cracks.

A child can check, too, to see that decorations and dried greenery (such as cedar branches in a centerpiece) stay well away from sources of heat that might cause them to ignite.

Be sure your fireplace fire is out before you retire for the evening. Never close the damper on a smouldering fire—a closed damper can build up heat and cause hot ashes to flare up again. Instead, block the front of the fireplace with a tight-fitting metal cover or glass screen.

Never use flammable liquids to start or rekindle a fire in a fireplace. Although effective on charcoal, on wood they can lash out and inflict a scorching burn.

Never use coal, charcoal or styrofoam packaging in the fireplace since these materials can produce deadly quantities of carbon monoxide. Furthermore, don't overload your fireplace with wood or excessive amounts of paper to build a roaring fire. The fire might burn too hot causing the creosote to ignite in the chimney or send sparks flying around the room.

If you're burning manmade logs, follow the directions on the package. Never break the logs apart to quicken the fire, or stack them. This may cause them to explode.

Have your fireplace inspected regularly to ensure that all vents and chimneys are operating properly. Prune back overhanging limbs or large trees close to the chimney. The trees can create a downdraft and cause the fireplace to smoke on windy days.

A fire on the hearth can provide you with many warm moments and memories if you follow these suggestions from Snuffy. Your youngsters can become seasoned fire marshalls who can help keep this a happy holiday season.

ALL-AMERICAN band member — one of 102 selected musicians from throughout the United States — is Donna Sunsdahl of Stephen. She is shown receiving a special recognition certificate from Jerry Bugliosi, operator of the McDonald's restaurant in Thief River Falls. McDonald's sponsors the band which features two outstanding high school musicians from each state and the District of Columbia and appears at the Macy's Thanksgiving day parade in New York City, the Tournament of Roses parade in Pasadena, Calif., and a special concert in New York City's Carnegie hall.

Stephen Girl In Band

Hard work and dedication in the development of her musical talent have resulted in some special experiences for Donna Sunsdahl, a senior in the Stephen high school band. She participated Thursday in the Macy's Thanksgiving day parade in New York City as a member of the 1979 McDonald's All-American high school band.

Announcement of Donna's selection to the band was made by Jerry Bugliosi, who operates the McDonald's restaurant in Thief River Falls. He recently visited the Stephen school to present a special certificate to Miss Sunsdahl.

The All-American band consists of 102 top caliber high school musicians, two selected from each state and the District of Columbia. It performs under the direction of Paul Lavalle, former music director of Radio City music hall and director of the Band of America. Each member is selected by Lavalle and his assistant, Paul Jeffrey, musical director of the Midtown Manhattan jazz center.

In addition to the New York City appearance Thursday, the band will play in the Tournament of Roses parade in Pasadena, Calif., on New Year's day and at a special concert at Carnegie hall in New York City.

As a member of the band, Donna is also entitled to complete for scholarships to be awarded by the New England conservatory of music in Boston and the national music camp at Interlochen, Mich.

The band was organized in

Horse And Carriage Use Hobby For Thorsgards

COMING HOME from a trial run with Nellie, the Thorsgard's six-year-old Tennessee walking horse, are Eric (front) and Knute Thorsgard, sons of Dr. and Mrs. Ernest Thorsgard of Thief River Falls. The brothers, along with a friend, Kirk Oseid, completely restored the buggy as a hobby project and for use on short trips to town.

by Bonnie Reed
Times Reporter

Eric and Knute Thorsgard owe a great portion of their knowledge of horses and horse buggy restoration to their father, Dr. Ernest Thorsgard, they stated during a recent interview.

"Dad used and built sleighs as a kid," Eric said. "He was raised that way. He knows so much about horses. We've learned a lot about horses and harnessing from him but it's now become more of a hobby he enjoys."

Knute, a medical student in Duluth, presently works summers in North Dakota at a cattle ranch. His interest in riding horses at the ranch to herd cattle got him interested in developing other uses for horses, he said.

"I ride horses at work and the idea of driving them sounded different," he said.

He bought a sleigh while in North Dakota which inspired his father to regain his interest in the restoration hobby. Thorsgard's presently have two bobsleds — large sleds with two pairs of runners and a long seat for two or more people; two cutters — light sleighs (the Santa Claus type) in which both ends of the sleigh may be steered; two grain wagons (used as sleighs); two buggies; and two surreys — a lighter type of horse-drawn carriage.

"We hope to have at least one more sleigh," Knute said. "There is one at our grandfather's farm in Northwood, N.D., that we hope to fix up, especially since it was Grandpa's."

Knute discovered their newest buggy in Duluth, he said. And, since it required complete restoration, Eric (now a veterinary student at Concordia college), Knute and a friend, Kirk Oseid, also of Thief River Falls, took the buggy completely apart.

"All the hardware, springs and paint came off, and we rebuilt the entire buggy," Eric said. "Working on the wheels was the most difficult because we had to get in every corner and sand each one before we could paint them."

The seat and top of the buggy were reupholstered in Fargo. Black was chosen as the color of the buggy because that was the color most of them used to be, Eric said.

The builders, working on and off between other jobs and school, completed the buggy in one summer. It now stands finished, available for use, complete with a tiny rear window for back viewing, and two lanterns. The wheels can be replaced with runners in the winter for year around traveling.

The Thorsgards' smaller buggy, a one-seater, was purchased last spring from the Amish, a strict group of people who avoid nearly every kind of luxury, and because of cultural and religious reasons, have continued to use horses and buggies as a means of transportation.

The beginning of the horse and buggy hobby for the Thorsgards began with a Shetland pony that was hooked up to a cutter, Knute said. Horses and buggies or sleighs are not only a summer sport but a year-around activity.

"The river is an excellent place to use sleighs in the winter," Knute said. "The snow becomes flat and hard from snowmobiles which makes it easier for the horse and sleight to travel. You just have to find a horse that is not afraid of snowmobiles."

Presently there are six horses at the Thorsgard stable, most of them Tennessee walking horses. Nellie, a six-year-old Tennessee walker, was used for the trial run once the Thorsgard's newest buggy was restored. Although she was a bit shy at first, she soon developed a feel for the harness, buggy (and Amos, the Thorsgard's three-year-old Irish Setter) following close behind.

"You have to have a driving horse, one that doesn't want to run with the sleighs," Eric said.

There are now two horses that are trained to drive — Nellie and Luke, both Tennessee walkers.

This hobby, just as nearly everything else, is not fault-free and the Thorsgards have had some bad experiences with their horses, although they have been few. One incident occurred when they were using a grain wagon as a

Sign Ordinance Is Proposed For City

Revision of the sign ordinance for the city of Thief River Falls is one item to be considered by the city council within the next couple of months, according to Jack Quinlivan, city planning director. He said the planning office has been working on a draft of the ordinance for the past several months.

Existing ordinance is quite incomplete and the language is so vague that it almost defies legal interpretation, Quinlivan said. With the development of outlaying business areas and changes in the downtown district, regulation of signs for safety as well as aesthetics should be considered, he added.

As with all city ordinances, a public hearing would have to be held prior to adoption. Should the council act on the proposal son, hearing could be held in mid-December or early January, Quinlivan said the ordinance would apply only to new signs and that existing signs would be allowed to remain as they are indefinitely.

A statement of purpose and intent for the ordinance is as follows:

"The code creates the legal framework for signage regulations that is intended to facilitate an easy and agreeable communication between people. It recognizes the need to protect the safety and welfare of the public, the need for well maintained and attractive appearance, in a community and the need for adequate business identification and advertising and communication.

"This code recognizes that aesthetics and design quality cannot be satisfactorily legislated, as individual opinions vary and general public opinion varies from one era to another. It is recognized, however, that a great percentage of that which is attractive can be eliminated by sensible quality control, through adequate maintenance and inspection and by reasonable guidelines formulated to minimize clutter."

Under the proposed ordinance, prohibited signs would include: Flashing signs, swinging signs and roof signs; signs which imitate traffic control devices or signs by reason of shape, color of position; signs that block ingress or egress from any window, door, stairway or fire escape; and private signs

Invited to participate in any program activities are expectant parents or parents of a child aged birth to five who live in the Thief River Falls school district. There will be no charge for this workshop.

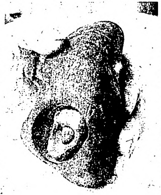
Ag Activities Day Dec. 7

Ag activities day, sponsored by the agriculture division of the university of Minnesota technical college — Crookston (UMC), is scheduled for Friday, December 7. All members of 4-H clubs, high school agriculture departments, and Future Farmers of America (FFA) chapters from Minnesota and eastern North Dakota are invited to participate.

Registration will be held from 8 to 9 a.m.



UNUSUAL CARVING was done in this stone found by Norman L. Olson on a farm in North township about two miles from Thief River Falls. Olson found the stone in the same area where he has also recovered a stone axe head. The side of the stone above has been broken off, apparently to make it fit the hand while being held for carving. Olson said that he noticed the mark on the stone just as he was about to toss it aside, and had to soak and scrub it to expose the carving.

SOCIETY and CLUBS

Barb Erickson Marries Steve Miller at Zion

Barb Erickson and Steve Miller, both of Thief River Falls, exchanged marriage vows on Saturday, October 20, at 3 p.m., at Zion Lutheran church in this city.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Art C. Erickson of Roseau, and Mr. and Mrs. Tom Miller of Staples.

Rev. Richard Larson officiated at the double ring ceremony. During the ceremony, Donavan Ruud, a friend of the couple, sang, "Wedding Song," and "Follow Me."

Candelabra on either side of the altar formed the background for the wedding party.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents, was attired in a white wedding gown styled with an empire bodice with a high neckline. Chantilly lace accented the neckline, outlined the sheer yoke and formed the cuffs on the long-sheer bishop sleeves. Her slightly flared skirt and chapel-length train were edged with a sheer ruffle, accented by wide lace trim. Matching scalloped lace formed her profile headpiece and edged her fingertip veil. She carried a cascade of yellow roses and carnations, with babies' breath and ivy.

Patty Connell of Warroad, a friend of the bride, was maid of honor. Other attendants were Teri Cain, Minneapolis, sister of the groom; Carla Jenson, Roseau, sister of the bride, Mary Lou Monsrud, Roseau, a friend of the bride; and Pam Voytilla, Viking, a sister of the bride. All the attendants wore yellow floor-length gowns topped by sheer floral capes. They carried bouquets of yellow roses and carnations with touches of babies' breath.

Serving as flower girl was Bonnie Lofstedt, Roseau, a niece of the groom. Her yellow floor-length gown was styled like those worn by the bridesmaids.

The rings were carried by Justin Cain of Minneapolis, a nephew of the groom. He wore an ivory colored tuxedo, and like the groomsmen, had a yellow rose pinned on his lapel.

Betsy Abrahamson was the bride's personal attendant.

Attending the groom as best man was Kenny Niemela of Thief River Falls, a friend of the couple. Groomsmen were Richard Erickson, Roseau, a brother of the bride; Terry Kalina, Wadena, friend of the groom; Barney Miller, Staples, brother of the groom; and Mitchell Anderson, Thief River Falls, a friend of the groom. All wore brown tuxedos with white ruffled shirts. The groom's attire, in all white, featured a tuxedo with tails.

The mother of the bride wore a blue sleeveless gown featuring an accordion pleated floor-length skirt and sheer cape. The mother of the groom wore a plum colored, floor-length skirt with a matching long-sleeved jacket. Their corsages were of yellow roses and white daisies.

Special guest at the ceremony was Margaret Miller of Verndale, the groom's grandmother.

A reception at the Meadowbrook ballroom at Middle River followed. Host and hostess were Jack and Cathy McDonald, Roseau, brother-in-law and sister of the bride. Penny Roseen, registered the guests as Holly and Kelly Roseen served the punch. All are nieces of the bride.

The pillared, three-tiered wedding cake, topped with yellow roses, was cut and served by Arlys Lofstedt, Roseau, sister of the bride, and Liz Miller, Wadena, aunt of the groom. Pouring coffee were Addine Dokken, Roseau, aunt of the bride, and Pam Miller, cousin of the groom.

Following a wedding trip to Big Sugar Bush lake, near Detroit Lakes, the couple is now at home in this city at 2002 East Greenwood. Both are employed in this city. The bride, a graduate of Roseau high school, is employed at the Land O'Lakes turkey plant and the groom is employed by Arctic Enterprises. Photo, David Dokken, Roseau.

Senior Citizens

On Thursday, Nov. 15, the senior citizens treated themselves to a pre-Thanksgiving dinner at the Lumberjack cafe in town. Thirteen came at one o'clock to enjoy the chicken dinner and all the trimmings Linda had prepared. Thank you, Linda. It was delicious. Later we went to the center and enjoyed the rest of the afternoon visiting and working on fluff to fill more pillows. Another quilt was finished and work was done on the afghan blocks. Also, another quilt top was laid out on the table, so Mildred will be sewing them together for another quilt.

There will be no meeting at the center on November 22 due to Thanksgiving Day. But we will meet again November 29 when a sign-up for fuel will take place.

Our visitors Thursday were Lila Grandstrand of rural Stephen, Hulda and Mabel Stromberg, Ida Bruce and Anna Rud.

Mabel Stromberg received the door prize Irene donated; Ruth Harper won the prize given by Ida and Irene received the prize Dolly gave some time ago.

Coffee and cookies were served by the center.

Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Chwialkowski and Roger Holmstrom were callers at the Alvin Holmstrom home this past week.

Ortloff and Disterhaupt Vows Said at Redeemer

Jodi Ortloff, daughter of Mrs. Grace Ortloff of this city and the late Raymond Ortloff, became the bride of Douglas Disterhaupt of Pillager, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Disterhaput, also of Pillager, at a recent ceremony at Redeemer Lutheran church in Thief River Falls.

Rev. Keith Prekker officiated at the double ring ceremony. Mrs. William Halbasch, a friend of the bride, was the organist. She played "Nadia's Theme," for the bridesmaids' processional, and the traditional wedding march as the bride was escorted to the altar by her brothers, Wayne and Dwight Ortloff. Arla Wiskow, a friend of the couple, sang, "The Wedding Song (There Is Love)", "Today, Oh Lord," and "The Lord's Prayer."

Candelabra graced with greenery and peach carnations formed the chancel setting.

The bride was attired in a white organza gown with imported Venice lace edging the Queen Anne neckline. Matching lace appliques graced the bodice and long, tapered sleeves. Corresponding bands of lace traced the empire waistline, flowed down the front of the bouffant skirt and trimmed the flounce that encircled the skirt and chapel-length train. Her headpiece, appliqued with Venice lace motifs, held her mantilla of bridal illusion, edged with lace. She carried a cascade of silk full-blown peach roses, cocoa roses and peach and white babies' breath. The old, new, borrowed and blue tradition, carried out in her attire, included her grandmother's wedding ring, a silver heart-shaped locket, her gift from the groom, and a blue garter.

Personal attendants were Kerry Johnson, Minneapolis, and Kathy Anderson, Mosinac, Wis., friends of the bride.

Maid of honor was Carol Langevin, a friend of the bride. Bridesmaids were Fern Langevin, a friend, and Kristie Ortloff, a sister of the bride. Their spaghetti-strap gowns of peach nylon chiffon over acetate were styled with gathered empire bodices trimmed with lace. Lace also edged the ruffles on their tiered skirts and complemented the collars on their capelets. In their hair, they wore a cluster of peach silk rosebuds with babies' breath. They carried silk nosegays of open peach roses and delphiniums accented with tan babies' breath. Their silver open-heart necklaces and matching earrings were gifts from the bride.

Attending the groom as best man was his brother, Albert Disterhaupt of Pillager. Groomsmen were Monte Casavan, Red Lake Falls, brother-in-law of the bride; and Robert Kadus of Pillager, a friend. They wore rust Seville single-breasted tuxedos with matching satin trim, ruffled peach shirts, and triple carnation boutonnieres, tipped in peach. The groom wore a similar tuxedo with a white ruffled shirt and an open peach rose, accented with babies' breath.

Serving as ushers were Darren Wiskow, a friend of the couple, and Steve Disterhaupt, Moose Lake, a brother of the groom.

The mother of the bride wore a beige floor-length gown topped by a cape in brown sheer. The mother of the groom was attired in a long-sleeved, peach-colored gown. Their corsages were in peach tones, accenting the peach tipped carnation boutonniere worn by the groom's father. All the flowers at the wedding were of silk and were made by Esther Cote of Red Lake Falls.

A reception in the church fellowship hall followed with Don and Sonia Balmer, friends of the couple, as host and hostess. Centering the serving table was a pillared, four-tiered wedding cake baked and decorated by Barb Johnson, Grand Forks, N.D., sister of the bride. Roses and forget-me-nots, in peach shades, decorated the cake, which was topped by a wedding bell ornament.

The cake was cut and served by Delores Mortrud and Myrtle Nelson, friends of the couple. Pouring coffee were Alyce Sevre, aunt and godmother of the bride, and Ellen Strickler, a friend of the couple.

Punch was ladled by DaLonna and Melvin Ellefson, friends of the couple. At the guest book were Heidi Casavan, sister of the bride, Ryan Casavan, a nephew of the bride, and Sara Ortloff, daughter of the bride. Gift bearers were Jay Anderson, Mike Anderson and Jeff Johnson. The waitresses were Frances Kuyath, Cindy Mortrud, Linda Nelson, Tracy Casavan and DeAnna Knutson.

For the wedding trip through the Black Hills of South Dakota, into Nebraska and to Iowa to visit the groom's grandparents, the bride wore a powder blue pantsuit with a multi-colored pastel blouse.

The couple is now at home at Countryside trailer court in Thief River Falls. The bride, a graduate of Lincoln high school and the Thief River Falls AVTI, is employed at Northland Foods; and the groom, a graduate of Motley high school and the Staples AVTI, is employed by Hydra-Mac.

Prior to her wedding, the bride was honored at bridal showers given by Laura Ortloff and Diane Kuyath and by Fern and Carol Langevin and Kristie Ortloff. Photo, Lund Photography, Roseau.

Citizen Action Can Help Curb Crime Losses

Average value of a burglar's haul in cash or personal possessions is $475, according to information provided by the Advertising Council, Inc. There are more than 40 million crimes committed in the country each year and most are property crimes such as burglary, pocket picking and purse snatching.

It doesn't take much to outsmart most burglars, the council notes. Most are not "pros" but kids or others trying to take advantage of an easy mark. Often they can enter property through an unlocked door or window. In the nation a burglary occurs on the average of once every 10 seconds.

Some suggestions by the advertising council on preventing losses in the home, business or on the street are as follows:

—Lock your doors always — even when you're going out "just for a minute".

—Check your locks — they should be the "deadbolt" type with a strong metal bar extending one inch into the door frame.

—If it's too hot to close and lock windows, put nails in window frames. This prevents windows from being opened more than a few inches until the nails are taken out.

—Mark things you own that burglars like to steal — TV, stereo, CB radios, etc. Mark them with a personal identification number, which is something burglars don't like. And announce that fact by sticking a warning sign on your door or window. Your local police can help you mark your things and give you a warning sticker. Just ask about Operation Identification. (In Phoenix, Arizonia, people who joined Operation Identification had burglary rates that were 18 times lower than their neighbors who didn't join.)

If you're taking a business trip or going on a vacation leaving a vacant house, make sure your home looks "lived-in".

Stop newspaper and mail deliveries or ask a neighbor to collect them so things won't pile up outside your door or in your mailbox.

Use automatic timers to turn lights and radios on and off. Timers can be bought at hardware or department stores for under $10. Set them so lights go on in different rooms at different times.

Don't leave valuable jewelry or papers lying around. Put them in a safe deposit box.

Ask your neighbor to mow your lawn or clean your walks and driveway and then return the favor.

Snatching purses, mugging and picking pockets are not penny-ante crimes. Pickpockets average $124 a "take" and purse snatchers get about $98. That's pretty big bucks for such a simple crime.

Protecting yourself against these crimes just involves common sense, but the following tips are still worth repeating:

—Walk confidently. Be alert. Notice who passes you and who's behind you.

—Don't take shortcuts through parks, tunnels, parking lots or alleys.

—Hold your purse tightly, cose to your body. Keep your wallet in a front pocket or button your hip pocket.

—Carry as little cash as possible.

—Consider carrying a whistle or any type of loud noisemaker. If you're in trouble, use it! If there's a Whistlestop program where you live, your neighbors will hear and call the police. Muggers won't hang around to see what happens next.

During the holiday season, everyone seems to look for that special dessert, whether it is for an elegant dinner party or a quiet holiday dinner for two.

For true elegance, Orange Champagne Souffle is the answer. Not only is it delicious, but with the right equipment it becomes simply luscious in appearance, too. A Pyrex ribbed glass souffle dish shows off the pineapple rings along the sides of the souffle. A plastic collar offers the beauty of a raised souffle. It also eliminates the mess of those wax paper and string collars many cooks find so annoying.

Mincemeat lovers will favor Frozen Mincemeat Cream, an easy-to-prepare dessert requiring only four ingredients. Just mix the four together, freeze and serve garnished with orange peels and pecans. Delightfully easy; delicious to eat.

ORANGE CHAMPAGNE SOUFFLE

Serves 6

- 3 packages (3 ounces each) orange gelatin
- 1½ cups orange juice, heated to boiling
- 3 cups champagne
- 1½ cups heavy cream, whipped
- 1 can (11 ounces) mandarin oranges, drained
- 1 can (1 pound, 4 ounces) sliced pineapple, drained
- Whipped cream and additional mandarin orange sections

Dissolve gelatin in boiling orange juice. Cool and stir in champagne. Chill until slightly syrupy. Fold in oranges and cream. Place three slices of the pineapple on the bottom of a one-quart souffle dish. Place collar on top of souffle dish. Fill dish halfway with souffle mixture. Place remaining pineapple slices around edge of souffle dish against the collar. Pour in remaining souffle mixture. Chill until firm. To serve, run the tip of a sharp knife around the collar and remove collar. Garnish with rosettes of whipped cream and mandarin orange sections.

FROZEN MINCEMEAT CREAM

Serves 4

- 1 cup prepared mincemeat
- ½ cup chopped pecans
- 1 tablespoon rum flavoring
- 1 cup (½ pint) heavy cream, whipped
- Pecan halves
- Petals cut from orange peel

In a bowl, mix mincemeat, pecans and rum flavoring. Fold in whipped cream. Spoon mixture into a one-pint souffle dish. Cover lightly and freeze until hard. Garnish top with pecan halves and orange petals.

Food Stamp Allotments To Increase Jan. 1

Low-income families will get a 2.5 per cent cost-of-food increase in food stamps starting January 1, assistant secretary of agriculture Carol Tucker Foreman said today.

"The January increase will be the smallest in two years because the rise in food prices has slowed in recent months," Foreman said.

The increase reflects the rise in food costs between March and September 1979. By law, the U.S. Department of Agriculture adjusts food stamp allotments twice a year, on Jan. 1 and July 1. The adjustment varies with changes in the cost of economical foods used in the thrifty food plan.

On January 1, the maximum monthly allotment for a family of four with no net income will increase from $204 to $209 in the District of Columbia and all states except Alaska and Hawaii. Nearly all food stamp households will get less than this amount, though, because allotments are reduced if families have income. Currently, food stamp benefits average 37 cents per person per meal.

The maximum food stamp allotments for households of various sizes, effective Jan. 1, as as follows: One-person household $63, Two-person household $115, Three-person household $165, Four-person household $209, Five-person household $248, Six-person household $298, Seven-person household $329, Eight-person household $376.

For each additional member over eight, add $47 per month.

Amount of food stamps an eligible household receives is determined by subtracting 30 per cent of net income from the thrifty food plan amount for the appropriate size household. All households get at least $10 each month.

The above tables, plus others detailing allotments for Alaska, Hawaii and Puerto Rico appeared in the November 6 issue of the Federal Register.

Local Boy Scout Goals Reviewed

Purpose of the Boy Scouts of America is to provide for youth an effective program designed to build desirable qualities of character, train them in responsibilities of participating citizenship, and develop them in personal fitness. This three-fold mission is for boys ranging from eight to 21 years of age and for girls from 14 through 21 years old, states Gordon Przybylski, district scout executive in Thief River Falls.

The Boy Scouts accomplishes this purpose by making its program available through existing groups having compatible goals, including religious, educational, civic, business, labor, fraternal and governmental bodies.

The program for eight to 10-year-old boys is Cub scouts, for 11-18 year old boys is Boy scouts, and for 14-21 year old boys and girls is Explorer posts. They have worked and more than 51 million lives have been directly touched by community organizations in the United States, through their use of the Scouting program, supported by local scout councils and local United Ways, Przybylski said.

Northern Lights Council, BSA, is a recipient of funds from the Thief River Falls United Way. The Northern Lights council is comprised of the state of North Dakota, two counties each of Montana and South Dakota and 18 northwestern counties of Minnesota and currently serves over 20,000 members annually. It is funded by United Ways which provide 45 per cent of its budget. The remaining 55 per cent is funded through sustaining memberships of which Thief River Falls has over 90 members. The council's main office is in Fargo, N.D., with service centers in Grand Forks, Bismarck and Minot, N.D.

With such a large geographic area, the council is divided into "districts". Thief River Falls is the district headquarters for Roseau, Kittson, Marshall, Pennington, Red Lake, Polk, Mahnomen and Norman counties. Within this district there are 60 scout units (Cub scouts, Boy scouts and Explorers) involving nearly 1,200 youth members and over 600 adult scouters. There is one paid professional, Przybylski, who is responsible for the entire scouting program in the eight-county district called the Voyageur Trails district.

Activities of the district include two annual scout expositions held each year at the Thief River Falls sports arena and Crookston national guard armory; spring, fall and winter camporees; Cub scout activity day; father and son overnight camps; monthly roundtable meetings; training sessions; recognition banquets; organization of new scouting units; service of existing units; and membership drives.

These activities and services are the primary factors for the cost of scouting. Other service expenses result from the purchase of training kits and program materials, program literature, maintenance of camp facilities, expense of four service centers who keep membership records, distribute badges, insignia and literature, the equipment needs of summer and winter camps including canoes, boats, rifles, bows, arrows, staff personnel, snow shoes, etc., and professional scouters who work organizing new scout units, recruit and train volunteers, and serve as advisors to their district.

United Way dollars and sustaining membership funds are vital to the growth of the scouting program. Indirectly, and in many cases directly, United Way dollars remain in each community. It is estimated that 98 per cent of every dollar given by United Way or sustaining members stays in the local community in the support of scouting through the services rendered by the local scout council.

United Ways across America continue to support scouting. The Thief River Falls United Way is a vital asset to Boy scouts, the largest youth organization in America.

Anyone wishing more information regarding scouting and-or its relationship to the TRF United Way may contact Gordy Przybylski at 681-7358.

Hog Producers To Share Ideas At Meet Here

Swine producers in the Thief River Falls and surrounding area are invited to attend an organizational meeting Thursday, November 29, at 8 p.m. at the Thief River Falls American Legion club rooms.

Purpose of the meeting scheduled jointly by the agricultural extension service and Northern Minnesota swine producers association will be to share ideas about swine production in this area and discuss ways of improving the profit picture for producers.

Plans are to schedule a series of monthly meetings during the winter at which swine production problems can be discussed in detail. Resource people for these meetings will be drawn from the University of Minnesota agricultural extension service, local veterinarians, AVTI farm management staff, agri-business firms and successful farmers. Problems raised and suggestions offered at the November 29 meeting will be used as guidelines for topics to be covered at subsequent meetings.

Note Increase In Republic Airline Traffic

Republic Airlines recently reported a traffic increase of 17 per cent for the first 10 months as revenue passenger miles flown reached 3.3 billion compared with 2.8 billion a year ago. Passenger boardings gained 12 per cent to 10.4 million from 9.3 million a year earlier.

Airline's cargo ton miles — including freight, mail and express — rose 15 per cent to 26.6 million from 23.2 million.

For October, revenue passenger miles increased 2.6 per cent to 286.8 million from 279.4 million in 1978. Passenger boardings increased to 970,498 from 956,541. Cargo ton miles rose 22 per cent to 3.1 million from 2.5 million.

More than 350,000 persons made jobless by major disasters in the U.S. have received $97 million in Disaster Unemployment Assistance since the program begin 10 years ago, the U.S. Department of Labor reported.

Allow Peat Use From 3 Bogs In Minnesota

Minnesota DNR Commissioner Joseph Alexander has announced that three peat bogs will be available for horticultural leasing during the coming year.

This action ends the moratorium on horticultural leasing that has been in effect since early 1977. The moratorium on leasing peat for energy purposes remains in effect until results of the state's peat study are completed.

A prospectus is being prepared for the first offering, the West Central Lake Bog, St. Louis county. This bog, which represents a prime deposit of sphagnum peat, is also scheduled as a future tailings basin for the Eveleth Taconite company.

The leasing of this bog has been given top priority by the department of natural resources and the DNR expects to entertain bids for this site early in 1980.

The other sites, the Ariberg bog and the Corona Southwest bog located in St. Louis and Carlton counties respectively, are scheduled to have a prospectus prepared, advertised, and bid upon later next year.

For additional information contact: Peat Program Leader, Division of Minerals, Box 45 Centennial Building, St. Paul, MN 55155. (612) 296-4807.

Transportation Funds Available In Rural Areas

Federal funds are available from the Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT) under a new program to provide public transportation services for non-urban Minnesota residents, according to Commissioner Richard P. Braun.

For grant purposes, a rural area is one that has a population of less than 50,000 people, he said.

Minnesota's share of the initial allocation will be about $1.6 million for the state 1980 fiscal year which began July 1, Braun said. Used funds will be carried forward after the first year. Nationwide the new program provides $75 million.

Money obtained can be used for 80 per cent of capital and administrative costs and-or for 50 per cent of net operating costs.

This new program is funded under Section 18 (public transportation financial assistance program) of the urban mass transportation act of 1964, as amended.

Minn. 4-H'ers Win Congress Trips

Sandberg

Quiram

Moeller

Liebenstein

Four Minnesota young people will soon head for Chicago and an exciting week at the 58th National 4-H Congress Nov. 25-29.

Karla Sandberg, 17, of Rosemount; Donald Quiram, 19, of Waterville; Debbie Moeller, 18, of Northfield, and Paul Liebenstein, 19, of Dundas, will receive expense-paid trips as state winners in their 1979 4-H projects.

Selected by the Cooperative Extension Service, the four will be among some 30 Minnesota winners at the Congress.

Sandberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Sandberg, is state winner in the 4-H bread program. She will be a guest of Standard Brands Incorporated while in Chicago. The Dakota County 4-H'er is a high school junior.

An eight-year 4-H member, she has developed techniques that save time and energy while baking. By using thin aluminum pans, for example, she obtains a thin crisp crust. Getting dough to rise presents no problems for this young winner. A bowl of warm water or the pilot lights on the stove provide the necessary warmth.

Quiram, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Quiram, won honors in the 4-H electric energy program. His Chicago host will be Westinghouse Electric Corporation. He has been in 4-H for eight years and is a college sophomore.

The 4-H junior leader has won five grand champion awards at the county level and three at the state fair with his electrical exhibits.

The Le Sueur County 4-H'er plans a career in farming and part-time electrical service.

Moeller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kelvin Moeller, was named state 4-H dairy foods winner. Carnation Company will be her host in Chicago. The Rice County girl has been a 4-H member for seven years and is a high school senior.

A 4-H junior leader, she has been chosen to give special demonstrations at a variety of events. Her work with younger members is, she says, most rewarding. "I feel special pride when one of the members whom I have helped does well."

Liebenstein won the state 4-H agricultural award. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Liebenstein of Rice County. His trip sponsor is International Harvester Company.

A 10-year 4-H'er, he has concentrated on dairy, plant and soil science and junior leadership projects. From his first heifer, he has gone on to build a herd of 16 milking cows and 23 heifers. Having limited barn space has helped a great deal. "I have had to get rid of the unprofitable cows and that has saved money," he says.

Silage Clinic For Dairymen, Beef Farmers

A special silage clinic for dairymen and beef producers will be held at the Best Western in Thief River Falls December 5. University of Minnesota extension specialists will discuss silage feeding and preservation, economics of silage storage systems, forage management and profitability of quality silage.

Extension dairyman Jim Lind will discuss sodium bicarbe and dry cow concerns as they relate to silage feeding, and the latest research on NPN in corn silage. Beef specialist Ray Arthaud will conduct a separate clinic on winter silage feeding, self-feeding, feed additives and NPN.

Agronomist Neal Martin has information for both dairy and beef men on silage additives, preservatives and conditioners. He will look at crop selection for silage, including sunflowers and high moisture grain. Managing crops for quality is his main emphasis.

Ag economist Fred Benson can help with the crop production budget and look at harvest and feeding costs. Profits possible from quality alfalfa and grass will also be discussed. He is prepared to answer questions on silo investment and operating costs and to look at tower storage, oxygen-limiting or bunker.

Lunch will be served at the meeting location. Registration begins at 9:30 a.m., and adjournment is scheduled for 3 p.m.

Tawnya Hamre In State Beef Queen Contest

Tawnya Hamre, Thief River Falls, will be competing for the title of 1980 Minnesota Beef Queen during the second annual convention of Minnesota CowBelles and Minnesota state cattlemen's association at the Sheraton Ritz hotel in Minneapolis November 30 and December 1.

Miss Hamre, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. LaVerne Hamre, is a student at Lincoln high school. Through 4-H she has won many awards and honors with her beef and veterinary science projects.

One of the areas of competition will be a three-minute speech written by each contestant on the topic "Beef Power Through Teen Power" which will be presented during the Friday evening activities.

Northwestern Cowbelles are sponsoring Tawnya in the state competition. Jane Heers, Austin, has represented the state cattle industry as the 1979 Minnesota Beef Queen.

Brooks Mishap Injures Four, Totals Vehicles

Extensive damage to two vehicles and injuries to four persons resulted from a collision at the intersection of highways 59 and 92 near Brooks on Friday about 10 a.m.

A truck tractor driven by Neal Kruger of Villard and leased to North Star Transport of Thief River Falls was traveling south on highway 59 when it was struck on the right side by a car coming from the west on highway 92.

Driver of the car, which reportedly went through the stop sign protecting highway 59 at highway speed, was Bryan Barnett, 20, of Oakes, N.D. Passengers were Steven Anderson, 18, of Ludden, N.D., and John Rony, 18, also of Oakes.

The state patrol officer investigating the crash said the truck cab was torn off by the impact, the axle detached and fuel tanks burst, covering the highway with diesel fuel. Barnett and Anderson were thrown from the car which was also demolished.

The truck driver received cuts in the accident, Anderson was reportedly still hospitalized today and Barnett hospitalized in Thief River Falls for two days. Rony reportedly suffered a broken bone in the left shoulder but was not hospitalized. Barnett has been charged with failure to yield the right-of-way.

Wheat Growers Plan Active Convention

Emphasis on farm programs, with attention on wheat activities, transportation, strikes, gasohol, mainland China and research will be among the topics discussed during the fourth annual Minnesota association of wheat growers convention at the American Inn, East Grand Forks, November 28-29-30.

Davis Helberg, manager of the Port of Duluth, will discuss operations of the port during the recent 82-day strike by the millers' union, which was estimated to have cost the states of Minnesota and North Dakota in excess of $1 billion.

A late addition to the program is Dean Gould, who has been working toward the development of a "wheat pipeline" project. He will discuss the project from start to finish.

"We are looking for a record number of farmers at the convention this year," President Jorgen Knutson of the state growers anticipated. "We have an information-filled program for all day Thursday," he added.

Friday morning program will include a number of reports on activities by members of the growers' organization. One of the strong points for the Friday morning program will be final action on resolutions. "We have a number of meaningful resolutions and others will possibly be added before and during the convention," Knutson asserted.

At the noon luncheon on Thursday, Minnesota commissioner of agriculture Mark Seetin will address the convention.

Final speaker of the Thursday session will be Billy Ray Gowdy, who serves as deputy assistant secretary of agriculture. He will discuss U.S. wheat and world demands.

To Form Senior Federation At Dec. 5 Meeting

Officers and staff of the Minnesota senior federation will be in Thief River Falls on December 5 to assist in organizing a regional senior federation including the counties of Kittson, Roseau, Lake of the Woods, Pennington, Marshall and Red Lake. Staff will be available at 10 a.m. in the city auditorium.

Following several preliminary presentations in this area over the past year, the meeting will culminate in the formation of a sponsoring committee. These representatives will then be in a position to organize a formal regional federation.

In order for this meeting to be a success, the Minnesota senior federation urges all seniors in the region to attend.

Grain Reserve Reopened For 78-79 Crops

Harold Kalsnes, chairman of the Pennington county agricultural stabilization and conservation (ASC) committee, said the local grain reserve contains over two million bushels of grain and he expects this figure to rise over the next few weeks.

Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland recently opened the reserve for 1978 grain under loan and 1979 grain crops eligible for loans.

"This means that all 1978-crop corn, wheat and oats currently under loan and all 1979-crop corn, wheat and oats eligible for loans may be placed in the reserve immediately," Kalsnes said. "The only feed grain not affected is barley, which is not currenly eligible for the reserve because the market price of the crop is above the call level."

Under the program, farmers receive three-year loans and storage payments for holding their grain off the market until prices reach established levels. All reserve commodities reached either release or call levels, according to Kalsnes.

Pennington county producers redeemed 500,000 bushels of the 2.5 million bushels originally in the reserve program. Crops remaining as of November 23 included 220,000 bushels of barley, 2,200 bushels of corn, 1,325,000 bushels of wheat and 535,000 bushels of oats.

The ASCS official said the farmer-owned reserve has exceeded all expectations, not only by improving prices but also by serving as a major stabilizing influence in world markets.

Weatherizing Plan Stalled By Regulation

"The need for energy conservation is there. The money for one program to promote that conservation is there. However, because of some short-sighted department of energy (DOE) regulations, we can't get the program moving," commented Rudy Boschwitz. "It's very frustrating."

Boschwitz on Saturday visited the home of Irene Koering in south Minneapolis. Koering is one of many Minnesotans eligible for a federal program to help with costs of home weatherization and subsequent energy conservation. However, due to the DOE regulations, Boschwitz learned, her application — and most of those from the other Minnesotans — has been stalled.

In a statement made after he returned to Washington, Boschwitz said he will seek to change the encumbering regulations.

"The problem," he explained, "arose when the DOE took over the weatherization program and added a requirement that all money be spent only for materials. Labor to carry out the projects would have to come from CETA.

"In Minnesota, over the last three years approximately $13 million has been appropriated for the program. But because adequate CETA labor has been impossible to find, anywhere from $11 to $5 million of that money remains unspent.

"The only reason the program has moved anywhere at all is because the state legislature granted program administrators $3 million in state money to go out and hire private labor.

"Because of the unavailability of CETA labor in Minnesota, the logical course to follow is to change the regulations and allow part of the money to be spent on hiring workers with the rest to be spent on materials," Boschwitz concluded. "That's what I will attempt in order to make this program work as Congress intended when the weatherization idea was established.

"It's ridiculous that in this time of severe energy problems, we're allowing money to just sit there when it could be helping with conservation and cutting people's fuel costs."

Ability, not disability, is what counts, according to the Presidents' Committee on Employment of the Handicapped.

Restoration Of Buggies Hobby Of Thorsgards

buggy, and a new horse for pulling, along with one that was already broken in. The wagon tipped over, leaving both the riders on the ground.

"It doesn't work when you use an unbroken horse with a broken horse," Eric said. "One of them has to be used to pulling a buggy and the other one has to be at least partially broken in."

"Training varies with each horse," Knute said.

"The more you drive them the better they get," Eric added. "Nellie's good now but she'll probably be better two years from now."

It's easier for both the horse and the passenger to travel by horse and buggy," Eric said. "When you're riding horses you have to move slower, because both the horse and rider get tired after a period of time. With a buggy, the horse can pace himself all the time, and it's easier on him to pull a buggy than to carry a person."

The horse and buggy may be a beginning point for replacing the automobile, especially with high gas prices we are facing today. But this is not the first time the Thorsgards have experienced an expedition without the use of an automobile. Every year for the past 12 years Knute and Eric have traveled to North Dakota — on horseback — to bring the horses to the ranch where Knute works during the summers. And three years ago, Eric led a pack horse all the way to Bemidji following railroad tracks to stay on the path. Nellie again was his companion for the trip.

"It was strange in some of the towns we went through because Nellie would see herself in the store windows and whinny, probably because she thought she saw another horse," he said. "Horses are different than dogs. Dogs rely more on scent, while horses rely more on sight."

And, even though they have not yet made any long distance trips other than to town with the horse and buggy, they intend to, probably in the near future.

Eric feels that the method of transportation is better than using a four-wheel-drive pickup, besides being an enjoyable hobby.

"Who knows," he said. "Someday there may not be any gas, and if that happens, we'll be ready for it."

Sign Ordinance Proposed For Use In City

located within the public right-of-way or easement.

Temporary signs would be allowed for such things as community events, political campaigns and sale or rental of property. Banners would be permitted to advertise events for a period of 14 days and size and time restrictions would be placed on campaign signs in various zones of the city. Construction signs would be allowed on the site of construction projects but could not be illuminated.

Within the neighborhood commercial and downtown fringe zones, only wall signs would be allowed with total sign area not to exceed one square foot for each foot of building frontage. Maximum sign area would be 50 square feet in those areas.

In other commercial and industrial areas businesses would be given two options in the types of signs they would wish to display. Special attention would be paid to residential proximity and free-standing or pylon signs would be set back from the street the same distance as any residential building would be required to be set back.

A graduated table has been developed of size and height of signs in relation to area of location. On local streets and parkways, for instance, where speed is controlled to 30 miles per hour, sign size would be a maximum of 25 square feet of face area and a maximum of 16 feet high. On collector roads where speeds are 30 to 40 miles per hour, sign size woud increase to 35 to 50 square feet and height to 18 to 20 feet.

This increases for arterial roadways and highways, with the maximum size listed being 230 square feet and 32 feet in height along highways where a 55 mph speed limit is posted.

The ordinance would provide that all signs be kept clean, neat, painted and in orderly fashion with the city zoning enforcement officer to have the authority to order repainting, repair or removal of signs which have become dilapidated or are abandoned or which constitute physical hazard to the public safety.

While existing signs may be continued if and when the ordinance is adopted, they would be subject to the following conditions:

(a) Shall not be changed to another non-conforming sign;

(b) Shall not be structurally altered expect to bring into compliance with the ordinance;

(c) Shall not be expanded;

(d) If a sign has ceased to be used for a period of 90 days, it shall not be replaced;

(e) Shall not be reestablished and after damage of more than 50 per cent of sign replacement costs except to bring into compliance.

All except tempory signs would be required to have a building permit with the permit fee based on the standard building permit fee schedule.

Senate Okays Repeal Of Carryover Law

By a margin of 81-4, the Senate this week repealed the carryover basis of inheritance tax law which was to become effective in 1980. Senator Rudy Boschwitz, one of the major supporters of the repeal, called it "a major victory for our nation's family farms and small businesses."

The carryover basis required individuals, when selling inherited property — including farms and family businesses — to pay taxes on the increased value of the property from the time of its original purchase — rather than the time of inheritance. This tax would be in addition to inheritance taxes paid at the time of the original purchaser's death.

Senator Boschwitz, who had worked closely with Senators Byrd and Dole for the repeal, was pleased with their success.

"One of the first things I did when I arrived at the Senate was to go over and meet Harry Byrd and say I was with him in his effort to repeal the carryover basis," Boschwitz said. "It was one of the issues I campaigned on, and I was determined to see it through."

Senator Seeks To Preserve Bus Service

Senator Dave Durenberger has proposed an amendment to the windfall profits tax to preserve commercial inter-city bus transportation. Durenberger said his measure was needed to "reverse the disastrous trend of recent years that has resulted in at least 40 Minnesota communities losing inter-city bus service.

"Nationally, more than 1,700 communities have lost inter-city bus service in the last decade. For most of these cities — and for 14,000 of the 15,000 towns still served by buses — there is no other form of commercial inter-city transportation.

"Maintaining bus routes is especially critical with the cutbacks in Amtrak passenger train service. A large part of western Minnesota is going to be isolated: Willmar, for example, which recently lost Amtrak, only recently picked up bus service. Right now, a lot of the bus service Willmar has is inadequate. Willmar residents can take a bus to Fargo, but only if they're willing to put up with a five-hour layover in Ortonville. We need incentives to maintain bus service and, where possible, to expand the routes.

"The loss of bus service has two important effects for residents of these smaller communities: it cuts off a vital commercial link with other cities and it forces people to consume a lot of gasoline by traveling in their cars," Durenberger said.

The senator proposed his amendment to the windfall profits tax in a letter to Senator Russell Long (D-La.), chairman of the senate committee on finance. The amendment calls for a 10 per cent tax credit for the purchase of inter-city buses.

The senate is scheduled to begin work this week on the Finance Committee's version of the windfall profits tax. Durenberger's amendment will be introduced today (Thursday)

In his letter to Long, Durenberger, a member of the finance committee, said the current version of the windfall profits tax did not focus "enough attention on the energy conservation that can result from selective tax incentives for certain sectors of the transportation industry.

Regularly scheduled inter-city buses average 113 passenger miles per gallon as compared to the private automobile which gets only 41 passenger miles per gallon on the inter-city trip. Despite this great advantage in fuel efficiency, the availability of inter-city bus service continues to diminish because of high capital and maintenance costs in the industry."

Minnesota has lost six and one-half per cent of its routes in the last 10 years. South Dakota has lost 17 per cent, North Dakota 13 per cent, Iowa 11 per cent, and Wisconsin nine per cent. The most serious cutback has been in West Virginia which has lost 43 per cent of its service.

"Compared to other states, Minnesota has managed to maintain fairly healthy bus service," said Durenberger. "But, since the average inter-city bus trip is 120 miles, what is happening throughout the Upper Midwest is of great concern to Minnesotans.

"We have to start promoting energy conservation. Encouraging an energy-efficient transportation industry through efforts like this amendment will help a great deal," said the senator.

PERHAPS AN ANSWER for the question of energy conservation is this buggy completely restored by Eric (pictured) and Knute Thorsgard, and a friend, Kirk Oseid, all of Thief River Falls. The seats and top of the buggy were reupholstered in Fargo. The brothers developed most of their knowledge of horses from their father, they said.

Annual Pay Highest In D.C., Alaska

According to new data published by the U.S. department of labor's bureau of labor statistics, average annual pay of workers covered by state and federal unemployment insurance programs is highest in Alaska and the District of Columbia.

Data, for 1978, was compiled from the records of unemployment insurance programs and covers states as well as standard metropolitan statistical areas.

Average annual pay was computed by dividing total annual payrolls of employers by average monthly employment. Figures approximate the average annual earnings paid to employees in various geographic areas.

Average annual pay was highest in Alaska ($20,487) and the District of Columbia ($16,145). These figures were 68.7 per cent and 32.9 per cent, respectively, above the national average of $12,144. Mississippi ($9,568) and South Dakota ($9,368) were the states with the lowest average pay figures. Average annual pay among states is affected by differences in the industrial and occupational mix of their respective economies as well as differences in basic pay levels of workers.

Distribution of average annual pay among states indicates there are 18 states with averages close to that for the Nation, seven states with averages slightly above the national average, and 19 states with averages slightly below.

Among the 266 selected standard metropolitan statistical areas (SMSAs) Anchorage, Alaska—($20,363; and Flint, Michigan ($16,917) had the highest average annual pay and were 67.6 per cent and 39.3 per cent, respectively, above the national average. Average pay among SMSAs also is affected by differences in the industrial and occupational mix of their labor markets as well as differences in basic pay levels of workers.

IRS Cautions Selection Of Tax Consultant

If you're one of the millions of people who hires a tax consultant or will have a commercial tax preparer do your income tax return for you, the Internal Revenue Service reminds you to take the time to choose an honest, reputable individual. After all, no matter who advises you or fills out your tax return, you are legally responsible for what is on it and carefully selecting a consultant or preparer now could save you trouble later.

Tax consultants and return preparers do not have to be licensed, and while most are honest and competent there is little to stop an unqualified or dishonest person from doing this important work. But, according to the IRS, the dishonest are recognized by some of the claims they make. Does the preparer's advertising guarantee you a refund? That should be a warning since no one can know whether you are entitled to a refund until he or she knows your income, filing status, withholding and dependents. Does the consultant promise that he will shave your last year's tax liability by one-third or less, or that there are some "special loopholes" that he or she is going to share with you? Watch out for consultants or preparers who base their fees on the size of your refund or itemized deductions They may inflate their profit by inflating your refund or deductions, or both.

Some preparers may claim "inside knowledge" of the IRS computer system or a "special relationship" which allows them to know the formula IRS uses to select returns for examination. Don't believe them. Very few people have this information and none of them are return preparers, nor do any preparers have a special relationship with IRS.

Look for a preparer or consultant who's available year-round. In case your return is examined, you may want the preparer or consultant to answer questions about how the return was filled out. At the same time, remember that the preparer is not primarily responsible for the accuracy of the information on the return.

Once you've found a preparer, you can protect yourself by signing only a return which is complete, correct and permanent. Never sign a blank return or one made out in pencil and insist that the preparer sign the return in the space provided below your signature. Make sure that any refund due is mailed directly to you. That way you'll know the return was sent in the way you signed it, and that you're getting all of your refund.

When selecting a return preparer or tax consultant, choose as wisely as you would were you selecting a family doctor or an auto mechanic.

SCH. Program Aids Children With Handicap

Helping children who have handicaps is a bigger job than it used to be.

The reason, say health officials, is not that there are more children with problems now, but that the definition of "handicapped" has been expanded to include more children. Health authorities are placing a special emphasis on aiding children with handicaps right now, as part of the United Nations-sponsored international year of the child observance.

"Handicapped" used to mean roughly the same thing as "crippled," notes Dr. Richard Nelson, of the state Health department's services for children with handicaps (SCH) program. "We used to think of a handicapped child as one with orthopedic problems, caused by a crippling disease," said Dr. Nelson.

"Now, however, a handicap might be a chronic disease, like asthma or juvenile onset diabetes, or a learning disability. We now recognize a much broader variety of problems as handicaps, and a problem doesn't have to be as severe as it once did before we consider it a handicap."

Purpose of the SCH program, said Dr. Nelson, is to find children with possible handicaps and refer them for diagnosis and treatment. SCH holds over 350 "field clinics" each year, at locations throughout Minnesota, to screen children for handicapping conditions.

Clinics are staffed by physicians, public health nurses, and other health and human service professionals, said Dr. Nelson. In addition to "general diagnostic" clinics, SCH offers clinics which deal with facial and dental problems, speech and hearing problems, heart problems, and other more specific kinds of handicaps. Services of an orthopedist and a pediatrician are usually available at a general clinic, and "appropriate specialists" staff the other clinics.

Dr. Nelson emphasized that the clinics are free. If a child needs further attention, parents may have to share the cost of treatment with SCH. How much they pay will depend on their income level.

SCH clinics accept referrals from schools and parents, as well as physicians and public health professionals, said Dr. Nelson. But while parents are encouraged to contact SCH directly, the SCH staff may suggest that a child see a local health professional before participating in a clinic. "We try to find a balance," said Dr. Nelson. "We want to make our program available to as many people as possible, but we also want to make sure people are making proper use of the service we provide. That way, we can concentrate our resources where they're most needed."

SCH was set up under a federal law, and the federal government shares the cost of the program with Minnesota on a matching-fund basis. Similar programs now operate in all 50 states.

Shoplifters Add To Inflation Lower Morals

One out of every 12 shoppers is fighting double digit inflation with the five finger discount.

National retail merchants association reports that out of 500 shoppers kept under surveillance in a large metropolitan department store 42 had shoplifted by the end of the day.

According to the FBI Uniform Crime Report, a total of 615,781 persons were apprehended for shoplifting in 1977. However, department store security firms estimated that no more than one in 20 shoplifters is ever caught and less than one half of those caught are prosecuted.

A spokesman for Americans united to rediscover America (AURA) a nationwide voluntary organization dedicated to rediscovery of the traditional American values of honesty, integrity and thus leading to crime prevention, said that shoplifting is a major contributor to rising prices and inflation.

"For every $10 theft enough additional merchandise must be sold to pay that $10 out of profits before the normal cycle can be resumed," he said. "If a store makes a five per cent profit on that $10 item, for example, the merchant must sell $200 worth of merchandise. The additional cost is passed along to the honest customer who pays for the dishonesty of others."

The U.S. Department of Commerce says that shoplifting is one of the fastest growing crimes in the nation. Since 1972, it has increased 50 per cent. Forbes magazine estimates that it's now increasing at a compound rate of 15 per cent a year.

Last year, retailers lost $7.2 billion to shoplifters. But that's just the tip of the iceberg, officials note.

Commerce Department says that crime costs American business over $30 billion a year. The U.S. chamber of commerce, which includes white collar crime by employees and executives of businesses, puts the price tag at $40 billion yearly.

Inventory shrinkage, a polite term for stealing from one's employer, is estimated at more than $6 billion a year by the commerce department. For every dollar's worth of merchandise that a shoplifter grabs, a store employee will take three. Much of what is taken seldom gets into statistics, but the penny ante things total in the billions of dollars.

Thefts committed by employees, a commerce report says, are behind at least 60 per cent of all crime-related losses. Thirty per cent of all business failures are attributal to dishonesty by employees.

Security World magazine adds another alarming note by saying that as many as 80 per cent of any company's hired help will commit dishonest acts unless management deters them.

Because shoplifting and stealing from employers is a non-violent crime, the AURA spokesman said, it does not create urgency on the part of the public and police to prosecute.

"It's important to keep in mind that shoplifting costs are passed on in the form of higher prices for goods," AURO said. "If Americans do nothing about shopl'",g and just accept higher prices as part of inflation, it will affect their lifestyle and individual freedom. A social climate where stealing is an accepted part of life will lead to personal restrictions and inconvenience."

AURA suggest that individuals can take positive action to reduce shoplifting by speaking out when someone talks about their great bargain that was stolen, teaching children that shoplifting is a crime, not a game, taking an active interest; telling store personnel if something suspicious is sighted.

If you own a business, action can also be taken by adopting codes of ethics for employees, making workers feel a real part of the business, using security equipment to take away temptation, buying only from known vendors; unknown purveyors may be offering stolen goods.

Individuals and businesses who want additional details on how they can do something to cut the costs of shoplifting may write to Americans united to rediscover America (AURA), Suite 625, 500 Skokie Blvd., Northbrook, Illinois 60053.

Fun With Figures

Free agents signing contracts with major league baseball teams are picking off dollar figures which would seem far beyond their ability to produce. Among recent notables are Dave Goltz, former Minnesota Twins pitcher, and Nolan Ryan, formerly of the California Angels.

Goltz, a fairly consistent if not an outstanding player, is reported to have snared a six-year, $3 million contract from the Los Angeles Dodgers. A native of Rothsay, his heart may have been in Minnesota but his wallet is in California.

Ryan did even better, parlaying a well-known name and what is considered to be the major leagues' fastest fastball into a four-year contract with the Houston Astros at a million dollars a year. Let's look at that a little closer.

Assuming good health (not a likely assumption in Ryan's case) and absence of injury, Ryan would probably get 30 to 40 starts next season. For easy figuring, let's say he starts 40 games. Sometimes he will finish the game but most of the time he won't. Sometimes he will get shelled in the early innings. Again for easy figuring, let's say he averages 100 pitches a game — more for a complete game, less for an early shower. That's 4,000 pitches a year.

At $1 million a season, that figures out to $250 a pitch. If he throws that 100 mph fastball every pitch — which he can't, of course — that would break down to $2.50 for every mile per hour of every pitch he throws. Drivers don't get fined that much for speeding!

Goltz' employment can be figured a little differently. He is only making $500,000 a year. If he pitches 40 games that average no more than three hours in length, he will be actively employed for 120 hours. For actual productive work time, he would get paid better than $4,160 an hour. Considering that half of that game time his team would be at bat and he would be sitting in the dugout, boost that figure to $8,320 an hour.

Now, everyone knows that professional baseball is full-time work and that professional athletes are involved in training and conditioning year-around. But they can still find time in their schedules to work in some endorsements and appearances which fatten the take-home tab substantially.

On can't fault the players too much. Their careers are generally short and they should barter as best they can with their abilities. The fault lies with the owners who pay such outrageous fees for service.

Calvin Griffith of the Twins is despised by many for his parsimonious attitude toward hiring players. The Minnesota club has lost a number of high quality players to clubs willing to pay more. But Griffith keeps coming up with young ballplayers with some ability and a lot of heart, a combination that makes for entertaining and interesting if not necessarily pennant-winning baseball.

There are owners who attempt to buy pennants by price-tagging players far above their actual value and giving their fans high hopes and bitter disappointments. Witness the 1979 New York Yankees with some of the finest talent money can buy — and bought.

Who would you rather watch play — an aggregation of super stars with their attendant hang-ups and self-centered play or a gritty bunch of scrappy youngsters who love the game and win because they don't realize they should lose?

Calvin may be tight-fisted, but he isn't all wrong. While we play around with figures of $250 pitches and $8,320 an hour salaries, he can smile at the figures in his bank book. And after all, that's probably the most fun.

Just Pass A Law

Often it seems that the legislators of our country at all levels of government believe they can solve problems by passing laws and apply that solution to all manner of problems.

Two books published by Doubleday & Company would serve to illustrate the point. They are "You Can't Eat Peanuts in Church and Other Little-Known Laws" by Barbara Seuling and "This Is The Law?" by Nigel Napier Andrews. There are some of the illegalities they have unearthed:

+ The Illinois legislation that made it illegal to teach your household pet to smoke a cigar.
+ The Santa Ana, California, law that made it illegal to swim on dry land.
+ The Manitoba legislation which forebade anyone from selling garter snakes or elks' teeth without a license.
+ The interesting law, passed by the Canadian city of Edmonton, requiring bicycle riders to signal with an arm before making a turn. However, it required the rider to keep both hands on the handlebars at all times.
+ The Canadian Armed Forces have intriguing rules about fainting on parade. If the faint is unavoidable, the solider must turn his body 45 degrees to the right, squat down, roll to the left, and retain control of his rifle to avoid damage to the weapon.
+ The North Carolina law which made it illegal to sing out of tune.
+ Light sleepers would have instant sympathy for the ordinance in Dunn, N.C., that forbade a sleeper to snore and disburb a neighbor.
+ Who could argue with the intent of the Boston health law which stipulated that "a lodger shall not be lodged for more than seven consecutive nights unless he shall have taken a shower or bath"?
+ And then there's the law reported to be still on the books in Gary, Indiana, which requires garlic eaters to stay off street cars for one hour after eating garlic. Hardly long enought to make a difference!

Don't Blame Time

"To accuse time of causing your lack of accomplishments is like blaming the thermometer for the heat or cold," states Bob Conklin, chairman of the board of Personal Dynamics, in discussing the thought that people must manage their lives, not their time.

Conklin points out that it is impossible to "save" time, for it can not be stored for use when needed. Neither can it be managed, although seminars are held often on the subject. Nor does time go by, he adds. It stays; we go. The excuse that "I don't have time" is not usually valid, for people do the things they find pleasing and then claim there is not enough time for larger achievements.

"Look inwardly to the way you are managing yourself rather than outwardly to the uncontrollable passing of time," Conklin suggests. "Forget about time. Think in terms of accomplishment. Decides what it is you want to get done and then stick to it until it is finished. . . If you're uptight about time, remember it's not time but your attitude toward time that is causing the difficulty."

He tells of a portion of the book "Zadig, A Mystery of Fate" by French author Voltaire. In the passage, the following question is put to Zadig by the Grand Magi:

"What, of all things in the world, is the longest and the shortest, the most divisible and the most extended, the most neglected and the most regretted, without which nothing can be done, which devours all that is little and enlivens all that is great?"

Zadig's answer: "Time.

"Nothing is longer, since it is the measure of eternity.

"Nothing is shorter since it is insufficient for the accomplishment of your projects.

"Nothing is more slow to him that expects; nothing more rapid to him that enjoys.

"In greatness it extends to infinity, in smallness it is infinitely divisible.

"All men neglect it; all regret the loss of it; nothing can be done without it.

"It consigns to oblivion whatever is unworthy of being transmitted to posterity, and it immortalizes such actions as are truly great."

Conklin concludes with this bid of advice written thousands of years ago in the Sanscrits:

"Look well to this day, for it, and it alone, is life. In the brief course of this day lie all the varieties and realities of your existence. Yesterday is but a memory, and tomorrow but a vision. But today well lived makes each yesterday a memorial of happiness, and each tomorrow a dream of hope. Look well, therefore, to this day, for it, and it alone, is life. Such is the salutation of the dawn."

Borrowed Nonsense:

An eighth grade teacher gave her students an aptitude test to find out what they were best suited for. It turned out most were best suited for seventh grade.

The new member of a foursome complained constantly about the golf course. On the eighth hole he grumbled, "Aren't the traps on this course terrible?" "Sure are," replied one of the group, "but it would help if you kept yours shut."

"Plenty of doctors told me to stop smoking," George Burns is quoted as saying. "They're all dead now."

Minn. 4-H'ers Earn Top Awards

Anderson

Gaasland

Boettcher

Three young people from this area have been awarded state or sectional honors for their 1979 4-H projects. They are Lisa Anderson, 18, of Lyon County; Karen Gaasland, 17, of Pope County, and Brian Boettcher, 17, of Chippewa County.

As state winner in the 4-H food preservation program, Anderson will receive an expense-paid trip to the 58th National 4-H Congress in Chicago Nov. 25-29. Her trip is provided by Kerr Glass Manufacturing Corp. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lester W. Anderson, of Balaton, she is a freshman at South Dakota State University, Brookings.

Last year the 10-year 4-H member assisted at a community food canning clinic, where she showed slides on the dangers of improper canning techniques.

Gaasland won both state and sectional honors in the veterinary science program. She will receive a Congress trip and a $50 U.S. savings bond donated by The Upjohn Company. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Johnnie Gaasland, of Glenwood, she is a high school senior.

The 4-H'er has raised several generations of fruit flies to study heredity, and helped her father research better ways of treating pinkeye in the family's herd of registered Hereford cattle.

Boettcher was named state winner in the 4-H gardening program and received a $50 U.S. savings bond donated by Ortho Consumer Products Division, Chevron Chemical Company. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harlan Boettcher, of Montevideo.

The high school junior maintains a cooperative vegetable gardening project with his sister. They have expanded their operation to one acre and sell much of their produce. The youth now tends 15 apple trees in addition to the vegetable garden.

Awards were arranged by National 4-H Council, and winners were chosen by the Cooperative Extension Service.

Reforming Our Welfare System

The U.S. House of Representatives has passed the Welfare Reform Act, but I am afraid this version is not what the people want or need and I believe "welfare reform" will not actually take place.

Historically, welfare costs have been on the rise and year after year nothing has been done to bring this program, which does not necessarily serve the requirements of those who need it most, under control. The House had an opportunity to begin taking positive action to improve our current system for both recipients and taxpayers by supporting alternative legislation, but decided instead to continue operating under the giveaway philosophy.

I must make it clear that I understand welfare assistance must be provided for those people who are truly needy and cannot make ends meet on their own. I also think it is important to understand that quite frequently the current welfare program also benefits those people who are able to work but opt instead for the easy way out by applying for welfare.

The Welfare Reform Act, as passed by the House, establishes a national income level for Aid for Families and Dependent Children and food stamp benefits for needy families with children at 65 per cent of the poverty level. It also increased the earned income tax credit for the working poor, and increased Federal participation in AFDC costs.

I supported an alternative to this bill introduced by Republican Members of the House. This alternative provided a mechanism for the Federal government to provide block grants to states so as to allow them to develop their own welfare programs based on the needs of the state. Also included were provisions to allow states to establish work requirements for those people requesting welfare assistance.

The key to effective welfare reform should be to encourage programs which work to reduce the expanding welfare roles, not proliferate them. The House passed version is, however, what I believe to be counter-productive to this philosophy and is the first step toward providing a guaranteed income for everyone regardless of whether they want to work or not. This expensive program will act to increase the number of welfare recipients and increase the billions of tax dollars needed to pay for higher demand.

I strongly support programs designed to encourage people to work for the assistance they receive. There are people who are unable to work and have extenuating circumstances within their families which will not allow them to work, and they should be excused, but for those who are able, work is the only answer.

The idea is not new. The city of San Diego, California, is currently experimenting with a program they call "Workfare." The idea is that it ties the reception of food stamps to job placement. According to San Diego county officials, data after 90 days shows that of 415 applications, 50 worked in public service jobs for the equivalent of wages in food stamps and 32 people found jobs. They also say that 330 of the 415 applicants refused to work or did not show up on the job, thus resulting in their disqualification from the food stamp program.

I am of the opinion that there are no free lunches for those who are able to work, and I am sorry to see that the House had taken this unfortunate attitude which will continue to rob the working middle class to pay for those who could work. Establishing workfare type programs is a necessity. The taxpayers of this country can no longer afford a "no-working class," with the exception of those truly in need. With true "welfare reform" the welfare rolls would be reduced, the governments would benefit from additional income taxes and there would be more money to help those people in need.

USDA Requests Reconstituted Milk Proposals

Dairy farmers, milk handlers and consumers have until January 15 to submit additional proposals for review at a possible hearing on the pricing of reconstituted milk under all federal milk marketing orders. U. S. Department of agriculture officials also will accept comments on whether a hearing should be conducted on the reconstituted milk issue.

P.R. Smith, assistant secretary of agriculture for marketing and transportation services, said a hearing has been requested to consider removing reconstituted milk from the Class I pricing provisions of the orders. Reconstituted milk is formed by combining whole milk powder or nonfat dry milk with water. Currently, all milk products used for fluid consumption are priced at the Class I level, the highest-priced class under the federal milk orders.

Smith said the hearing was requested by the Community nutrition institute, a non-profit organization specializing in food and nutrition issues, and by a fluid milk processor and three individual consumers.

Changes in the milk orders, Smith said, must be based on evidence received at a public hearing. Handlers, producers and consumers may testify at the hearing. Any changes finally adopted by the department must be approved by the dairy farmers who would be affected before the changes can be put into effect.

Federal milk marketing orders set minimum prices which milk handlers or dealers must pay farmers for milk as it enters the marketing system. Orders do not set retail prices. Milk order programs are authorized under the Agricultural marketing agreement act.

Information on the hearing request and procedures for submitting proposals and comments are scheduled to appear in the November 16 Federal register. Comments and proposals with three copies, should be sent to the deputy administrator, Marketing Program Operations, Agricultural Marketing Service, USDA, Washington, D.C., 20250.

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

It seems like everytime the teachers have a contract renewal and have difficulty with it they start crying to the public in various ways, trying to get people to react in their favor by pressuring school board members to go along with their proposals. I wonder if any of these people asked themselves if they might be asking too much; maybe this is why they are having problems with a contract settlement.

They talk about salaries and catching up to other school districts in salaries. I think if you figured out their wages on a per hour basis they do all right, considering most of them work only nine months a year or less with extra holidays.

I would like to see these people work in the private sector for a few years and I'm sure they would realize teaching wasn't so bad after all. I have always found out that a door swings both ways.

They talk about reducing class size. This creates for them job security and also the hiring of other teachers who will be paid with the taxpayers' money. I realize teachers pay taxes too, but they benefit from them a little more directly than the rest of us. With the decline in enrollment predicted I can't see paying any more than we need to in extra teachers' salaries.

They keep mentioning the one million dollars in fund balance we have. I find this balance very refreshing as I'm sure there are alot of school districts who are not as fortunate as this and would like to be in the same shape financially as we are. Why do the teachers think our fund balance should be spent on their salaries?

I am glad our school board members are showing restraint in using this money and keeping us operating in the black. I wish some of our other elected officials would do the same.

Opinion Given On Truck Deregulation

Since Congress approved the motor carrier act in 1935, approximately half the nation's freight moved by truck has been under economic regulation, states Ed Grady, manager of the information division of the Minnesota Farm Bureau Federation.

Except for the movement of most unprocessed agricultural products and not-for-hire trucks, the Interstate Commerce commission (ICC) decides who can enter the trucking business, supervises rate-making and decides where a trucker can haul a particular commodity. Later amendments to the act of 1935, over the veto of President Harry Truman, also gave regulated truckers the right to collectively decide among themselves what rates will be charged shippers. "For most other businesses, that would be a definite violation of antitrust laws," Grady says.

"Since the day of the Truman administration, every U.S. president has advocated deregulation or regulatory reform of truck transportation. Last year, a breakthrough came with almost total deregulation of the airline industry. Overall the result has been produced passenger fares, more competition, better service and an improved profit picture for the airline companies," he adds.

The focus on Congress now is on reducing the heavy hand of the federal government in the regulation of trucking and railroading. Many of the railroads are chronically ailing and it appears Congress intends prescribing more freedom to operate and compete in the market before turning its attention to the truck issue.

In what some have called "an unholy alliance," the regulated truckers and the Teamsters union are actively opposing legislation to bring about far-reaching, meaningful reform. At the same time, both groups are proposing their own bills. However, they would achieve only minor changes, leaving intact the ICC's basic authority to ration the right to be in the trucking business and approve collective rate-making.

One of the major arguments of those who oppose a greatly reduced role for the ICC and to allow competition a much greater role in rate-making and deciding who can enter the trucking business is that deregulation, or major regulatory reform, would pose a serious threat to rural areas and small cities.

The contention is that if the government permitted freer entry into trucking and outlawed collective rate-setting, most trucking concerns would discontinue service to small towns. Further, the claim is that the only reason such service is provided now is that the common carrier obligation of the ICC law requires it — profitable or not.

"Farm Bureau, with more than three million member families in some 2,800 small communities in 49 states and Puerto Rico, submits that threatened loss of service to small towns in a less regulated environment just would not materialize. We know of no credible evidence that supports this scare tactic," Grady says.

"We believe the evidence is overwhelming that less government and bureaucratic red tape in the trucking business, along with more freedom and competition, will result in better service to all — including those on farms, in small towns and in rural America. We agree with U.S. transportation secretary Neil Goldschmidt who has assured Congress that small towns would benefit, not suffer, if federal regulations of the trucking industry were to be relaxed."

According to Goldschmidt, a recent department of transportation (DOT) study showed that the ICC does not now ensure small town service and that such communities at present are not receiving the kind of service to which they are entitled. On a related note, a study by the U.S. department of agriculture (USDA) indicates that more than 80 per cent of the service currently provided rural America is provided by truckers not regulated by the ICC.

"We in agriculture know that unregulated trucking works well, since we never went along with including agricultural products in the motor carrier act of 1935," Grady said. "What is more, most truck transportation of unprocessed agricultural products is performed by non-regulated, owner-operator, independent truckers who respond to the demands of the market and provide excellent service to agriculture.

"One can enter a food store in any small hamlet in this country any day of any week and find a supply of fresh eggs. Some might assume that a super agency of the federal government is responsible for deciding where eggs are needed and when, and responsible for getting them to the right place, at the right time and at the right price. However, experience suggests that if such were the case, we would never be able to depend upon having eggs in the supermarket when we wanted them. Odds are even, too, they would cost more. How is it managed now? By the free operation of the marketplace, supplying consumer needs through competition. No better system has ever been devised," Grady said.

"It is difficult to understand why a heavily financed and large group of business men who are regulated by a heavy-handed federal bureaucracy are stoutly supporting and defending the regulators. Perhaps their average of 18 per cent profit on equity has a bearing on it; too much competition might lower that profit level.

"As for the Teamsters union and its grip on the regulated trucking industry, it is evident it wants to retain the regulated system. Organizing individual owner-operators is a very difficult task. Regulatory reform for the Teamsters would no doubt mean loss of some of the economic and political clout they now wield.

"Thus the battle lines are being drawn. Are we really serious when we call for less regulation and less bureaucracy? Do we really believe in the competitive system? If so, there is no plausible reason why that principle cannot be applied to transportation," Grady concludes.

MFU President Urges Change In Food Views

Changes in public attitude and public understanding are needed for family farm agriculture to maintain its standing in rural America in the 1980's, the president of the Minnesota Farmers union (MFU) said Sunday.

Addressing the 38th annual convention of the Minnesota Farmers union, MFU president Cy Carpenter said that the political darling of the east coast, the west coast and the large population centers has been a "cheap food policy".

"Let's tell it like it is," he said. "Too much of our educational system and too many of our agricultural economists have in effect told the public they should expect cheaper and cheaper food by glorifying the 'big', 'efficient', 'capital intensive' farms. They failed to educate the public that continued decline in the number of family farms damages the well-being of rural America and will cost the consumer in the end," he said.

Carpenter noted that the U.S. department of agriculture predicted last week that not only will next year's "take home" net farm income not gain by seven per cent in the guidelines, but that it will actually drop by 20 per cent. Ironically, he said, that 20 per cent of net farm income would be more than enough to take care of Chrysler's much-publicized problems.

Chrysler will likely be bailed out by the government"... and perhaps it should. But what about agriculture," he questioned. "With Chrysler we're told that bankruptcy would mean loss of jobs, disruption of the pension system and a severe impact on our economy. With agriculture we're told that bankruptcy is part of the free enterprise system," he said.

Too often the public and the news media focus their attention on "skyrocketing food costs" or "food leading the inflationary spiral" or "growing farm assets" resulting from land values, he said. But they fail to learn that farm prices and income have been held far below inflated production and living costs. They also fail to look at the "true food costs: production costs, marketing costs, speculation costs, advertising costs, restaurant costs, waste food costs and junk food costs," he further said.

"They (the public) need to be told that continuing a cheap food policy at the expense of the family farm agriculture will be just as devasting as the evergy situation we allowed to develop that triples and quadruples our energy costs because we did not prepare for our needs from our own sources," Carpenter said.

Farmers do have institutions that can work for them. The present farm program, although too low in target and loan prices, has the proper structure and can and will be improved, he said.

Farmer cooperatives have proven their value and will be strengthened and reshaped to meet the challenge farmers face in energy, transportation and other needs, he continued.

Finally, "farmers still have pride in their work and what they produce, and in the make-up and well-being of their community," Carpenter said, "which will be most important if they are to meet the needs of the future."

$100 Million DU Milestone Accomplished

After more than four decades of conservation pioneering across the Canadian wetlands where more than 70 per cent of North America's waterfowl are produced, Ducks Unlimited announces that it has raised its 100 millionth dollar on behalf of waterfowl.

Commenting on the non-profit organization's $100,000,000 landmark, Ducks Unlimited President S. Preston Williams said, "To put our growth into some kind of perspective, it's significant to note that, although DU is 42 years old, we have raised $51,000,000 — 51 per cent of this record total — since 1976. Eighty per cent of our funds have been generated within this decade, and over 90 per cent achieved in the last 19 years. We have grown at a rate of over 25 per cent compounded annually since 1965; due in large part to the volunteer fund-raising effort of DU area committees nationwide."

The $100,000,000 milestone was reached November 15 during the Charleston, S.C. annual fund-raising banquet, held this year aboard the aircraft carrier U.S.S. Yorktown. To highlight this occasion, Ducks Unlimited's first national secretary and 1941 president E. Herrick Low, presented a symbolic $10 contribution to national DU president S. Preston Williams, chairman of the board Henry J. Nave, chairman of DU's executive committee Gaylord Donnelley and past president Herman Taylor Jr. Over 1,200 people were in attendance on the carrier's hangar deck to witness the ceremony.

"We have much to be proud of today," said president Williams, "for aside from the obvious tribute to the American sportsman's dedication to wetland conservation, the $100,000,000 also represents an unprecedented international effort by three nations to ensure a future for North America's waterfowl resource. Without Canada's vital breeding habitat, Mexico's wintering marshes and U.S. fund-raising dollars to bolster both these areas, the prospects of keeping this continent's ducks and geese on the wing would be marginal at best."

Williams went on to say that nearly 80 per cent of the $100,000,000 riased during the organization's 42-year history is being channeled directly into wetland habitat projects. The DU president also added that it is "altogether fitting the record-dollar sum be recorded aboard a ship whose historic battles to preserve America's ideals has much in common with Ducks Unlimited's fight to conserve North America's wetland habitat."

Night Hunters Are Nailed At Carlos Avery

A pair of unsuccessful deer hunters from the Twin Cities who failed to bag a deer over the opening weekend near Mora were arrested about 10:30 p.m. Sunday night trying to better their luck in the Carlos Avery wildlife management area.

Hunters are not allowed in the area after 10 p.m. and state conservation officers were following the men when a deer ran through the headlights of the hunter's car.

One man emerged with a rifle in his hands but the deer ran off into the darkness. The suspects backed the car crosswise on the road in an attempt to pick up the deer in the lights.

After the car was pulled over by the officers an uncased deer rifle was discovered along with several shells.

The men were charged with deer shining and transporting an uncased firearm in a motor vehicle. They spent the night in the Anoka county jail and their automobile was seized.

After arraignment the two men will be bound over for trial to the district court, said DNR enforcement officials.

DNR Selects A Rural Fire Specialist

A new administrator of the Department of Natural Resources', program of assisting rural fire departments with equipment and funds was announced by the department's forestry division.

Named to the post was Carson Berglund, a graduate of the U of M college of forestry and a 10 year employee of the division of forestry.

Prior to his new appointment, Berglund was stationed for five years at Bemidji, was promoted to assistant area forester in 1974 and transferred to Lake City, and in 1975 went to Hill City where he spent considerable time on fire suppression duties.

He underwent intensified training in fighting forest fires, has served as a volunteer fire department member and as crew boss of a specialized firefighting unit composed of DNR forestry personnel.

He and his crew were recently sent to assist in fire suppression on the Mount Baker national forest in northern Washington.

In his newest post, Berglund will direct a program which transfers excess military equipment to rural fire departments. The program also provides cost sharing funds and helps train rural community fire departments in wild fire suppression.

Voyageur Park Private Lands To Be Hunted

Private lands within Voyageurs national park will be opened to hunting and trapping on December 1, it was announced last week by Minnesota Commissioner of Natural Resources Joseph Alexander.

The park was established as a game refuge in 1976 by former Commissioner Robert Herbst as a temporary measure until the federal government could purchase all of the private property within the park boundaries, or establish federal authority.

But, said Alexander, the federal government has moved with "snail-like slowness" to acquire these lands and there are still 7,700 acres in private ownership.

"As commissioner of this department," he said, "I cannot in good conscience let a state regulation stand that deprives a landowner of his reasonable use of his property. If the federal authorities wish this private land to remain a sanctuary, then I believe it should be done by federal purchase or regulation, not by state intervention and not by the device of a hastily established game refuge."

Alexander's decision means that, barring federal action, various small game species on which the season remains open may be hunted on private lands within the park.

A 1980 St. Paul Winter Carnival MS sno rally "500" Duluth to St. Paul snowmobile run has been given the "green light" by Winter Carnival and MS officials for February 1 and 2.

Sponsored by the St. Paul Winter Carnival, Arctic Cat Enterprises and the Duluth area association of snowmobile clubs, and endorsed by the Minnesota united snowmobilers association (MUSA), the two day trip is expected to raise in excess of $50,000.

Arctic Cat will pay for lodging and meals for all riders, as well as offering a new Arctic Cat Jag to the person who solicits the most pledges.

Featured in the ride will be Matt Blair, Minnesota Vikings linebacker, Edgar Hetteen, of Thief River Falls inventor of the snowmobile; and Little Joe Laznick, KDAL radio of Duluth.

The "500" is open to all Minnesota snowmobilers. Anyone interested should contact the MS Office at 870-1500 or toll-free at 1-800-582-5296.

United States Olympic hockey team has requested and been granted a date change for the game with the Lakers in Warroad. Originally set for January 27, this game has been changed to Sunday, February 3 at 2 p.m. at the arena in Warroad.

Olympic team's February schedule includes February 3 at Warroad; February 5 against Canada Olympic team at Detroit, Mich.; February 9 against the Russians at Madison Square Garden, New York; and February 12 the Olympic games begin at Lake Placid.

Solar Energy Systems Are Mostly Simple

Solar energy systems are not as complicated as many Americans believe. In fact, solar technology is "surprisingly simple," and is already cutting energy costs for thousands of U.S. homeowners according to a free publication from the National wildlife Federation entitled, "Solar Energy and the Homeowner."

The new 16-page pamphlet is an introduction to commonly-used solar energy systems. "Hot water and pool heating are the most common applications for solar systems, with space heating becoming less expensive as the market rapidly expands," explains the publication. Solar electricity via power lines, however, will probably not arrive until 1990, barring some major technological breakthrough.

In California alone, there are already 10,000 domestic water heaters and 3,000 space heating and cooling systems.

Basic solar systems — active, passive, direct, indirect, air, and liquid — are explained in the pamphlet with diagrams illustrating how the systems work. In addition, there's a section on how to assess your "solar potential." For example, before considering installation of a solar system, homeowners "must make certain the house is well insulated to minimize heat loss," the booklet advises. Climate, available sunshine, exposure, and the structure of the home must also be considered.

Because there are currently no industry-wide standards for solar equipment, the publication warns consumers to deal only with licensed contractors, obtain and check carefully references from the contractor's past customers, and investigate a contractor's credentials with local solar organizations and the Better Business Bureau.

"Solar Energy and the Homeowner" is available free for the first copy and 25 cents for each additional copy by writing: National Wildlife Federation, Dept SE, 1412 16th Street, N.W., Washington, DC 20036.

Guest Column
by Joseph N. Alexander
Commissioner
Minnesota DNR

"My decision to open private lands within Voyageurs National Park to hunting and trapping was based on the simple concept of fair play.

"Long before this park was established by the United States Congress and the U.S. Department of the Interior, the area was open to hunting and trapping. Historically, this site has been a traditional favorite with sportsmen of the International Falls area.

"At the request of the federal government, the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources in 1976 declared a moratorium on hunting and trapping in the area. The position of federal officials was that national parks lands are closed to such uses. They requested that the DNR order closure until private lands within the park boundaries could be acquired and federal authority established.

"Then DNR Commissioner, Robert Herbst, agreed to the request with the understanding that the federal government would move with reasonable speed on private land acquisition.

"Three years have elapsed since that date and there are still approximately 7,700 acres of private lands within the park boundaries awaiting purchase.

"Picture yourself in the position of these private land owners. You still own the lands involved yet you have been forced to surrender certain property rights. You did so with the understanding that your lands would be purchased within a reasonable period of time. It is now three years later and you are still in the same position.

"As Commissioner, I cannot in good conscience allow a regulation to stand which deprives a landowner of the reasonable use of his property.

"If federal authorities want the private land to remain a sanctuary this should be accomplished by federal purchase or by federal regulation — not by inaction or state intervention or the device of a hastily established game refuge.

"My decision means that, barring federal action, various small game species on which the season remains open may be hunted on private lands within the Voyageurs National Park boundaries. This land will also be opened to trapping within the framework of DNR regulations.

"The deer season in that part of the state will have closed for the year before December 1. Because of the legal requirements of giving lengthy notices prior to withdrawing an order creating a game refuge, it was not possible to open these lands to hunting and trapping before the deer season closed.

"If nothing else, it is my conviction that my decision will enable private landowners to use their land as fee owners in the manner they planned when they originally acquired it. It may or may not hasten purchase to remove the refuge, but it will indicate my belief in state's rights and my confidence in the owners' ability to manage and conserve our resources."

DNR Reminds Ice Fishermen Of Regulations

Ice fishermen are allowed to use two lines while open water anglers are restricted to only one line. Last year, for the first time, the use of "tip ups" became legal and ice fishermen are allowed to use a tip up on each line.

Officials pointed out that anglers must be within 80 feet of their lines at all times to avoid violating the law against fishing with an "unattended" line. Placing the lines more than 80 feet apart would not allow an angler to check one of his lines and still remain within the required distance of the other, it was explained.

Tip ups are devices with small flags or metal plates which tip to signal the angler that a fish is biting. No tip up may be used which is designed to automatically hook the fish.

Fishing shelters must have the name and address of the owner plainly and legibly painted on the outside in letters and figures at least three inches in height.

A metal tag, furnished with the shelter license, must be attached to the exterior as described in the fishing regulations.

Shelters must be designed so the door can be opened from the outside at any and all times. It is unlawful to have a spear inside a shelter when it is being used for angling.

Officials urged ice fishermen, especially those new to the sport, to read the fishing regulations carefully.

Raise $37,500 During Alumni MSU Phonathon

Moorhead State university alumni association's phonathon for scholarships raised $37,500 during its three-week campaign.

Volunteer callers contacted over 11,000 MSU alumni during the October 28-November 15 event, said Elsie Listrom, the university's alumni director. That included all MSU alumni in Minnesota and North Dakota and a sampling of those living in California, Arizona and Washington.

"We exceeded our goals by $7,500," said Listrom.

The phonathon ran Sunday through Thursday evenings during the three weeks from phone stations specially set up in Comstock Memorial union on campus. More than 110 local volunteers contributed time to the scholarship fund raiser.

It was the first all-out phonathon conducted by the alumni association here, Listrom said, and it will become an annual event supporting the MSU foundation's annual fund drive for scholarships.

Including the alumni phonathon, the MSU Foundation's fund drive taking place now has raised over $80,000 so far with four more weeks to go. The drive is an annual event started by the MSU foundation this year to raise scholarship money and fund other Moorhead State programs.

All this celebrating made Caroline tired so she took a nap later in the afternoon. When she woke up Ebba said, "Why are you so tired? You used to be able to sit up all afternoon without resting." Caroline's reply was, "but I was a lot younger then."

Mr. and Mrs. Gayhard Nelson, Bobbie Jo McAnnony, Elsie Lefrooth and Anna Brekke visited at Donald Lefrooths Saturday evening and brought belated birthday greetings to Don. Irene Nelson baked and brought along the cake which they all enjoyed.

Chronobiology Is Studied In Fight Against Cancer

By Paul Schurke
U-M News Service

It's not promising any cures, but the young science of chronobiology—sometimes called medicine's "fourth dimension"—is making impressive inroads into cancer therapy.

"Chronobiology is the study of the rhythms exhibited by all biologic systems," University of Minnesota cancer researcher William Hrushesky said. Some rhythms researcher William Hrushesky said. Some rhythms are short — measured in minutes—and others last hours, days, months, or even years.

The rhythms found to be most useful for cancer researchare "circadian," a term coined by Franz Halberg, director of the University of Minnesota chronobiology lab and generally regarded as the science's founding father, to describe those rhythms that wax and wane every 24 hours or so.

Chronobiologists have found that rhythm patterns for fluctuations in things like body temperature, blood pressure and alertness can be established and graphed for each person. If these patterns are not taken into consideration during physical checkups, disease conditions may be overlooked, they say. In a condition known as "odd-hour hypertension," for example, blood pressure may be dangerously high, but only at a certain time of the day.

Although more and more researchers are acknowledging the importance of synchronized chronobiological rhythms (not to be confused with biorhythms, which chronobiologists say, have been invalidated), their widespread use in health care may be a long way off. But chronobiologists are pressing on and exploring the use of circadian rhythms in treating disease.

That's where the work on cancer, known in this field as chrono-oncology, comes in. Animal studies have repeatedly shown that cancer therapies tied to the chronobiologic rhythms of organisms dramatically increase rates of survival and cure. At Minnesota, efforts at translating these findings into treatment of human cancer patients are showing promise.

"The reason we are so excited about the potential of chronobiology in this area," Hrushesky said, "is that we have no wonder drugs like penicillin for cancer." Cancer drugs are formulated to kill fast-growing cells, such as those in cancerous tissue and thus can also kill certain healthy cells, including those of the body's immune system. Consequently, patients undergoing cancer therapy often succumb to pneumonia or other infections.

Chronobiologists believe that attention to rhythms could break this pattern. Their rationale is this: Cells of healthy tissue are known to have a circadian rhythm of mitosis, or cell growth. Cancer cells may show a circadian rhythm of mitosis that is either in or out of sync with the host's healthy tissue rhythm. The objective of "chronotherapy" is to administer cancer drugs when the healthy tissue is most resistant to toxicity and the cancer cells are most susceptible.

Experiments with animals have shown this to be possible. One, for example, found that leukemic mice treated with the drug ara-C administered in harmony with body rhythms survived 50 per cent longer than those treated by more conventional methods.

With these encouraging findings, researchers have begun exploring chronotherapy's application for human cancer patients. Through the university's clinical research center, some 20 patients have advanced bladder and ovarian cancer have been put on chronobiotic drug regimens of two powerful cancer-fighting drugs. Preliminary results show the drugs, platinum and doxyrubicin, are metabolized by the body differently at different times of the day. Results indicated that the kidneys (a target organ for the toxicity of platinum) were least susceptible to platinum in the evening.

So far that's all that can be said with certainty. With such a small group of patients, researchers aren't able to translate their findings into optimum treatment schedules. More patients and a broader study might make it possible in the future, Hrushesky said.

Earlier chronotherapy studies of these drugs with mice found a very wide gap between success and failure. A normal dose of one of the drugs given at 9 a.m. might kill every mouse, while the same dose given at 9 p.m. might destroy only cancer cells.

"These general principles may apply to every cancer-fighting drug," Hrushesky said. "They may also apply to other therapies, such as immunotherapy and radiation." Efforts to explore chronobiologic applications of these therapies have begun at the university and elsewhere, he said.

From the timing of a checkup to the administration of an anti-cancer drug, working with the body's rhythms can tip the scale between disease and health, chronobiologists say. Recent advances seem to have secured chronobiology a role in the future of cancer therapy and suggest that it is only a matter of time before the monitoring of rhythms becomes a tool with widespread application to health care.

Be it resolved that the Thief River Falls Times be designated as the official newspaper for reporting school business. Motion made by Larson and seconded by Kenner. Motion carried.

Be it resolved that the RAC Board recommend to all RIC participating districts, that each independent school district pass a resolution stating that because of state and federal law placing the 0-3 year old handicapped population in the permissive area, rather than mandated, no services will be made available until such time as the law is changed. Motion made by Kenner and seconded by Horner. Motion carried.

Moved by Horner and seconded by Kilen that Jill Geldel be hired as the Speech and Language Coordinator for the Northwest RIC. Motion carried.

Moved by Horner and seconded by Kenner that the RAC Board recommend to each member school district to write a letter of opposition to the proposed licensure change, and to contact their state representatives and the hearing officer in protest to this change. Motion carried.

A motion to table the resolution that the RAC Board recommend to all RIC school districts that they independently, or through the RIC, utilize a joint formal agreement with Headstart-Homestart Programs concerning services to preschool handicapped until the issue can be reviewed by the Superintendents and a recommendation from them is made. Was moved by Horner and seconded by Larson. Motion carried.

Moved by Kenner and seconded by Kilen that the RIC enter into a storage agreement with the Karlstad School District concerning one RIC vehicle during the school year. Motion carried.

Moved by Kenner and seconded by Larson that Mr. Greg Herling be reinstated as School Psychologist.

Moved by Kilen and seconded by Kenner that the RAC Board recommend to the ECSU Board of Directors to eliminate the proposed position of Regional Preschool Consultant, and to utilize project monies in a fashion such as Region IV. Motion carried.

Moved by Kenner and seconded by Horner that the RAC Board write a letter to the ECSU requesting that the SERC position be discontinued in light of already existing services. Furthermore, there is no apparent function of the SERC job description that can't be performed by already existing special education personnel. Therefore, a review of the position is in order by the ECSU Board of Directors, and the Superintendents from the region. Monies currently being used in this project could be better used in lowering cost of special education in local districts. Motion carried.

Meeting adjourned.

Shortage Of Propane For Grain Drying

In some areas of Minnesota farmers are unable to get propane for corn drying or are limited in the quality they can get. This has been caused by an exceptionally heavy demand created by the late harvest. Late maturing crop, weather conditions and wet fields have all contributed to the severe conditions. Shortages are due to inadequate distribution capacity rather than a shortage of propane.

Farmers faced with a shortage of propane for drying are forced into emergency procedures for handling their corn. What they do will depend on whether no propane is available or whether they have a limited supply. There are two basic choices: leave the corn in the field, or harvest the corn and handle it with the least risky alternative. Leaving the corn in the field should be the last resort. There are several alternatives available which, if properly managed, are better than leaving the corn in the field.

If limited supplies of propane are available they can be stretched by partially drying the corn and holding with aeration. We are past mid-November and the corn can be kept cold with aeration. This greatly increases the allowable storage time. Corn at 18-20 per cent moisture can be held with aeration (1-10 cfm per bushel and up) under good management until spring. Corn up to 21-22 per cent can be held in drying bins (1 cfm per bushel) and finished drying with spring air starting about the middle of March.

If no propane is available, corn can be harvested when frozen and kept frozen by aeration until propane is available for drying. If corn is conbined when frozen it can be held two to three weeks without aeration. However, aeration will greatly reduce the risk and increase the time it can be held before drying (2-3 months).

Any type of aerated storage can be used to hold frozen corn. If no aerated facilities are available, frozen corn can be piled outside over an aeration duct. A 12-inch aeration duct with a ½ to ¾ hp aeration fan can be used to aerate a 5,000 bushel pile of frozen corn. Aeration ducts can be built for this purpose. A duct with 1½ square feet cross-sectional area will handle up to 3,000 cfm and with a 1½ hp fan will handle up to 10,000 bushels of frozen corn. The duct should have about 100 square feet of screened area distrubuted along the duct to allow the air to move from the duct to the corn.

The important factor in holding wet corn is to keep it cold. Be sure to run the fan enough to keep the corn frozen. Use a probe thermometer to check all parts of the pile. Don't hesitate to run the fan in below-freezing weather regardless of humidity. For more information on storage and aeration, contact your county extension office.

Feeder Calf Quality Meet Set Friday

Increasing feeder calf quality is the theme to be discussed on November 30 at a meeting to be held at 8 p.m. in the Pennington county courthouse meeting room. Speaking at the meeting will be veterinarian Donald Hagen from Oklee and Howard Person, Pennington county associate extension agent.

Areas of discussion will include vaccination, herd health programs, high cost versus low cost feeding programs, latest details on the newly started Minnesota preconditioning program, plus any questions producers may wish to discuss.

First Stage Of 55 mph Project Accomplished

Minnesota state patrol chief Roger Ledding reports that the first stage of the Minnesota department of public safety's federally funded 55 mile per hour enforcement project — Project 20 — was just successfully accomplished.

First location of Project 20 was along U.S. highway 2 between Duluth and Bemidji. From October 29 through November 2, patrol veteran Sgt. James Lane and 10 newly graduated troopers patrolled the highway in new radar-equipped vehicles with back-up support by helicopters and fixed wing aircraft.

"This 1.2 million dollar, 28 month project is a total enforcement project aimed at gaining long-term voluntary compliance with federal 55 mph speed limit. We are looking for citizen cooperation in this effort," said Chief Ledding.

Minnesota department of public safety commissioner John P. Sopsic also strongly supports this program and, according to Sopsic, "we must view this type of activity as being a positive and necessary step in both traffic safety and energy conservation which will benefit all the people of the state of Minnesota."

Though the main emphasis of the project is citizen awareness, during the highway 2 stay 85 arrests were made and an additional 365 warnings were given to drivers. Bulk of the arrests were for speeding while most of the warnings went to drivers traveling between 56-60 miles per hour. There were also 86 aid-to-motorist responses made by the team.

Ledding found the most valuable result of the Project 20 stay was the fact that during their five-day patrol there were no accidents along highway 2. This compares with past October figures which show an average of just over six accidents could be expected during a similar five-day period.

There will be follow-up speed monitoring and a continuous program of surveys to further evaluate the impact of the project. As the team moves throughout the state to various U.S. highway and interstate locations they have an additional goal to be gained by increasing compliance with the 55 mph speed limit. That combined goal is to conserve energy and also insure that Minnesota's federal highway funding continues unhindered by possible sanctions or penalties.

Second Project 20 location was along interstate highway 94 between the 494 junction in the metro area and just east of Alexandria. This phase of the project began November 7 and continued for nine days. Following that the team moves to the western portion of highway 2 between East Grand Forks and just east of Bemidji.

RRV Potato Growers Plan Annual Meet

Did you know that the potato industry has existed in the Red River valley of the north for 178 years? The first record of planting in the valley was in the year 1801. Many problems have faced the industry in those 178 years, and, as potato growers enter a new decade, they are faced with some of the most crucial decisions ever in the history of the Potato industry.

Often times in those early years it must have been a lonely battle, but in this day and age the growers have the strength of organization. Hopefully, the group can accomplish those things that would be literally impossible to do individually.

For the 34th year, the group will get together to face the issues. November 30 and December 1 will mark the dates for the annual meeting of the Red River valley potato growers association. It will be held in Grand Forks, N.D. at the Westward Ho motel.

An exciting program has been developed that should be of interest to all potato growers in the area. One highlight of the program is the speaking engagement of a nationally known TV personality, Orion Samuelson of "U.S. Farm Report." This weekly 30-minute show has been on the air since July of 1975 and is currently seen on nearly 100 television stations across the country.

Producing energy from agricultural products has drawn the interest of many people in our area; and, in fact, several potato producers have invested in equipment to make energy from waste potatoes. As we enter a new decade, energy and energy production has to be a prime consideration. To address this issue, the chairman of the national gasahol commission, Al Mavis will be speaking at the convention.

Another highlight to this year's annual meeting will be the awarding of the meritorious service awards to the Valley's outstanding leaders in the industry. For fun and relaxation during the two-day affair, the association will be sponsoring a Scotch doubles bowling tournament.

History Center Architect To Visit Moorhead

Michael Graves, design architect for the Red River Valley heritage interpretive center, will give a public presentation of the latest plans for the heritage center at 9:30 a.m. at the Moorhead city council chambers in the Moorhead city hall on Thursday, November 29.

Graves, a professor of architecture at Princeton university, has received international recognition for his design of the heritage center planned for Moorhead. His preliminary designs for the center have been featured in "Newsweek," "Time", and most recently in "Gentlemen's Quarterly" magazines.

Planning for the center began several years ago under the auspices of the Fargo-Moorhead heritage and cultural bridge task force. In spring 1979, the Moorhead city council appointed a heritage interpretive center task force to continue planning for the heritage center.

Public is invited to attend this presentation.

ACE Club To Explore Child Care Service

Members of the adults continuing education (ACE) club of Northland community college will sponsor an open meeting to explore the possible means or providing child care service for parents who are attending college or who may want to do so in the future. The meeting will be on the college campus Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in room A39.

Invited to address the meeting and profide information on existing facilities are Mary Ann Hodge, director of Discovery place; Jean Shaffer, director of Thief River Falls nursery school; and Barb Gulson, Pennington county social services. Cheryl Lee, ACE club child care chairperson, will provide information on organization of a co-op child care service based on established services in other areas.

With the increasing number of older than average students re-entering college, child care becomes a necessity for many and ACE club invites interested parents to attend this meeting to receive information and discuss services which will serve this need.

Use White, Blue Reflectors To Mark Crossing

For safety's sake, use only white (colorless) or blue colored reflectors on each side to mark driveway entrances, says C.W. Christie, Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT) traffic engineer.

Red, amber or yellow colored reflectors are not permitted because such colors resemble motor vehicle tail lights and could be confusing to approaching motorist, he explained. Reflectors should not be used on roadside mailboxes or posts.

Christie recommends using double-faced white or blue reflectors that are clearly visible from both directions on the highway. Installation should be no closer than 10 feet from the edge of the road shoulder. Square or circular reflectors about three inches in width can be used and are easily visible when placed at a height of four or five feet above the road surface.

ON THE TRACK, Tom Wachsmuth's German Shepherd "Brutus" keeps his owner active. Wachsmuth, a deputy sheriff in Roseau county, is shown in the area of Thief River Falls where "Brutus" tracked a suspect in an armed robbery of the Riverside Grocery Monday evening. Arrested by the Thief River Falls police department and charged with aggravated robbery was Scott Everett Sherman, 20, of Thief River Falls. "Brutus" followed the track to a house where Sherman was living — a distance of about three blocks — in an estimated six to eight minutes and wanted to get in the door. The robbery took place at 5:26 p.m., Wachsmuth and "Brutus" were called in from Greenbush sometime later and the defendant was in custody before 9 p.m. The 30-foot lead is necessary, Wachsmuth said, to keep the dog from reaching the person at the end of the track too far ahead of the trainer. "I could never keep up and Brutus is very aggressive when tracking or searching," he explained.

Dog Used To Help Track Robbery Suspect In City

Assistance from a Roseau county deputy sheriff and his trained German Shepherd helped Thief River Falls police in placing an armed robbery suspect under arrest Monday evening. Charged with aggravated robbery in the armed hold-up of Riverside Grocery at 5:26 p.m. Monday was Scott Everett Sherman, 20, of Thief River Falls.

Sherman was in custody before 9 p.m. Monday after local police investigated and then called in the services of Deputy Tom Wachsmuth of Greenbush and his dog "Brutus". The dog followed a track from discarded items including a parka, revolver and money in a paper bag for a distance of about three blocks to a house at 308 Arnold av. S. Sherman was later arrested there.

At an initial appearance in Pennington county court this morning, Sherman was officially charged with aggravated robbery and a district court hearing was ordered. A public defender was appointed to defend him in court and bond was set at $25,000.

The robbery took place when a lone man wearing a blue parka entered the store armed with a revolver and ordered Shelly Bakken, 18, a clerk in the store, to give him the money from the cash register. She followed his instructions and the man left the store. During the robbery he had the hood of the parka pulled tightly around his face.

Responding to Miss Bakken's call immediately following the robbery, police followed the robbers tracks in the snow across highway 32 and across yards to Backe street a block south. A blue parka and paper bag were found near an evergreen tree by the alley entrance from Backe street between Knight and Duluth avenues.

Police continued tracking in the light snow and were quite sure where the tracks led, but called on Washsmuth and his dog for assistance. Upon his arrival, Wachsmuth was given the background of the situation and taken to the area where the parka had been left.

"I took Brutus to a place on the known track from the store about 30 or 40 feet from the coat and commanded him to track," Deputy Wachsmuth said. "He went right to the coat and I praised him briefly, then ordered him to track again so he didn't think finding the coat had finished the job.

"He took the track away from the coat and went about three blocks in probably six to eight minutes, trailing right up to the door of the house and wanting to get inside. I took him off the track, went back and started again and he tracked right back to the same door."

Police found a .22 caliber revolver in the pocket of the parka and recovered $88.20 believed to be the total amount stolen in the robbery.

Deputy Wachsmuth said that tracking is the most touchy of the jobs his dog is trained to do, because the dog's scenting ability is so far beyond human comprehension. The trainer has to be familiar with his dog and recognize when it is following a track.

"Depending on the wind, the dog can track from 50 feet to half a block or even a block away from the actual trail made," Wachsmuth said. "And in a city there are other distractions such as pets. You have to know when he is following the track or investigating distractions. I know when Brutus is tracking."

"Brutus" is trained not only to follow a track but to pick up and retrieve items along the track if they have been handled by the person making the track.

"A dog is pretty to refute because he is only doing what he has been trained to do," the deputy said. "He doesn't rationalize or attempt to make reasoned judgements, he simply follows the track."

Wachsmuth bought the purebred German Shepherd from a Gonvick family as a pup about a year and one-half ago. From April 16 through July 27 of this year he trained with "Brutus" and four other trainers and their dogs with Jerry Larson of the K9 division of the Duluth police department.

The 16-week program took Tom and "Brutus" through the mill from basic obedience to a wide variety of useful work in law enforcement. It is believed a German Shepherd is capable of learning about 110 different verbal commands. Wachsmuth estimates he uses about 75 in variety of circumstances. "Brutus" accompanies him nearly all the time when he is on duty.

While Tom and "Brutus" were in training, Tom's salary was paid and the county hired a replacement deputy. The dog is his, and he is encouraged to use it to assist other law enforcement agencies such as he did Monday in Thief River Falls.

Weighing in at about 80 pounds, "Brutus", is a family dog at home with no problems. "Except for his kennel," Wachsmuth says. "Nobody monkeys around by his kennel!"

Wachsmuth is married to the former Donna Keck of Thief River Falls.

The dog had to pass a few basic tests and be x-rayed for hip dysplasia before being admitted to the training program. It had to learn basic obedience and pass agility tests like scaling a nine-foot wall, clearing an eight-foot long hurdle and walking a catwalk.

Then it was trained for searching buildings for people, searching an outdoor area, attacking under four different circumstances, article search for anything not characteristic of the area, drug search, crowd control (dispersal or containment) and stand-off or guarding.

"When the dog attacks it is trained to bite and hold its bite until commanded to release. It is also trained to respond to no one but its trainer," Wachsmuth explained. "Brutus will attack on my command, if I am assaulted, if he is assaulted or if a gun is fired.

("How is he on partridge?" we quipped. "He can track

THIS IS "BRUTUS", an active member of the Roseau county law enforcement team. Owned and trained by Tom Wachsmuth of Greenbush, the dog helped Thief River Falls police Monday by tracking a suspect in an armed robbery. Deputy Wachsmuth said the services of himself and "Brutus" are available to area law enforcement agencies when the need arises. The dog is especially adept at finding drugs and in building, area and vehicle searches.

Winter Quarter At Northland Starts Monday

Northland community college will begin its winter quarter on Monday, December 3 with the college credit schedule including 59 daytime courses and 31 evening courses, according to Bill Kottke, dean of instruction.

The daytime schedule lists offerings in art, biology, business, chemistry, computer science, economics, English, geography, health, history, journalism, law enforcement, mathematics, music, nursing, physical education, physics, political science, sociology, speech, science and theatre.

The evening college credit schedule lists courses in business, computer science, English, health, law enforcement, political science and sociology.

Community service non-credit classes that are offered in cooperation with the Thief River Falls public schools and the AVTI will be announced in January.

School Board Receives Report On Negotiations

Statistics on teacher compensation offers in 1979-81 contract negotiations now underway in the Thief River Falls school district were presented at the board of education meeting Monday at the school district service center. The statistics were prepared by negotiator John Roszak for the school board and have since been contested by the faculty negotiating team.

Presented by board chairman Larry McDowell, who serves on the board's negotiating team, the statistics were intended to show current status of negotiations following the last session. Another bargaining session is scheduled for 4:30 p.m. Thursday at the district service center.

Faculty negotiators agree with part of the figures prepared by the board's hired negotiator. There is agreement that the current base salary for the district's 203 teachers is $2,963,635 and that extended contracts, voucher payments for additional work, extra-curricular salaries and lane change advancements increase the current base salary total to $3,144,079.

Faculty representatives also recognize current health, life and disability insurance benefits paid of $186,142 annually and payments for homebound instruction, adult education, driver's education, chief instructors' pay, curriculum development and continuing education payments of $26,695. They do not consider $20,000 in mileage reimbursement as a benefit, believing it to be only an off-set for out of pocket expense.

Attempts reportedly are being made during negotiations to reach agreement on a dollar figure for total increments with method of distribution of that amount to be determined later. On that basis, teachers agree with Roszak's figures that the last board offer would give the district's 203 teachers an average increase of $2,900 for the two-year contract while the last faculty proposal requested $3,300 as the average two-year increase.

With the board's most recent offer, the total dollar increase for a two-year contract is calculated at $588,700. With the last teacher proposal the total is projected at $669,900.

Major complaint of the faculty representatives lies in the Roszak figure of $19,535 purported to be the average compensation annually per faculty member under the board's last offer. At issue is the method of computation which apparently totals all salaries and benefits — including a two-year projected increase — divided by the number of teachers to determine an annual average. Using a two-year total as a figure to determine an annual amount is considered by the faculty to be incorrect.

There has long been disagreement, however, between board and faculty positions on percentage of increase on two-year contracts. Faculty has maintained that (for example) a five per cent increase one year and five per cent the second year totals 10 per cent. Board position has been that since the five per cent paid the first year of the two-year pact must also be paid the second year, and ensuing years, the additional five per cent increase in the second year would result in a net 15 per cent raise.

While board and faculty continue to negotiate, mediation sessions are also scheduled with the next slated in about two weeks.

Discussion was also held by the board on potential sites for new school construction if such project should be authorized. Four sites under consideration are in the areas of the vocational-technical institute east of the city, fairgrounds west of town, Greenwood cemetery and Noreen's Country store areas south on the airport road.

Authorization was given to advertise for bids on three 72-passenger buses. New bus drivers hired were Byron Stuart, Darla Tollefson and Edlyn Vatthauer. Resignation of Lyndon Pream as regular route driver was accepted.

Ratification of a contract with Teamsters Local 320 covering 79 employees in four classifications for the 1979-80 and 1980-81 years was approved, contingent upon the board negotiator's final agreement. Included in the contract are 23 food service personnel, one maintenance person, 38 custodians and 19 secretaries.

Resignation of Bill McGann as assistant boys' varsity track coach was accepted and John Kopari was appointed as a replacement. Greg and Sharon Stauss also resigned from seventh and eighth grade girls' basketball coaching positions.

The board hired Julie Jossund as speech therapist effective December 3 and Beattie Mickelson as crossing guard effective November 27.

Council Reviews Utilities Letter

Utility committee recommendations brought before city council members last evening brought debate over a letter written by John T. Anderson, superintendent of utilities, and proposed to be sent to the citizens in Thief River Falls.

With winter approaching, and fuel costs rising, it was mentioned that alternate heat sources are needed. Anderson's letter would inform citizens of an electrical load management program that will interrupt power supplies for various purposes including heating and water heating. A further statement in the letter tells citizens (mainly those with electric heat and hot water heating) that they may have to provide for an alternate heat source throughout the winter.

It was mentioned that installers of the load management equipment would come to homes or businesses to explain rates, and possible interruptions and options applied to various citizens. The electric department is currently installing about $170,000 of load control equipment to control loads during peak times (usually between 5 and 9 p.m.), he said.

City attorney Robert Wurst questioned whether or not there was machinery to help people decide if they needed alternate heat sources. He called for an addition to the letter to reassure people they will have at least one available type of heat source during the cold months.

Citizens may have to provide for an alternate heat source "if they want the advantage of lower power rates," he added.

In further utility committee recommendations, the resolution was introduced by alderman Clayton Restad and seconded by alderman Don Goodrich to hire Al Wheeler, master electrician at $1,200 per month.

Additional concentration on heat sources connected with cold weather problems was the fact that more people were installing and using wood burning stoves in their homes. Along with wood burning as a heating source, comes wood

Public Hearing On Waste Water At Goodridge

Hearing on the basic public participation program 201 facilities plan for waste water treatment will be conducted at 7 p.m. tonight in the agriculture room in the Goodridge high school.

Facilities plan is the first step of a three step process of the EPA construction grants program. Two succeeding steps are design of wastewater transmission and treatment facilities, and construction of wastewater transmission and treatment facilities.

Primary purpose of the facilities plan is the examination of waste water collection, transmission and treatment for the Goodridge community. In this study, present and future situations are defined, site and facility alternatives that meet applicable water quality goals are developed, and a waste water treatment system that best meets the local institutional and financial limitations of the community is chosen.

Goodridge received notice from EPA in late July that it would be required to conduct a "basic program" for public participation input into the study. City council and its consultants, in discussions and with the approval of the Minnesota pollution control agency (MPCA) and EPA, because of the small size of the community, decided to use an informal public meeting for the program.

All property owners in the study area and in Goodridge township whose property abutts alternative sites will be notified by mail prior to the meetings. General public will be notified impending meetings by public notice in the Thief River Falls Times.

Key documents on the study, including fact sheets and agency responsiveness summaries, as they are prepared, will be on file and MEMORABLE MILESTONE was reached in the continuing history of Northwestern hospital in Thief River Falls Monday with the admission of the 100,000th patient since Northwestern was created by the merger of Mercy and St. Luke's hospitals 29 years ago. The 100,000th acute care patient since the admissions numbering began Jan. 1, 1951, was Mrs. Bruce (Evelyn) Erickson of 1203 Arnold av. N. in Thief River Falls. She had three previous hospital stays here, including two for delivery for their children. She is pictured with hospital administrator Norman Peterson and the flowers presented by the hospital in recognition of the 100,000 admissions.

NW Hospital Admits 100,000th Patient

When Mrs. Bruce (Evelyn) Erickson of Thief River Falls checked in at Northwestern hospital Monday, she became the 100,000th patient to be admitted for acute care since the hospital was established in 1951. Northwestern was created by the merger of Mercy and St. Luke's hospitals in 1950 and began functioning under the new organization on Jan. 1, 1951.

Norman Peterson, hospital administrator, said the 100,000th admission was determined by the numbering system initiated on admissions beginning in 1951. It involves acute inpatient admissions and is exclusive of the convalescent and nursing care unit or outpatient service.

"A hundred thousand admissions over a period of 29 years may not seem like a large number," he said, "but when you consider it at a rate of 10 times the present population of the city it takes on an added perspective."

In addition to the 100,000 acute inpatient admissions, the hospital has had 1,070 admissions to the convalescent and nursing care unit since it opened in 1970. There have also been approximately 188,000 people seen on an outpatient basis at the hospital since the 1951 starting date.

The hospital reached the 50,000 admission mark on Feb. 1, 1966. Five years later the total had climbed to 65,000 and in the 1971-76 operational year the total rose to 82,250.

From that point the total climbed to 86,500 in 1976-77, 91,300 in 1977-78 and 95,850 in 1978-79. Admission of 4,150 patients during the current fiscal year resulted in reaching the 100,000 patient mark.

The hospital has had a marked increase in outpatient service utilization with expansion of ancillary services in recent years. The 3,500 to 4,000 patients previously seen on an outpatient basis in former years has increased to approximately 10,000 persons per year now.

Mrs. Erickson, the 100,000th patient, had been hospitalized here three times previously, twice in the maternity ward.

SOCIETY and CLUBS

Trontvet and Raines Marriage Vows Spoken

Miss Robbin Gayle Trontvet and Richard Alan Raines exchanged marriage vows on October 6 at 7 p.m., at the Evangelical Free church in this city.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Orville Trontvet of Thief River Falls. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Algie Raines of Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Officiating at the double-ring ceremony were Rev. Clifford Anderson, Kingsburg, Calif., grandfather of the bride, and Rev. Nielson, the groom's pastor. During the ceremony, the Love chapter, I Cor 13, from the Living Bible, was read by the groom's mother. Mrs. Floyd Dalzell, aunt of the bride, and Rick Trontvet, brother of the bride, served as organist and soloist. They played "Love Scene," from "Romeo and Juliet" as the bride was escorted to the alter and given in marriage by her parents. Vocal selections were a duet, "Together" by the bride's parents; and solos, "God Has Given Me To You," and "My Tribute" sung by Mrs. Deb Christopherson, a cousin of the bride; and "He Was There All the Time," by Steve Walters, a friend of the couple.

Candelabras with greenery and pink bows graced the chancel. Lighting the center aisle were hurricane lamps on the pews, accented with pink bows.

The bride was attired in an organza gown featuring a chantilly lace empire-styled bodice with cameo insert edged in pearls, high neckline and bishop sleeves. Her A-line skirt, raised in front to reveal an embroidered lace insert, featured a multi-tiered lace flounce that also edged the chapel-length train. A headpiece of lace fleurets trimmed in pearls held her tiered veil of nylon and lace. She carried a cascade of pink and white silk roses, accented with stephanotis and babies' breath. Her flowers, like those of the wedding party, were made by the groom's mother.

Barb Eriksson of Grand Forks, N.D., a friend of the couple, was the bride's personal attendant.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Joycelyn Trontvet, Fargo, N.D., a sister-in-law of the bride. Other attendants were Mrs. Linda Rowan, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., sister of the groom; Patti McCutchan, Camarillo, Calif.; Mrs. Deb Christopherson, Bemidji; and Phyllis Trontvet, Thief River Falls, cousins of the bride. Their identical, sleeveless, princess-styled gowns of dusty rose qiana featured elbow-length dusty rose capes with mandarin neckbands. All the attendants carried nosegays of silk flowers in shades of pink and burgandy, corresponding with the floral clusters worn in their hair.

The rings were carried by Clifford Wayne Hauser of Elk River, a cousin of the bride. He wore a white tuxedo, and like the men of the wedding party, had a pink and white rose-bud boutonniere pinned on his lapel.

Best man was Michael Safreed, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., a friend of the groom. Groomsmen were Randy Trontvet, Fargo, N.D., Rick Trontvet, Thief River Falls, brothers of the bride; Robert Raines, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., brother of the groom; and Randy Brua, Grand Forks, N.D., friend of the couple. Randy Trontvet and Randy Brua, also served as ushers. Their attire included silver chalice tuxedos with matching ruffled shirts edged in grey. The groom wore a white Saratoga tuxedo with tails, a matching vest and bow tie, and a white ruffled shirt.

The mother of the bride wore a dusty blue crepe floor-length gown with a pleated skirt attached to an empire waistline. Topping the gown was a matching cape trimmed with cream-colored lace. Her corsage was of burgandy silk roses and babies' breath. A similar corsage was worn by the groom's mother, who was attired in a mauve crepe long-sleeved gown fashioned with a braided belt, draped skirt and shirred hemline, and a flowing cape.

Honor guests were the bride's grandparents: Rev. and Mrs. Clifford Anderson.

Following the ceremony, the bride's parents hosted a reception in the church parlors for approximately 200 relatives and friends. Host and hostess were Mr. and Mrs. Rodney Twistol, friends of the couple. Mrs. Steve Walters, registered the guests as Mary Lou Narlock and Barb Keefer, served the punch. The rice pockets were distributed by Crystal Norlock and Paula Nilsen. Corinda Nilsen presided at the gift table. All were friends of the couple, and all reside at Grand Forks.

The three-tiered, Autumn-Love fountain wedding cake was decorated in fall colors with roses in dusty rose and burgandy. White satin wedding bells topped the cake. At the base were two heart-shaped cakes. The cake was cut and served by Miss Inga Trontvet, aunt of the bride, and Gerald Nilsen, Grand Forks, N.D., friend of the couple. Mrs. Wayne Hauser, Elk River, and Mrs. Duane McCutchan, Camarillo, Calif., aunts of the bride, poured the coffee.

Waitresses were Karen Hanson, Ruth Lindquist, Jill Kapsner of Thief River Falls, friends of the couple.

The evening prior to the ceremony, the groom's parents hosted a dinner at the Best Western for 35 guests.

For traveling to Detroit Lakes and Minneapolis, the bride wore a Wedgewood blue terry-knit dress.

The bride is a 1976 graduate of Lincoln high school and is a senior at the University of North Dakota, majoring in elementary education. The groom, a graduate of Hollywood high school, Hollywood Hills, Fla., is stationed with the U.S. Air Force at Grand Forks, and is a part-time student at the University of North Dakota. The couple is at home at 925 North 43rd street, Grand Forks, N.D. Photo, LeMar Photography, Crookston

Howard-Wehage Vows Spoken Here Nov. 9

Miss Carol Howard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Howard of this city, became the bride of John Wehage, son of Mrs. Vicki Wehage, also of this city, on Friday, November 9, at 7 p.m., at a private family wedding at the United Methodist church.

Rev. Mark Johaningsmeir officiated at the double ring ceremony. Jackie Lowell, a friend of the bride, was the pianist, playing Bach's "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring" for the processional; Stockey's "The Wedding Song," as a special selection, and Beethoven's "Ode to Joy," as the recessional.

For her wedding, the bride selected a two-piece ensemble of beige velour, featuring a draped skirt and a short-sleeved top with a gathered waistline. Complementing her attire was a corsage of five yellow Sweetheart roses accented with blue ribbon and babies' breath.

The bride's only attendant was Connie Molstad, a friend. She wore a light blue dress topped by a dark blue velour vest. Her corsage was of white carnations centered with a yellow Sweetheart rose.

Tim Peterson, rural Thief River Falls, friend and employer of the groom, was best man. He wore a light blue vested suit with a peek-a-boo boutonniere, matching the corsage worn by the bride's attendant. The groom wore a light brown suit with two yellow sweetheart roses pinned on his lapel.

The mother of the bride was attired in a green velour dress with a single yellow rose corsage. A similar corsage was worn by the groom's mother, who was attired in a red velour dress.

Special guests were Theresa Wehage, grandmother of the groom; Jeanne Wehage, cousin of the groom, and Jeff Wehage, a brother of the groom. All reside in Minneapolis.

A reception for the wedding party and members of the families, followed with the Ruth circle in charge. Hostesses were Jeanette Pfeifer and Sharon Iverson. Georgia Howard and Denise Wehage, sisters of the bride and groom, served the punch. The wedding cake, iced in white and decorated with yellow and blue flowers, was inscribed with "Best Wishes Carol and John". It was cut and served by Dawn Olson, sister of the groom.

The couple is now at home in this city at 319 West Fifth Street. The bride is a senior at Lincoln high school; and the groom, a graduate of Lincoln, is employed by Tim's Electric.

Local WCTU Hears Report Of State Convention

Report of the State WCTU convention was read at meeting of the local unit held at the home of Mrs. Earl Ripley.

It was noted that the convention was held at Montevideo at the United Methodist church with president Mrs. Ray Saari of Angora, presiding. In her presidential message, Mrs. Saari stated that the world's most staggering youth problem is drinking. Since 75 per cent of the alcoholic beverages bought in the super markets goes into the home, the majority of the drinking problems began there. She said that although liquor promoters are sponsoring college scholarships and other beneficial programs, their deceptiveness must be stressed and the wide-spread problems of drinking can't be over emphasized.

Special guest Miss Juanita Whisler of Evanston, Ill., national promotional secretary, led the departmental workshop. Reports on the National Convention held in Oakland, Calif., were given by Mrs. A. Saari, Mrs. Ole Ryan of Minneapolis, Mrs. Tarkel Ose, Thief River Falls, and Mrs. Gilbert Loe, Wannaska.

Report on the World convention on Alcohol Prevention held in Mexico was given by Mrs. Eckland of Minneapolis. She stated that a prevention strategy problem has began in France, Australia, Canada, and some states in this country. A strong movement is underway in Sweden for total abstenence, while Norway permits no liquor advertising. She stated that contrary to present day beliefs, prohibition did not fail as during that time, vice and crime were diminished.

Resolutions adopted at the state convention included: opposing liquor and tobacco ads in newspapers, magazines, radio and TV; raising the minimum drinking age from 19 years to 21; the promotion of Youth Temperance Education week; the support of the Strom Thurmond bill S. 249, prohibiting nudity, obscenity, sexual activity and morbid torture on television; support of the John Gaydos bill H.J. Res. 108, guaranteeing the right of life to the unborn, ill, aged or incapacitated; Supporting any bill striking against child abuse; working for stricter laws regarding the sale and use of marijuana; oppose the protection of homosexuals because of their homosexuality; the support of the Robert F. Drinan bill HR 280, providing for an annual report to Congress on the effect of cigarette smoke upon nonsmokers; the opposition of consolidating the power of state and federal governments; and the necessity of praying without ceasing in an effort to keep the prevalent evil forces from entering the homes, churches and schools.

The convention was welcomed to Montevideo by the city mayor and a representative from the school faculty, who commended the group for their work in combating smoking, drinking and drugs. He stated that according to statistics, half of the high school students have tried marijuana.

The convention also included a White Ribbon report, Silver and Pearl Speech contests and a memorial service with Tessie Netteland and Marie Yestesund, both of Thief River Falls, listed among the District Seven North members who died during the year.

Mrs. Olga Larson gave the devotional meditation at the local meeting. She read Rom. 11:33-36 and stated that Satan takes advantage of every situation, causing doubts and fears. To combat these fears, she read Matt. 6: 34. She concluded by reading from the devotional book by Fredrick Wistoff.

Newspaper clippings were read. Included were articles from the Montevideo American reporting the state convention, read by Mrs. Ripley, Mrs. Ruth Haugan and Mrs. Hildur Lian; and an article, "WCTU Delegation Marches on Bar," from the Indianapolis paper, read by Mrs. Valborg Hanson, reporting the account of the four bus loads of delegates from the National convention that held a worship and prayer service in a Petaluma Liquor lounge and bar. A letter from Anna Koglin, together with clippings, was read by Agnes Longren. Olga Larson and Hildur Lian read the Radio Releases. The meeting concluded with the singing of the "Happy Birthday" song to Olga Larson, and the signing of cards for Anna Koglin and Mrs. Carl Green.

FOCUS ON YOUR EYES

The right glasses could help you see your way clear to savings.

If you're holding this newspaper a little closer than you used to or find close work such as sewing or making arts and crafts more difficult than it once was, you could be one of the more than 90 million Americans over 35 who are the prime victims of presbyopia. That's the official name of the normal deterioration of close-range, focusing ability that often occurs as people grow older.

Fortunately, there may be a way you can correct your sight without crushing your budget.

If you get regular eye examinations, are not suffering from glaucoma, cataracts, eye infections or other eye problems, and have equal vision in both eyes, you may be able to buy your glasses over-the-counter.

Variety stores, drugstores, department stores, discount stores, and others sell these reading glasses for under $10 and have been for many years.

Many physicians have suggested that their patients save the high cost of prescription glasses by getting them ready-to-wear.

It should be reminded that ready-to-wear glasses aren't intended to replace examinations by an eye doctor. Continuous eye checkups, especially after the age of 40, will maintain the health of your eyes.

The reading glasses are made in varying focus numbers, from 32 (the weakest) to 8 (the strongest). These can be matched to diopters (diopters measure lens power) that consumers receive from an eye doctor.

If you would like to learn more about ready-to-wear reading glasses you should: Send for a free booklet, "Focusing in on Presbyopia" available by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Vision Aid Reading Glasses, c/o Grey & Davis, 800 Third Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10022.

4-County WIC Clinic Schedule Set For Area

Certification of participants for WIC (women, infants, and children) food supplemental and nutritional education program will be conducted during December, according to Muriel Roley, WIC coordinator.

WIC is a United States department of agriculture sponsored program which makes nutritional education and certain food supplements available to people who have been certified. People who may be eligible for WIC include: pregnant or lactating women who are shown to have a nutritional or medical risk factor; infants from birth to 12 months with shown nutritional or medical risk factor; children from one to five with nutritional or medical risk factor. Family income may also be a determining factor.

Also, to be eligible persons must be residents at one of the four counties served by the 4-county WIC program — Kittson, Marshall, Pennington or Red Lake.

Because the participant load is increasing, it is necessary for potential clients to call or write the four-county EPS service in Warren to make a WIC certification appointment. New clients will be seen by appointment only. Initial certification will take approximately one to one and one-half hours. Potential clients must bring the children they wish to have certified with them.

All WIC clinics begin at 9 a.m. Schedule for December is: Grygla — December 3, community center, call Lillian Sundberg at 294-6146; Newfolden — December 4, Bethlehem Lutheran church; Hallock — December 5, Presbyterian church; Red Lake Falls — December 6, Red Lake Falls city hall; Oklee — December 10, Zion Lutheran church; Karlstad — December 11, First Lutheran church; Warren — December 13, Evangelical Covenant church; and Thief River Falls — December 14, Redeemer Lutheran church.

For further information concerning WIC and setting up appointments, call or write 4 county EPS service, 208 E. Colvin Avenue, Warren, MN 56762, phone — 745-4005.

Early Periodic Screening Clinics Slated

Four county EPS will screen any child or young adult between the ages of six months and 13 years, according to Muriel Roley, EPS coordinator. Early and periodic screening provides simple and efficient methods of screening basically well children.

EPS clinics provide vision and hearing check, height and weight determination, dental assessment and instruction in care of teeth. Denver developmental testing, hematocrit determination and urinalysis, physical assessment and immunizations are available. Appointments must be made in advance.

Early and periodic screening clinics have been scheduled for the month of December. The clinic schedule for the four county (Marshall, Kittson, Pennington and Red Lake) are as follows:

Grygla — December 3, Community center; Newfolden — December 4, Bethlehem Lutheran church; Hallock — December 5, Presbyterian church; Red Lake Falls — December 6, Red Lake Falls city hall; Oklee — December 10, Zion Lutheran church; Karlstad — December 11, First Lutheran church; Warren — December 13, Evangelical Covenant church; and Thief River Falls — December 28, Redeemer Lutheran church.

For further information concerning EPS services, making appointments and cost of clinics, call or write Four County EPS Service, Marshall County Courthouse, 208 E. Colvin Avenue, Warren, MN 56762 or call 745-4004.

School Board Given Report On Negotiating

Purchase of umbrella liability coverage from Farmers Union Insurance company was authorized which would provide the district $500,000 of protection under basic auto and general liability and an additional $1 million umbrella for total of $1,500,000 protection.

Board member Wally Grovum was appointed by chairman Larry McDowell to the city outdoor swimming pool committee.

Hearing On Waste Water At Goodridge

available for public inspection at the Goodridge public school. Copies of the fact sheets will be available at no charge to the public.

Public liaison for the study will be Dr. David Brown, mayor of Goodridge. Engineering consultants, are Stewart and Walker, Inc., Thief River Falls. Public is encouraged to become involved in this phase of the study and to attend all meetings. Questions or comments are solicited and may be directed to the mayor or the engineers.

Magnitude of the total project could be in the range of $500,000. This figure would include construction of a collection system, but would not include the construction of private service connections.

Problems with the Goodridge waste water disposal system were recognized in April of 1965 when the Minnesota department of health conducted a survey of the school's treatment facilities in Goodridge. Conclusion was that the system was overloaded and inadquate due to poor upkeep and management. Department of health set forth a list of conditions and recommendations that might have helped to bring the facilities up to full treatment potential.

In February of 1975 an estimate was prepared for a waste water collection system to enable the city to apply for a HUD grant. In June of 1977 Goodridge was informed about the MPCA "needs list" for grant funding. MPCA, while investigating a complaint in September of 1977, found that the school was not meeting federal discharge standards. They suggested that the school construct a drain field which would temporarily alleviate the problem. Soil samples were taken and it was found that soils were unsuitable for a drain field.

In July of 1978, a request was made to the MPCA asking if Goodridge school could have a variance from the federal and state effluent standards until final plans were made for the new waste water collection and treatment facilities. Goodridge was placed on the 1979 MPCA's "needs list" in October of 1978.

Dog Used To Track Robbery Suspect Here

'em," Tom replied, "but I wouldn't suggest firing a gun!")

In one training exercise five boxes made of three-fourths inch plywood are used. They are of sufficient size to hold a man and each has a ventilation hole. A person hides in each of the boxes for one minute to establish a scent pattern and then selects any one to remain in. The dog must learn to detect and indicate which box contains the person.

Wachsmuth said that snow provides good tracking conditions for a dog and that with the conditions of overcast sky and darkness, "Brutus" could probably have followed on Tuesday afternoon the track he followed Monday night. For dissipation of scent, one hour of sunshine is equivalent to five hours of darkness, Wachsmuth said.

He also noted that his dog is very aggressive in tracking or searching. "He is very eager to get the job done," Tom said. "He doesn't hesitate to chew or scratch to get at something hidden. If we order suspects out of a car on suspicion of drug possession and they see what he does in searching a car for drugs, they usually produce what drugs they may have on their persons before Brutus helps search them.

"And I seldom have to lock my car anymore," he smiled. "That dog has a calming effect on people. I've been in circumstances where someone may have taken a swing at me a year ago. They don't do it now when he's around."

DOG-GONE PROUD of his trained German Shepherd "Brutus" and its ability to help in police work, deputy Tom Wachsmuth of the Roseau county sheriff's department displays the K9 UNIT sticker on the back of his patrol car. The assistance provided by Deputy Wachsmuth and "Brutus" Monday to the Thief River Falls police department resulted in the arrest of a young man who has been charged in the armed robbery of Riverside Grocery.

ITEMS RECOVERED by Thief River Falls police following an armed robbery of Riverside Grocery Monday evening included a parka believed worn by the robber, a .22 caliber revolver in the pocket of the parka and $88.20 in cash in a paper bag.

Gasohal Can Aid U.S. Dependence On Foreign Oil

Gasohol has attracted attention as a fuel which can help ease the United States' dependence on foreign oil. While it is no panacea for the nation's energy, oil import or agricultural problems, it can make a contribution especially when produced for local use.

Gasohol derived from crops such as cereal grains and sugar cane probably can make its greatest contribution in the near term, 1980-1985. After 1985, liquid fuels from coal, oil shale or larger scale biomass sources are expected to become available on a larger scale — especially as crude oil prices escalate.

New technology in cellulose to alcohol processes could enhance gasohol's value, however, and help justify investments today in large fermentation ethyl alcohol plants.

Gasohol as usually defined in the U.S. is a motor fuel consisting of a mixture of 10 per cent (by volume) agriculturally derived anhydrous ethyl alcohol and 90 per cent regular unleaded gasoline. Such gasohol qualifies for the federal motor fuel excise tax exemption of four cents per gallon. Although various other blends of ethyl alcohol and gasoline (including ethyl alcohol derived from petroleum), blends of methyl alcohol and gasoline, and pure alcohol all can be used as motor fuel, none is yet exempt from motor fuel excise taxes.

Two alcohols — ethyl and methyl — are now the most important for use as motor fuel either alone or by blending with gasoline. Ethyl alcohol (C2H5OH), also known as grain alcohol, is produced by fermentation of materials containing carbohydrates. It also can be produced by hydration (catalytic addition of water) of ethylene. Methyl alcohol (CH3OH), also known as wood alcohol, historically in the U.S. has been produced from destructive distillation of wood. It is currently produced in the U.S. from natural gas, but could be produced from gasified coal or any other hydrogen and carbon containing feedstock.

For mixing with gasoline, ethyl alcohol is preferred over methyl alcohol because it has a higher energy value, separates less readily in the presence of water, and is less corrosive to fuel and engine systems. It is also less toxic. Although, specially designed engines must be used to accommodate 100 per cent ethyl alcohol fuel, present vehicle engines can use a 10 per cent ethyl alcohol to 90 per cent gasoline blend with no modifications. Ethyl alcohol has a high octane rating; therefore, when it is added to regular gasoline, octane rating for the blend is increased. Claims of better gas mileage with gasohol vary, and better data is needed.

Gasohol presents several problems which raise practical difficulties but are technically solveable. For example, alcohol will separate into any water present in storage tanks or engine systems; vapor lock will be more common in cars using gasohol. Distribution to and storage at retail outlets is a significant challenge in itself. Ethyl alcohol can be produced from a variety of sources including fermentation of carbohydrates derived from starch crops (grain, potatoes, etc.); sugar crops (cane, beets, etc.); cellulosic agricultural residues (bagasse, corn stalks, straw); and woody crops and their by-products. It also can be produced by hydration of ethylene or from synthesis gas mixture (hydrogen-carbon monoxide). Technologies for converting carbohydrates to ethyl alcohol and for hydration of ethylene are well established. Technologies for cellulose conversion to ethyl alcohol and for producing ethyl alcohol from synthesis gas need more research and development. In existing distilleries, more process energy is required in the production of ethyl alcohol than the alcohol contains as a fuel because these distillleries were built when energy was relatively inexpensive. It may be possible, however, in modern economically sized plants using a number of energy efficient chemical engineering designs —for instance vapor recompression for evaporation systems, flue gases from boilers for drying operations, and multi-pressure distallation systems — to obtain a small positive energy balance.

Even with a negative energy balance, the use of ethyl alcohol as a liquid motor fuel might be justified if its use will reduce oil imports, extend gasoline supplies, and-or increase the octane number and efficiency of the blend. The boiler fuel used in fermentation plants producing fuel grade ethyl alcohol should not be derived from petroleum or natural gas — otherwise the main purpose (to reduce oil imports) is defeated. Such plants should use other domestically available boiler fuels such as coal, wood and wood by-products, or municipal, industrial or agricultural residues. Use of waste heat from existing plants using petroleum based fuels also might be justified for production of fuel grade alcohol.

Illustrative of gasohol economics, fuel grade anhydrous ethyl alcohol currently sells at distilleries between $1.60 and $1.70 a gallon based on corn (the most widely used feedstock) prices of $2.50 to $2.80 a bushel. By comparison, unleaded regular gasoline is selling in the third quarter of 1979 for $0.70 to $0.80 a gallon at refineries. This means that gasohol must sell between $0.08 and $0.10 a gallon above unleaded gasoline without any federal and-or state subsidies. Unless crude oil prices rise significantly above current levels (about double), establishment of a commercial alcohol fuels industry will depend upon the guaranteed availability of feedstock — whether the currently used corn or some other fermentable materials — at a relatively stable price, and the continuation of some government subsidy.

FUELED UP FOR FITNESS

HOME BAKED BREAD MAKES A HEALTHY COMEBACK

How often have you heard weight- or health-conscious folks describe their diets by saying, "I didn't cheat today—I passed up the bread." In fact, they are cheating themselves of essential nutrients as well as the entire dimension of smells, flavors and textures worshipped by bread-lovers and bread-bakers for centuries.

Wheat bread is a valuable source of the B vitamins which are needed to convert the foods we eat into the form of energy which the body uses as fuel. Very active people burn more fuel and therefore demand these vitamins in larger quantities. Fiber, a natural constituent of whole grains and cereals, is thought by many to play a protective role against several of the nation's leading killer diseases. The Fleischmann's Corn Oil Margarine used in this recipe is big on flavor, but low in saturated fats and cholesterol-free, another nutritional plus. So take a hefty slice of the bread of life and stop cheating yourself of homemade goodness.

CRACKED WHEAT BREAD

Makes 2 loaves (24 slices)

- 4 3/4 to 5 3/4 cups unsifted flour
- 3 tablespoons sugar
- 4 teaspoons salt
- 2 packages active dry yeast
- 1 1/2 cups water
- 1/2 cup milk
- 3 tablespoons Fleischmann's Margarine
- 1 cup cracked wheat

In a large bowl thoroughly mix 2 cups flour, sugar, salt and undissolved yeast.

Combine water, milk and margarine in a saucepan. Heat over low heat until liquids are warm. (Margarine does not need to melt.) Gradually add to dry ingredients and beat for 2 minutes at medium speed of electric mixer, scraping bowl occasionally. Add cracked wheat and beat at high speed for 2 minutes, scraping bowl occasionally. Stir in enough additional flour to make a soft dough. Turn out onto lightly floured board; knead until smooth and elastic, about 8 to 10 minutes. Place in greased bowl, turning to grease top. Cover; let rise in warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk, about 1 hour.

Punch dough down. Turn out onto lightly floured board. Cover, let rest on board for 15 minutes. Shape into 2 loaves. Place in greased 8 1/2 x 4 1/2 x 2 1/2-inch loaf pans. Cover; let rise in warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk, about 1 hour.

Bake at 400° F. about 30 minutes, or until done. Remove from pans and cool on wire racks.

USING MODEL LAMBS for 4-H project meetings when it is not practical to have the real thing present, state 4-H livestock specialist Tom Zurcher wants "learning by doing" to be the emphasis of every 4-H livestock activity.

Specialist Uses Stuffed Lamb To Teach Treatment

Tom Zurcher is a 4-H livestock specialist who wants young people to learn by doing, whether or not a live animal is present, reports Deborah Matero, Pennington county extension agent.

Zurcher recently joined the Minnesota 4-H staff. You sometimes see him carrying a stuffed lamb in his arms. The fake-fleeced creature can receive much of the treatment a real lamb gets.

"It can be delivered (with coffee can serving as mother), it can be innoculated, its tail can be docked, it can be castrated and its temperature can be taken. Through all of this, it can teach!" Miss Matero said.

"We help 4-H'ers learn by giving them a situation," Zurcher says. "We put the lamb under a boat and tell them it is about to be born. Its mother needs help, and they are the only ones around to help. Then they must deliver it through the coffee can."

The styrofoam-stuffed animal is a visual aid — which means first of all it is a gimick for getting the youths' attention.

"At a project meeting the leader just sets the lamb on the kitchen table," Zurcher explains. "As the members arrive, they are drawn to it. The want to touch it, take off its velcro-attached tail or look in its mouth. They are already learning, and most importantly they are asking questions."

The beginners may start off with an anatomy lesson. They are given pins with names of body parts written on them and allowed to figure out for themselves what is what. The leader guides them with questions and praise. "Yes, that's close to the loin, just move it up about an inch or so. What part of the lamb do you think the best chops come from?"

From anatomy, students may graduate to treating for internal parasites and then to saving a cold, weak lamb using a lamb revival tube. There are about 20 activities using the livestock substitute. The member is rewarded for successfully completing one, and then he or she feels motivated to move on to something more advanced.

The aim of the lamb project goes beyond successful sheep production. Putting young people in a situation (such as the unexpected lamb birth) help them deal with unexpected situations in real life. Praising and rewarding them for venturing to learn in a lively group sets the state for life-long learning.

"We must always practice what we preach in 4-H — learning by doing — even in our project meetings," Zurcher says. "It's been difficult with livestock since most of the 'doing' is out in the barn. But now, you can take your lamb into the kitchen. The 'experimental learning' can happen with young people seated around a kitchen table."

While an agent in Clackamas county, Oregon, Zurcher designed four lambs — a Suffolk, a Hampshire, a Columbia and an all black one. They are about the size of the real new-born lamb, with pink yard umbilical cord still attached (by a snap). A 4-H member in advanced sewing project can make the creature from Tom's pattern in about eight hours with $10 in materials. Patterns are available from the state 4-H office.

Lambs are just the beginning for Tom. He hopes each county will soon have its own model foal, calf, pig and rabbit. But more importantly, he wants "learning by doing" throughout 4-H, especially at livestock project meetings.

4-H youth development is a program of the Pennington county office of the University of Minnesota agricultural extension service.

Knuttila Piano Students Earn High Ratings

Fourteen piano students of Marcia Knuttila passed the level "A" theory contest of the Minnesota music teachers association held recently at Moorhead state university.

Eight students received the top rating of "passing with distinction." Andrea Ault, eighth grade, and Trentyn Johnson, 11th grade, both received perfect scores. Also in the top category were Brenda Ode, fourth grade; Sandra Rustan, seventh grade; Renelle Twistol, ninth grade; Angela Vigen, sixth grade; Leslie Williamson, 11th grade; and Pam Wassink, 11th grade.

Five students receiving a rating of "excellent" were Hope Dyrud, ninth grade; Jennifer Glass, eighth grade; Nora Hushagen, eighth grade; Lana Jorgenson, seventh grade; and Corie Larson, eighth grade. Jennifer Davidson, sixth grade, also received a passing score in the theory contest.

These students will now prepare for the district piano contest of the association to be held February 2 at Moorhead state university.

WEATHERSTRIPPING VITAL TO SAVE ENERGY

Seals Can Cut Fuel Use 15% To 30%

Do you think your home is snug? Look again! You may find gaps around doors, windows, attic stairwells, pet entrances, cellar doors and many other places.

Add them together and they can equal a hole a foot or two square!

Gaps leak money. Weatherstripping closes them off. That's why weatherstripping/caulking is number one on "The Big Ten Check List" of energy-saving hints prepared by the National Institute of Building Science.

According to Schlegel Corp. and other members of the N.I.B.S. Committee For Home Energy Conservation, you can reduce your home heating bill 15% to 30% by sealing these cracks in your home!

Check Windows

First, check your windows and doors for drafts. Use a candle or cigarette smoke to see if air is entering.

If you have drafts, check the window and storm window for caulking lapses. Then examine the seals in your storm window. They can shrink, and may need replacement, a job you can do easily.

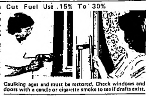
If you have no storm windows, you can make one that fits inside the house using glass or plastic and special screw-on moldings.

Check Doors

Each part of a door needs a different kind of seal. The sides and top use plastic strips that self-adhere to the jamb. The bottom requires a door sweep that screws easily onto the door. A pile dust plug is used to seal the bottom corners.

Other Gaps

For pet openings, attic doors and other special spots a variety of foam shapes are available.



Caulking ages and must be restored. Check windows and doors with a candle or cigarette smoke to see if drafts exist.

French doors and windows require special weatherstripping which self-adheres to jamb. Foam shape is used to seal attic access. It self-adheres to the attic door.

Plastic strip is applied to door jamb where it self-adheres. Door presses against plastic, creating seal. Door sweep is attached to door bottom.

Tax Credits

If you spend money to weatherstrip your home, you can deduct up to 15% of the cost of the weather-seals from your income tax. There's a limit of $300 and it's for materials only, not labor.

Free Leaflet

A four-page tabloid, "Seal-It-Now," contains the full story on how weatherstripping can save you money during the coming winter. Write to Weatherseal Information Center, Box 23113, Rochester, NY 14692.

Den 7 and the Knox Webelos den put on a skit relating to fire safety. All the cubs participated in two games and a group sparkler. Denner and assistant denners were recognized and pins and ribbons were awarded to the boys who qualified for the summer pack activity award.

The pack meeting was closed with the recitation of the law of the pack followed by refreshments.

Geology Report On Minnesota Now Available

A Minnesota geology report based on records of well drillers throughout the state has been published by the Minnesota Geological Survey, according to survey director Matt Walton.

Water-well drillers have been required since 1975 to submit records of new wells to the Minnesota health department. Copies of these reports were also sent to the Geological Survey.

After the well locations were checked in the field to obtain precise geographic coordinates and surface elevation, the survey geologists examined the drillers' description of the subsurface geology in order to classify the rock and materials encountered by the drillers.

The information collected by the geologists was recorded in a computer file by University of Minnesota student employees. Currently, the computer files contain about 9,000 water-well records that give thorough coverage of parts or all of 17 counties in south-central Minnesota.

The computer files are expected to grow to between 5,000 and 10,000 well records in the next few years.

Knowledge of subsurface geology is helpful for planning engineering, mineral exploration, and research projects, Walton said. The Geological survey also uses the information for mapping.

Copies of the report, published as Information Circular 16, and titled "Minnesota Geological Survey Subsurface Geology Base: Water Wells," is available from the Geological Survey, 1633 Eustis Street, St. Paul, Minn. 55108, for $2 plus 60 cents postage. Minnesota residents must include 8 cents tax.

TIM HARTLEY MS3, son of Mr. and Mrs. Luverne Harley of Thief River Falls, left Alameda, Calif. naval base November 13 for a tour of duty on aircraft carrier USS Coral Sea. He is in his third year of service with the navy.

Army Adds Two New Programs To Options

Department of the Army will soon add two incentive programs to its available enlistment options.

Beginning December 4, qualified high school graduates can enlist for two years as well as for the conventional three or four-year army enlistments. In addition, individuals enlisting for two, three or four years will be eligible for $2,000, $4,000 or $6,000 educational bonuses, respectively.

Educational bonuses are also limited to high school graduates and are contingent upon membership in the Veterans educational assistant program (VEAP).

The VEAP is an army-matching, two-for-one savings program. A new recruit who saves between $50 and $75 monthly during his enlistment and earmarks these savings for college will have the army contribute double the amount he has saved for college.

For example, a recruit saves a maximum of $75 montly for three years during his four-year enlistment, totaling $2,700. The army matches it with an additional $5,400. The army then adds the incentive of $6,000 giving the veteran a total of $14,100 for college.

New programs, together with existing army cash bonuses of up to $3,000 for training in certain critical skill areas, make it possible for a soldier to earn up to $17,100 in cash and educational bonuses.

Full details of the program will be available through local army recruiters.

Tighten Home For Winter, Cut Heat Bill

Cool, gentle breezes are a welcome, refreshing part of nature, but they lose their charm very quickly once the trees begin to lose their leaves. This fall, as you're attempting to batten down the hatches of your home before the winter onslaught, don't neglect one important aspect of protection — caulking and weather-stripping.

If you added up all the cracks around windows, doors and other openings in your home and put them together, the total area could be as big as an open window. Even the smallest cracks cause big heat losses. Heat can be lost through conduction — simply passing through walls and windows. It's also lost when the warm inside air flows out through cracks and other openings and it's lost through infiltration when cold outside air is able to flow inside.

Your best defense against heat loss is a tight home. Fortunately, few household improvements are as inexpensive or as easy to do as caulking and weather-stripping. You can caulk and weatherstrip a "leaky" home for under $100 and recover more than that amount in fuel savings the first year.

Remember that caulking should be applied wherever two different materials or parts of the house meet. If you find areas around doors and windows where the caulking and putty are obviously old and cracked you're almost sure to find drafts as well. You can extend the life of caulking compounds by priming the area first and painting over the caulking afterward.

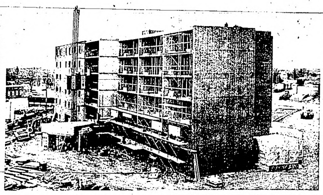
Caulking compound is generally available in two forms — preformed rope or cartridges to be used in a caulking gun. Rope caulk is good for small jobs and costs about 35 cents per window. The only tools needed are a putty knife, screwdriver, caulking gun and ladder.

Weatherstripping comes in a variety of materials. There are advantages to each, depending on specific need.

Loosely fitting windows can have up to five times more heat loss than average fitting windows. Check for leaky windows by feeling around the edges on a windy day, or move alighted candle around the edges. Where the flame flickers, heat is being lost. You can check both windows and doors at night by shining a flashlight along the edges from the outisde while someone inside watches to see where light penetrates. Condensation build-up on the inside of storm windows is another sign that weather-stripping is needed.

There is a word of caution which must be expressed whenever people are urged to tighten up their homes. Caulking and weather-stripping reduce the amount of air leaking through your house, but also limit the supply of outside air needed by the furnace and water heater. When a house is well-insulated, tightly caulked, and weatherstripped, it's often necessary to supply a source of outside air for fuel combustion for safety. Adding an outside air supply directly to the furnace room improves fuel efficiency, lowers heating bills, and ensures adequate combustion air for health and safety.

More detailed information is available from the Minnesota Energy Agency information center. You can call 296-5175 in the Twin Cities Metro area or toll-free 800-652-9747 if you live outstate. The agency has a pamphlet on weatherstripping and caulking entitled. Conservation Guide 5.



CONSTRUCTION CONTINUES on the Riverview Terrace apartment building located between the school district service center and Northwestern hospital's medical office building in Thief River Falls. The six-story building is rapidly being enclosed with bricklayers working behind plastic sheeting for protection against the cold. This view is taken toward the southwest. The building will front on the extension of LaBree avenue and Zeh street south of the hospital with the back of the building toward highway 32.

City Council Reviews Letter On Utilities

storage and the rising problem of rats in various areas.

An item not on the agenda developed from statements made by Robert Bregier, building inspector in Thief River Falls. Question involved a home owned by Clifford Larson, rural route 2, Thief River Falls, that is situated on south Spruce avenue. Criteria used to tag the home unhealthy by the inspector was solely by outward appearance, Bregier said. Following proper notices and phone calls to help clean up the home, no results were reached, he said.

"The house could definitely be restored," he said. "The AVTI is interested in it at the present time for use by their carpentry class."

"Immediate steps will have to be taken to tell Larson to restore the home, at least enough so it is satisfactory to the surrounding neighbors," city attorney Wurst said.

"There is no evidence of traffic of rats in the home," Bregier said, stating conclusions reached after an inspection of the home by Bregier and Ken Froschheiser, police chief in Thief River Falls.

"Two rats were found in front of the house but we have no proof that they came out of the house," Froschheiser said.

"I believe we are emerging into a situation in our country in which there is probability of more rats because of wood heating and various methods of insulating homes," alderman Bill Penning said. "We must do something more substantial with materials that may attract rats to an area, and we should allow for this in an ordinance."

Alderman Goodrich introduced the resolution to state that the house be cleaned up, at least re-sided, so it is suitable to the neighbors, with the idea of selling the building to the AVTI for its use (although the school would not begin work on the home until next fall). The resolution, seconded by Alderman Restad, carried.

Agenda items carried over from the previous council meeting began with a request by Jon Metusalem, realtor and speaker for L.M. Sullivan of Sully's welding in Thief River Falls, regarding the sale of the shop to Arlen Ellingson, Thief River Falls.

"We have made a purchase agreement and are seeking the assurance that Ellingson can operate in the vicinity of the shop and feel secure about his future," Metusalem said. "I believe the nature of his intended use for the building is better than the previous use. All that is needed at this time is a name on the final paper."

The question of opposition from anyone with adjacent property that arose from Mayor Bob Carlson was answered by Ken Wiebolt, Thief River Falls.

"I am not opposed to the use of the building but of the rezoning of the property," he said. The rezoning would be from R-1 to C-2 (highway commercial).

"It is not fair to take someone's property away from them as long as its use is compatible," alderman Goodrich said. "A buyer has been found — we have a solution to our problem."

A resolution was introduced by alderman Ambrose Wysoski and seconded by alderman Penning to grant the use of the building to the new owner (excluding the rezoning ordinance) and was resolved by a unanimous roll call vote.

Request came from Mrs. Willie McLean, Thief River Falls, to use the balcony and kitchen in the city auditorium January 19 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. for the Boy Scouts' fun activity day. Request was granted by council members, based on the availability of the auditorium at that time.

Further request to council members came from Art Cloutier of Fred's cab service in Thief River Falls regarding a cab fare increase.

"Thirteen months ago I applied for an increase in cab fares and we received it," he said. "And, as a result, our system has improved some. We haven't increased our wages for three years. I am requesting the minimum fare which runs up to three miles to be changed."

The resolution was introduced by alderman Milan Borsheim to grant the increase of the minimum fare from $2 to $2.50, beginning January 1, 1980.

Mike Mongoven, park and recreation director, addressed council members concerning Simon Olson, New York Mills, who is requesting a Golden Gloves boxing franchise for boxing practice at the Thief River Falls armory.

"A great deal of the money Olson will be investing personally," Mongoven said. "He is requesting the franchise to protect his interests."

"The city of Thief River Falls cannot issue an exclusive franchise," city attorney Wurst reminded members.

"Boxing is a sport that must be carefully supervised," alderman Penning said. "I move that we write a letter to the state boxing committee in support of Olson's request for the franchise and that the park and recreation department make sure the boxing wouldn't mismatch young people and that it would be properly supervised." The request was granted, with alderman Borsheim casting the only dissenting vote.

In the planning commission recommendation to approve Harry Oen's Riverbend second subdivision preliminary plat pending written notice from Rocksbury township, council members concluded that the recommendation of the preliminary plat be granted. Plat of land concerned is the area south of Thief River Falls, and west of the airport road, which includes 17 acres.

Questions arose regarding the ordinance which states that five per cent of the land platted in city limits must go for park use. However, Oen's land in question lies outside the city limits. Decision was reached that the park would be maintained rather than to accept payment in lieu of land, with Stewart and Walker in charge of reviewing the original plat of land.

Informational items issued by the park and recreation board for discussion by council members concerned the 25 cent fee that is to be charged for all public skating sessions and that no passes be honored. Also, a membership pass be required for all family skating sessions. Second item for discussion concerned the formation of a committee by the director of parks and recreation by January 1, 1980 to study the possibilities of constructing an outdoor swimming pool in Thief River Falls.

"There are presently no outdoor facilities of this type," alderman Penning said. "The facility could add measurably to our city, but there are things that have to be studied before the facility's need is considered. I believe a pool facility would add to the life of Thief River Falls."

"We should make sure council members are not disregarding other things that should be addressed, for instance the parking problem in Thief River Falls," Mayor Carlson said.

Les Nordhagen of the Thief River Falls sanitation service appeared before council members concerning the matter of supplying sanitation service to the city of Thief River Falls.

"The greatest concern here is that we have to offer the sanitation service up for bids," alderman Borsheim said. "But we have the right to check any or all bids."

Mayor Carlson reminded council members that both high and low bids, along with experience would be considered in the final decision, but that council action in having to go to the bid process must be accepted.

Council members rejected bids for the IH crawler tractor ($18,000) and for the FWD snowblower ($875). They agreed to pay $28,305.73 for Stewart and Walker, Inc. for 1979-'80 utility improvements, which includes work done on the proposed street project. Also, $28,652.80 will be paid to Molstad Excavating, Inc. of Grand Forks for service line repairs in Thief River Falls.

Decision was reached from the previous council meeting concerning the matter of one hour loading zone signs in Thief River Falls, that a letter will be sent to those people only who are involved with the loading zones.

"The problem we didn't realize," police chief Froschheiser said, is that with changing the signs to one hour loading zones, anyone may feel they can park for one hour in a loading zone."

The resolution was introduced by alderman Borsheim to leave the signs in their present manner.

In license committee recommendations, new fees were set for the following: on-sale 3.2 beer license — increase from $150 to $200 annually; off-sale beer license — increase from $50 to $60 annually; junk dealer's license — increase from $25 to $36 annually; and on-sale club license — increase from $100 to $500 annually. Licenses were also granted to the Jaycee women for a raffle and to Angeline Larson for a cigarette sales at the curling club in Thief River Falls.

Status of the service line freeze-up project indicates that 34 lines are actually completed at this date. It was decided that work would continue for two more weeks, weather permitting, to reach the 50' mark goal previously set. The service lines being worked on now include those that the city has not been able to thaw in the past.

Next council meeting was scheduled for December 10, at which all costs for utilities would be discussed by council members and rate adjustments would be reviewed.

Energy-Related Decisions Made In Every Home

If you give it some thought, you'll quickly realize that energy-related decisions are part of just about everything we do.

In housing, we make decisions about the type of home we live in, its size, location and what type of weatherization measures to install. We decide where to travel, how often, in what type of vehicle and whether to use public transportation. We make decisions about cleanliness — how long to stay in a hot shower, when to throw clothes down the laundry chute and which wash temperatures to use.

About one-third of the energy in this country is consumed by households for in-home and transportation purposes. "How much family members consume and how they switch to energy alternatives are very important choices that will have implications far into the future," says M. Janice Hogan, University of Minnesota family social scientist. "There has been a significant movement toward decreased energy consumption in some individual and isolated cases, but in reality, energy conservation has hardly begun."

Hogan and four graduates assistants recently completed a study examining the process families go through when making energy conservation decisions. Data was collected from 40 Twin Cities families over a one-year period.

Some families are having a hard time arriving at conservation solutions that are agreeable to all family members, the study showed.

"Conflict surrounding energy conservation decisions was found in one out of three families," Hogan reports. "The most common conflict concerned temperature preferences in the home."

For the most part, Hogan says, adults most often make the final decisions and expect the rest of the family to implement their energy-use policy.

Comparing the adults in the home, males showed more comprehensive knowledge about energy alternatives than females, leaving Hogan to conclude that women will need more knowledge and skill about energy conservation to more fully participate in conservation decisions, especially those women who are single.

No matter what one's situation is, Hogan feels that energy conservation education is a must, and that it should encompass conflict resolution skills to help families reach decisions in an intelligent, peaceful manner.

"We all must start making conservation decisions; in time it may not be an option but a necessity," Hogan says. "For those families who started implementing conservation in their homes, many found it to be a satisfying challenge. In our study; families in both lower and upper income groups exhibited this attitude."

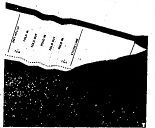
How To Make Custom Pleats The Easy Way



NICE AND EASY — If you've always wanted pleated draperies but were hesitant to tackle the job, the new pre-printed tape developed by the drapery hardware specialists at Kirsch is the perfect answer for reluctant do-it-yourselfers.

Behind the pretty lines of pleated draperies, there lurks a perplexing problem. It's the frustrating by-guess and by-gosh job of measuring, folding and stitching each and every pleat. And that's why some homemakers tackle the task reluctantly.

Well, take heart. Kirsch Company, the drapery hardware specialists, have developed a nifty pre-printed tape that shows you exactly where and how to fold, tack and stitch material. You simply sew the tape to the flat drapery fabric and then fold, as indicated on the tape, to form evenly spaced pleats. Called "Custom Pleats," the tape serves both as a printed pattern and as a drapery heading stiffener.

Because the draperies hang with standard drapery hooks, there are no special pleater hooks to buy. And "Custom Pleats" even costs much less than other pleating tapes. It's polyester, so it's washable; although washability of the draperies will depend upon the fabric used. "Custom Pleats" is available at most fabric shops and department stores, where it's sold by the yard.

So, if you haven't been willing to tackle draperies, take heart. Let "Custom Pleats" take the problem out of pinch-pleats.

THE VOICE of BUSINESS

by Richard L. Lesher, President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

Our Government Never Met a Tax It Didn't Hike

How, a reporter asked him, would you describe in capsule form what ails the United States? The answer: "When you tax something, you get less of it. When you reward something, you get more of it. In America today, we tax work, thrift, investment, employment, production, incentives and success, while rewarding non-work, unemployment, welfare spending, consumption, leisure, idleness and mediocrity."

Meet Jack Kemp. Formerly a star NFL quarterback, and presently a Congressman from Buffalo, Mr Kemp has become one of the most articulate leaders of the growing national drive to limit federal spending and slash the rate of taxation. Recently, he and Senator Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, the very knowledgeable chairman of the Joint Economic Committee, were featured speakers at a Washington news conference on tax reform.

The news conference was organized by Citizens Choice, a 40,000 member grassroots taxpayers group, with the purpose of calling on Congress to enact specific tax reforms. They include: Lowering tax rates across the board and setting a maximum rate of less than 50 per cent; ending the taxation of interest on savings; ending the double taxation of income, whereby government taxes income first in the form of corporate profits and later in the form of individual dividends, and encouraging business to increase investment by making it cheaper to replace outdates plants and equipment.

There is a common thread running through each of these proposals and it can be summed up in one word: incentives. Senator Bentsen signalled this approach earlier this year when his Joint Economic Committee issued an historic report that rejected Washington's 30-year preoccupation with more government spending and printing of money. Instead, the report stressed the need for policies to encourage savings and investment in view of increasing worker productivity and lessening inflation.

Senator Bentsen, Congressman Kemp and the members of Citizens Choice share a common conviction. Washington's almost exclusive preference for pumping up the economy with more spending, with more demand for goods and services, has severely impaired the ability of our economy to supply them. So, in Kemp's words: "We need to build a consensus to stimulate supply and production instead of consumption and deficits." Thus, his call for incentives in the form of tax rate reduction to spur greater production, investment, risk-taking and entrepreneurship.

The Administration resists tax reduction with two arguments. First, it blames inflation on working Americans rather than the government's printing presses — even though the supply of new dollar bills has been increasing more than twice as fast as the production of goods and services. Never mind. Blaming others permits the Administration to announce with a straight face that inflation prevents it from granting us a tax cut.

Second, by claiming its policies are basically sound, the Administration disclaims the need for new supply-oriented tax policies. This line of reasoning is fine as long as you are willing (as the Administration apparently is) to ignore our competitive record against our major trading partners in recent years. As noted in a prior column, we have experienced: the lowest rate of savings; the lowest rate of productivity increase; the second lowest rate of investment, and a declining rate of growth.

Ultimately, the greatest victim of this charade has been the American worker. Federal tax receipts have soared from $195 billion in 1970 to $514 billion in fiscal 1980, without Congress ever voting an income tax increase. Pure magic? Not at all. Everytime you think you receive a cost of living increase, you are actually being forced into a higher tax bracket, and so you will pay a higher percentage of your income in taxes. The progressivity of tax code ensures that taxes always increase faster than inflation, and inflation ensures that taxes increase automatically. Think you can beat those odds?

Chances are you won't, because the bottom line is this: Today, many blue-collar workers are closer to the 50 per cent tax bracket — one formerly reserved for those of wealth. Why work that extra hour or day when government taxes half your reward away? We cannot solve this problem with one-shot election-year tax rebates that ignore the real problem of inflation relentlessly pushing more people toward confiscatory rates of taxation. We simply must cut the rate of federal spending and concentrate on producing and investing America back toward new jobs, new technological breakthroughs and new world leadership. Substantial tax rate reductions to restore incentives for individuals coupled with tax changes to generate more funds for business to invest and grow are what we need, and they are what supply-side economics is all about.

ENERGY UPDATE

HOW DOES NUCLEAR ENERGY AFFECT OUR ECONOMIC STABILITY?

By Robert A. Georgine

Robert A. Georgine is president of the Building and Construction Trades Department, AFL-CIO, and its 17 affiliated international unions, representing 4.6 million members.

Georgine

The availability of jobs and opportunity for our citizens to enjoy a decent standard of living depends on this country's continuing economic vitality. Prosperity and an expanding economy cannot be provided unless an ample supply of reasonably priced domestic energy is assured.

Lack of sufficient energy strikes especially hard at the employment opportunities of those in the middle and lower income groups. It has been estimated that 59 per cent of all the energy used in the U.S. is used in work activities of persons with family incomes of less than $16,000. In order to avoid serious electric shortages in the coming decades and avoid the hardships which would result, I am convinced that nuclear energy must play a major role in meeting our future energy demand.

I reject the arguments of those advocating a shutdown of this technology. Even with Three Mile Island, nuclear is an energy source with a remarkably good safety record after nearly a quarter of century of commercial operation. Despite the fact that no one was killed or injured at Three Mile Island, it was a very serious industrial accident and we must continue to improve the technology.

But, we can't abandon an electrical supply that provides this nation with as much energy as the entire U.S. refinery capacity in residual oil—the type used to make electricity. If we had to import that oil, it would cost the nation an additional $6 billion a year. We can't abandon an electric source that provides nearly half of all the electricity in the Northeast and which, in fact, literally kept the lights from going out during the coal strike and winter freeze of 1977-78.

National Economic Research Associates of New York says if no new nuclear plants were permitted to go into operation, consumers would pay an extra $119 billion for all the electricity consumed between now and 2000. This economic consulting firm also reports that oil imports would be increased by roughly one million barrels per day during the 1980's and by 3 million barrels per day in the year 2000. Even if it were possible, the price of abandoning nuclear power is unacceptably high. We must take the lessons from Three Mile Island, apply the necessary improvements and move ahead.

We must somehow come to grips with the risks and benefits posed by all energy sources and then make our judgments. If we are stampeded into abandoning a proven technology or regulating it irrationally with nothing to replace the energy it produces, we are risking serious shortfalls in the decades to come.

The American workforce has been growing at twice the rate of the U.S. population as a whole in recent years. In order to provide the jobs that are needed for a full employment economy it is imperative that we continue to expand domestic energy resources.

Our economic welfare and the promise of upward economic mobility that has so long fueled the American dream depends on economic growth. All this will require not less, but more energy.

Report Offers Solutions For Child Care

"Community Solutions for Child Care," the report of a conference cosponsored by the women's bureau and the national manpower institute, offers a number of answers to the crucial question of who will pay for child care. It describes innovative programs operated by child care agencies in local governments, private for-profit businesses, parents' cooperative and non-profit groups, industries, labor unions, hospitals and licensed family day care homes.

Report contains information about funding through government, labor, business and foundation resources, and includes examples of several successful child care programs. Solutions to some of the special child care problems such as sick child care, transportation and sex-role stereotyping are also considered.

Cosponsoring the conference was part of the women's bureau' continuing effort to increase child care options for working parents. Bureau director Alexis Herman said, "With the increasing number of mothers of young children in the labor force, I believe the need for reliable, quality child care is critical. I hope this report will help stimulate new ideas that will bring local groups together to work out solutions to help meet the needs of working parents and their children."

Free, single copies of "Community Solutions for Child Care" are available from the Women's Bureau, U.S. Department of Labor, Washington, D.C. 20210. A self-addressed mailing label will expedite handling of requests. Publication may also be purchased from the superintendent of documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402 for $3.50.

DID YOU KNOW?

KEEPING AMERICA BEAUTIFUL CAN SAVE ENERGY

In pioneer days, as the nation was moving west, abandoned homesteads were frequently burned to recover the valuable handwrought nails that held them together.

Today, such extremes are unnecessary. But in a land of plenty, some people turn once-useful products into unsightly litter. It takes time, money and energy to clean up litter.

The Foam Cup and Container Division of the Society of the Plastics Industry, a member of Keep America Beautiful, has come up with a few suggestions for people who want to eliminate litter.

Campaign for, and use, public trash baskets. Cans and bottles can be recycled, and today progressive communities are incinerating paper, plastics and garbage to produce heat and energy. Properly collected trash not only reduces litter, but could bring economic and energy benefits.

Make more use of personal shopping bags or carts to save paper bags for food markets.

Use the back of an envelope for scratch paper, and use both sides of memo pads and stationery.

Save wrapping paper and giftwrap for future use.

Don't litter yourself, and make the extra effort by picking up some thoughtless person's litter.

It's the little things that count.

STUFFING RING AND THE LAST OF THE TURKEY

Herb Seasoned Stuffing ring perfect for serving Turkey a la King or other creamed dishes.

The stuffing from the turkey is gone as is the gravy. What's left are the last tender tidbits of poultry and they're too good to waste. What's needed is a new recipe idea if you are to enjoy those last morsels of leftover turkey.

Pepperidge Farm suggests a freshly baked stuffing ring mold with a Turkey a la King filling.

STUFFING RING WITH TURKEY A LA KING

1 (8-ounce) package Pepperidge Farm Herb Seasoned Stuffing
1 (10 3/4-ounce) can condensed chicken broth
4 eggs, well beaten
1 cup milk
2 (10 1/2-ounce each) cans condensed cream of chicken soup
2 cups diced cooked turkey
1 (4-ounce) jar pimiento, drained and diced
1 (10-ounce) package frozen peas

In a bowl, mix stuffing, chicken broth, eggs and milk. Pour mixture into a well greased 6-cup ring mold. Bake in a preheated oven (350° F.) for 40 minutes or until puffed and brown. While ring is baking, combine remaining ingredients in a saucepan and simmer until piping hot and peas are cooked. Unmold ring on a platter and pour Turkey a la King into a bowl and place in center of ring. Cut ring into sections and spoon Turkey a la King over stuffing. Makes 6 servings.

Northmen Lose Players

Season opener for the 1979-80 Northland community college basketball team isn't scheduled to be played until Saturday when the Northmen host their alumni in a 7:30 p.m. game, but coach Chet Engelman has already suffered a pair of losses — in the personnel department.

Randy Lindfors of Fosston and Mike Singer of Roseau, a pair of promising performers, have both left the squad because of personal reasons. In addition, sophomore guard Joe Kraska, a sure starter, is lost to the team because of a football injury.

The loss of Lindfors, a strong 6-6 freshman who graduated from high school a couple of years ago, was a big setback. He might have been the best player on the squad.

"We're a little thin," admitted Engelman, "but we played with seven once before and we'll do it again if necessary." Northland's 12-man roster features returning sophomore starters Mike Carriere, a 6-3 forward from Middle River, and Vince Parker, a 5-6 guard from Inkster, Mich.

Record Passing Attack

Not that it's related locally, but the numbers are so remarkable we can't let them go by without mentioning them. A younger brother, Colin, who plays on the New Ulm high school football team gave us a copy of the Eagles' 1979 statistics that showed junior quarterback Neil Stock setting 12 new school passing records and a pair of marks that are recognized as state standards.

Stock, a second-year starter, completed 178 of 321 pass attempts for 1,916 yards this fall. He threw 17 touchdown passes and tossed 10 two-point conversion passes. He was also intercepted 18 times as the Eagles finished just 2-7 in the Class A South Central Conference. The completions and yardage figures go down in the books as state records.

It's taken Thief River Falls quarterbacks — all of them — six years to match those kinds of figures. From 1974 through the 1979 seasons, the Thief River Falls passing attack shows 108 completions in 345 attempts for 1,949 yards.

New Ulm had six receivers this fall with 10 or more catches, headlined by Mike Ostrom who caught 60 passes for 575 yards and Pat Herzog who caught 50 for 581 yards.

Miscellaneous

+Bill Herzog, Lincoln high school head football coach from 1963-65 and now a basketball official and a tennis coach at Stillwater, will be one of the officials for this year's Notre Dame-UCLA college basketball game, one of the nation's premier sports attractions.

+Prairie Public Television (KGFE, ch. 2) will carry this weekend's WCHA college hockey series matching Minnesota and North Dakota in the UND Winter Sports Center. Both games will be shown live, beginning at 8:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday night.

+Fergus Falls is constructing a steel building to enclose a practice ice sheet at the fairgrounds, with the facility to be used by figure skaters, open skaters, youth hockey players, traveling teams and high school teams. The ice sheet, measuring 80-by-180 feet, should be ready in early December.

+Todd Trickle, a freshman from Thief River Falls, is the second line center on the University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire hockey team. His wings are sophomores Wes Bolin of Minneapolis and Paul Martin of Chicago. This is the third year that Eau Claire has fielded a varsity hockey team. In the transitional year from a club to varsity team in 1977-78 the Blugolds finished 4-14. Last year the team finished 6-22. First-year UW-Eau Claire coach Wally Akervik expects to see improvement this season, but his roster features 11 freshmen, 11 sophomores and two juniors. And a tougher schedule will find the Blugolds playing 15 games against teams that participated in either the NAIA or NCAA Division II post-season tournaments last season. Freshman defenseman Brad Hanson of Bemidji is the only other Section 8 high school product on the Eau Claire roster.

FIVE GIRLS ON the Lincoln high school swimming team are scheduled to participate this week in the 1979 Minnesota State High School League state swimming and diving championships at the Cooke Hall pool on the University of Minnesota campus in Minneapolis. Making the trip will be, back row left-to-right, Kathy Dillon, Prowlers head coach John Hustad, Joan Giauque and Lisa Desrocher; front, Brenda Lund and Betsie Hallstrom.

Lincoln Girls To Compete In State Swimming Meet

Sprinter Betsie Hallstrom, involved in an automobile accident Monday that required 28 stiches to close a head wound, is a questionable performer this week as a collection of Lincoln high school girls ready themselves for the 1979 Minnesota State High School League state swimming and diving championships Friday and Saturday in the Cooke Hall pool on the University of Minnesota campus in Minneapolis.

Hallstrom, who qualified for a pair of state meet events during last week's Section 3 meet at Bemidji State University, has not yet been definitely ruled out of state meet competition where she would swim the 50-yard freestyle and swim on the 400-yard freestyle relay team.

A junior, Hallstrom swam a 26.52 to finish second to Brainerd's Monica Hanson, in the Section 3 meet 50-yard freestyle. Top two finishers in each event, along with the top four divers, earned state meet spots.

In the 400-yard freestyle relay, Hallstrom joined juniors Brenda Lund, Joan Giauque and Kathy Dillon for a 4:00.67 second place finish behind Moorhead's 3:54.44.

If she is unable to swim this weekend, Hallstrom's spot in the 50 would be forfeited by the Prowlers. But senior Johanna Desrocher would be used to complete the 400-yard freestyle unit.

Divers Lisa Desrocher, a sophomore, and Lund will also represent Thief River Falls at the state meet. Lund won her third straight Section 3 title with a meet record 394.85 point performance during the Tuesday-Wednesday competition. Desrocher placed fourth with 311.60 points.

As expected, Moorhead won the Section 3 team title with 231 points, ending Thief River Falls' two-year championship reign. Brainerd was second with 216 points, followed by Thief River Falls 188, Alexandria 151, Detroit Lakes 100, Bemidji 98, Fergus Falls 90, Melrose 36, Park Rapids 36, and Little Falls 17.

"The kids swam well," noted Thief River Falls coach John Hustad. "Most of them made nice improvements. And our divers dove well — they looked pretty good out there."

Competition will become dramatically tougher this week, notes Hustad. "The swimmers have set some goals they'd like to meet and the divers want to see how many cuts they can make," he explained.

At the Section 3 meet, Hustad said a 3:59.92 in the prelims by the 400-yard freestyle relay team was "the highlight of the entire meet for us." It was the first time the Prowlers had broken the four-minute barrier. "They'd like to go under four minutes again in the state meet," said Hustad, "and Betsie, if she swims, is capable of taking off some more time in the 50."

Lund will be making her fourth state meet appearance, a string that began with a stunning sixth place finish as an eighth-grader. She is one of only three Thief River Falls girls to win a Section 3 title. Desrocher, meanwhile, is making her second straight state meet trip. The cuts they hope to make come after their third, fifth and eighth dives, which puts them in the top 12 finals.

"Branda has a chance," acknowledged Hustad. "She really responds well to team pressure. Now it's just a matter of how well she's prepared for the individual competition. Both divers have looked really good in practice lately."

Prowlers Open 1979-80 Season Against Roseau

Meeting in the season opener for the fifth straight year, Thief River Falls and Roseau will begin the 1979-80 high school basketball season Friday when the Prowlers and Rams meet at 7:30 p.m. in the Lincoln high school gym.

Once overshadowed by its hockey program, Roseau basketball teams have asserted themselves in recent years as North Border Conference and District 32 contenders among Class A northwestern Minnesota schools. And led by front line seniors 6-5 Loren Thacker, 6-4 Tim Lindgren and 6-3½ Alan Wagner, first-year head coach Ron Ruud has a ready-made title challenger this winter.

"They've (Roseau) come a long way in the last five-six years," pointed out Thief River Falls head coach Glen Peters whose prowlers began the 1975-76 season with a 72-47 win over Roseau and followed with a 77-54 triumph over the Rams to open the 1976-77 campaign. But Roseau won 69-62 in the 1977-78 opener and then came up with a 58-57 decision a year ago to make it a suddenly close series.

"From what we've heard, Roseau has an outstanding ball club — better than last year," mentioned Peters. "It's going to be a good ball game."

Thief River Falls' opening game line-up will have Kyle Hams and Mark Schmitke at the guards, Greg Miller and Jim Nyland at the forwards and Todd Young at center, with Gregg Peterson scheduled for extensive duty as an often-used sixth man. All six are seniors, with Hams, Young and Nyland returning as starters off last year's 11-10 ball club that reached the Region 8AA semifinals. Young and Hams, a third-year starter, are co-captains.

Senior Mitch Muzzy and juniors Mark Lundin and Hal Swanson will probably be the first players called off the bench.

"We've come a long way since the start of practice," noted Peters who is beginning his fifth year as head coach of the Prowlers. "All of our scrimmages have gone well for us. We're ready for a ball game. It's going to be a good game, but we're certainly capable of winning it if we play well."

The game will mark the start of the 1979-80 Thief River Falls winter sports season.

Curling Club Has Programs For Newcomers

Thief River Falls curling club will open its 1979-80 season with a "learn to curl" week-December 3-7.

Special demonstrations will be given Monday and Thursday next week at 7:30 p.m. for newcomers to the winter sport.

300 Game Bowled By Jarvis Olson

History was made Tuesday when Jarvis Olson bowled the first ever perfect 300 game in a sanctioned league at the Family Bowl in Thief River Falls.

Olson, who carries a 142 average as a member of the IWA Local 4348 team in the Tuesday Happy Hour League, began the night with his 300, then followed with a 217 and a 150 for a 667 series.

The 300 betters the recognized Family Bowl sanctioned league record high 290 game bowled by Bob Kosel in 1971.

For bowling his perfect game Olson will receive a 300 game diamond ring from the American Bowling Congress (ABC), a 300 patch and a century award for bowling 100 pins over his league average.

Northmen Will Play Alumni

Beginning his tenth season as Northland community college basketball coach, Chet Engelman, when asked what his chances were this year to win a Minnesota junior college athletic association (MJCAA) Northwest Division title, pretty much summed it up when he replied, "Hey, we're practicing every day. And we wouldn't be practicing if we didn't think we could win it. If we wanted to finish last we wouldn't practice."

A year ago Northland shared the Northwest Division pennant with Fergus Falls, finishing 9-2 in the MJCAA and 16-7 overall following an 86-68 first round state tournament loss to Golden Valley Lutheran.

But only three members of that team are on hand this year. Mike Carriere, a 6-3 forward from Middle River, and Vince Parker, a 5-6 guard from Inkster, Mich., were key performers a year ago when Parker averaged 12.7 points per game, was named to the all-division team and was selected as Northland's most valuable player. Carriere was a strong inside performer who averaged 9.8 points and six rebounds per game. The third sophomore, Morice Hendricks, a 5-10 guard from Inkster, played little as a freshman.

Parker and Carriere will be in the starting line-up Saturday when Northland opens its 1979-80 season with a 7:30 p.m. game against its alumni in the Northland gym.

Rest of the starting unit will probably include 6-5 Terry Harris, 6-3 Lyndell Knight and 6-2 Tony Smith, all Inkster products, although Harris attended a different high school than the rest — Robichaud in Dearborn Heights, Mich.

"We hope to be respectable," says Engelman whose nine-year coaching record at Northland is 131-79, including six straight winning seasons. "We run fairly well and at times we shoot well."

Parker will be the floor leader and Carriere "has looked very good" in practice, mentioned Engelman who says Harris and Smith have the potential to be fine MJCAA performers.

Rest of the squad includes 5-6 David Spilde (Karlstad), 6-1 Dave Furbish (Baudette), 6-3 Craig Pietruszewski (East Grand Forks) 5-9 Chris Kays (TRF), 5-11 Daryl Robinson (Chicago, Ill.) and 5-9 Paul Wilcox (Miami, Fla.).

"If we can keep everybody healthy, we should be all right," said Engelman. "We are going to run with the ball. The problem area will be on the boards; we're not quite as strong on the boards as we'd like to be."

The alumni will feature several players off last year's state tournament team, including Jeff Neelan of Thief River Falls, Jon Nelson of Hallock, Keith Charbonneau of Pembina, N.D. and Doug Engelman of Rosemount.

WEARING THE CAP proclaiming Thief River Falls, major league baseball pitcher Dave Goltz signed autographs Monday evening at the Lincoln high school auditorium. Goltz, a Rothsay native who pitched several seasons for the Minnesota Twins before signing with the Los Angeles Dodgers as a free agent this fall, was speaker at the pie and ice cream social sponsored by the local sports boosters club. The Thief River Falls cap was presented to Goltz by Rev. Jim Mattson who served as master of ceremonies for the evening program.

Huskies Use Rebounds To Beat Eagles 42-38

Randy Henrickson scored half of his game-high 20 points in the third quarter Tuesday as Goodridge erased a 21-17 halftime deficit and went on to claim a 42-38 high school basketball win over rival Grygla.

It was the 1979-80 season opener for the host Eagles, but it was the second outing of the year for the Huskies who rebounded from a 67-39 thrashing received at the hands of Middle River a week earlier.

"We hit the boards well," mentioned Goodridge coach Rick Nelson whose charts had the Huskies with a sizeable 42-24 rebound advantage. Henrickson and Kurth Wiseth combined for 24 rebounds. "Those two guys really did a good job on the boards," praised Nelson.

Neither team shot well as Goodridge finished 15-for-45 from the field for 33 per cent and Grygla was 15-for-53 for 28 per cent. The Huskies were 12-for-20 at the free throw line where the Eagles were 8-for-14.

"If we learn to be a little more patient, and work the ball inside we could be all right this year," mentioned Nelson who has high hopes for his front line of Henrickson, Wiseth and Carroll Bishop, although the 6-3 Henrickson was used at a guard last night as the Huskies try to shore up a problem area in the back-court.

Despite the setback in his debut as Grygla coach, newcomer Jerry Maki wasn't discouraged. "They played as a total team, and if we can continue to that we'll be all right. "We'll just need a little more hustle and work on the boards," said the Babbitt native and Bemidji State University graduate who succeeds Van Swanson as Grygla coach.

Both teams will play Friday when Grygla travels to Badger and Goodridge visits Plummer.

Bobcats Tip Cards 56-53

Larry Olson sank two free throws with 20 seconds remaining Tuesday to provide Oklee with a three-point edge that the Bobcats kept in a 56-53 high school basketball win over rival Plummer. It was the season opener for both teams.

Plummer started with a bang, running up a 20-12 first quarter lead. But Oklee responded with a 25-point second quarter for a 37-34 edge before the first half fireworks ended.

Kevin Vettleson and Steve Opdahl scored 16 and 12 points, respectively, for the winners while Marv Tvedt took game-high scoring honors for the visitors with 23 points.

Both teams shot 34 per cent from the field, but Oklee put up more shots, hitting 23 of 68 attempts while Plummer was 19-for-56. Neither team enjoyed a very productive night at the free throw line where the Bobcats were 10-for-21 and the Cardinals were 11-for-24. Plummer finished with a 35-31 edge on the boards.

MCC Drops Opener At Karlstad 49-37

Suffering through a cold shooting and poor rebounding night, Marshall County Central high school basketball team began its 1979-80 season by dropping a 49-37 game at Karlstad Tuesday.

The Nordics, who managed a 20-20 halftime tie, shot just 28 per cent from the field when they hit only 15 of 53 shots. And to make matters worse for the visitors they were outrebounded 36-18.

"Those two things beat us," mentioned Marshall County Central coach Ron Ueland. "Otherwise, I thought we played well."

Karlstad, hitting 21 of 46 shots for 46 per cent, had two double figure scorers in Kevin Kuznia with 16 points and Gene LaDoucer with 12. Ray Kvalvog led the Nordics with 11 points.

"We expect to have a pretty good shooting team, and I think we're going to rebound better than we have the last couple of years," said Ueland. However, neither one of those proved true in the opener.

"I think we'll be respectable this year," mentioned Ueland who looks for the Nordics to place in the middle of a tough North Border Conference. "The bottom half of the conference won't be as good as normal, but the top half will be strong."

The Nordics' home opener will be Friday against Argyle.

Middle River Tops Greenbush

Middle River used an effective press and a better than 50 per cent shooting night from the field to drill a highly regarded Greenbush club 70-51 Tuesday in a high school basketball game played at Middle River.

"We pressed them and they couldn't handle it," explained Middle River coach Eldon Sparby. "And we got a lot of easy baskets off it (press)."

Three scorers hit double figures for the Skippers who led 29-22 at halftime as Scott McKeever collected 18 points, Troy Peterson 17 and DelRay Ness 13. Basil Emery scored a game-high 25 points for the Tigers.

"We're looking for a pretty good year," said Sparby who stopped short of predicting a North Border Conference title for the Skippers who will have to contend with the likes of much taller Lake of the Woods and Roseau teams. "We have a chance to make a run for second place. We have a good conference; teams like Lake of the Woods, Roseau and Newfolden will be tough to beat."

Middle River will be at Warroad Friday.

Sno Pro Sleds Race On Ice Covered Tracks

How much snow does it take to race snowmobiles? Actually, it doesn't take any snow at all. All snow on the ground does is that it makes people think you can race. What it does take to hold a snowmobile race is cold weather. Temperatures cold enough to freeze several hundred thousand gallons of water in place on the race track and in the staging area. For several years now, the super modified snowmobiles used in racing have been running on an all ice track. The first big race of the season is scheduled for Saturday and Sunday at the Grand Forks fairgrounds. A track building crew from Alexandria has been on hand since Thanksgiving evening waiting for the temperature to drop enough to start building ice. They have been getting some ice down, but not as much as they would like. Warm weather lately was enjoyed by everyone except race track builders and snowmobile race fans. When they get through there will be up to 12 inches of ice on the inside of the turns and about two inches to three inches high on the bank.

The race is called the Super Seer Sno Pro opener and is one of 13 events on the international Sno Pro schedule and the only one in this area. Sno Pro is comparable to USAC in auto racing. Factory drivers and top professionals from Canada, the USA and Sweden will be bringing their race sleds to battle it out for the Super Seer Cup, a 15 lap feature event scheduled for Sunday afternoon.

All in all, there are two days of wild action on the tight one quarter mile banked oval, with super modified Sno Pro racing Saturday and formula Sno Pro Sunday. Master's circuit events get under way at 9 a.m. Saturday morning with Sunday's all-Sno Pro program starting at 10 a.m.

Team Arctic Will Open 1979-80 Sno Pro Season At Grand Forks

Team Arctic drivers Bob Elsner and Jim Dimmerman will be at the starting line this weekend as the 1979-80 Sno Pro professional snowmobile racing season gets underway with Saturday-Sunday weekend races at the Grand Forks, N.D. fairgrounds.

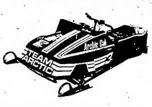
Grand Forks marks the start of the 13 events on this year's Sno Pro schedule that includes six races in the United States, four in Canada and three more in Scandinavian countries.

With machines that reach 90 mph in 600 feet from a standing start and cover the one-half mile solid ice oval racing surface in under 19 seconds, Sno Pro drivers will be competing for total prize money of some $135,000 this winter, with the biggest purse of $35,000 waiting at the Heteen Cup competition in Alexandria Dec. 15-16. Most prestigious race is the Wold Championship in Eagle River, Wis. where 25,000 represent the largest crowd at Sno Pro races.

Team Arctic, the Elsner-Dimmerman duo, remains intact from a year ago when Elsner won 11 races and Dimmerman claimed five wins.

The competition record of the team speaks for itself, says Arctic officials: in four years of high-power Sno Pro oval track competition, the men of Team Arctic have posted nine top five overall season records. And, of these nine top finishes, two have been the "big one-Driver of the Year". No racing team in the history of Sno Pro has ever equalled this kind of racing success.

In 1976, Larry Coltom gave Arctic Cat the Sno Pro driver of the year honors with a dazzling season of victories that left all but teammates Bob Elsner and Davy Thompson in the snowdust. Placing the entire team in the top five positions isn't easy, but the tradition had begun nevertheless. In 1977, both Team Arctic drivers again posted impressive top five overall records to keep the string going.



ALL-NEW ENGINES this year in 340cc and 440cc sizes have Team Arctic personnel looking forward to the 1979-80 Sno Pro professional snowmobile racing season which opens with a Saturday-Sunday weekend slate in Grand Forks, N.D. Designed to be adjustable to track and driver demands, this Arctic Cat Sno Pro racing machine will be driven by Bob Elsner and Jim Dimmerman during the winter racing season that offers some $135,000 in total prize money.

Team Arctic did it again for the third straight season in 1978. This time it was Elsner who won race after race, weekend after weekend, to grab the coveted driver of the year title. In his rookie year with Team Arctic, Jim Dimmerman also posted a top five overall finish to again place the entire team in the rarified atmosphere of the winner's circle.

This past season, despite some problems that limited team points for part of the season, the team again placed in top five positions as Elsner notched a strong third overall and Dimmerman closed up to the fourth overall position.

The team points to their unparalleled loyalty and continuity as big reasons why this team remains the one to beat season after season. "Look around this race shop and count the years," says team manager Dennis Zulawski proudly. "You'll see the team has experience and depth few teams in any kind of racing ever develop." When it gets to be time to go racing, it's tight-knit group that is about as close a bunch of racing men as you can get.

Personnel changes in this organization are rare and the 1980 season is no exception. Technicians Wayne Schantzen, Glen Follett and Roger Gage, Team Arctic's ace technicians, are on the roster again, along with Rich Porter, Sr., Team Arctic's resident motor wizard. Former drivers Davy Thompson and Larry Coltom will again add their special brand of tuning, preparation and strategy to the team effort and Duane Gram and Durmont Wahl are again slated to apply their twenty-plus years of wrench twirling experience to the season's races.

Put this seasoned crew together with top drivers like Elsner and Dimmerman and it's a potent racing team ready to cast a long black-and-green shadow across professional oval track snowmobile racing again in 1979-80.

Nearly three years of steady, uncompromising development work has gone into the designs for the new Arctic Cat oval track racer built for the 1979-80 racing season. Since 1977, when the first in a line of radical Cats with tunnel-tested shapes, coil spring IFS and high-performance Spirit liquid-cooled engines came out swinging in oval track racing, the basic design has been tested, altered and re-tested.

A winner in its debut season, Elsner drove the first versions to many victories on his way to the Sno Pro driver of the year title. The successful machine never ceased to develop at Arctic's racing wing, Arctic performance services. Built around a rigid and stable chassis, the suspension and handling components have undergone many subtle changes to shock damping, spring rates and steering geometry to make this latest racing Cat a smooth predictable oval machine.

All-new engines this year in 340cc and 440cc sizes with exclusive torque-enhancing case reed valves and specially ported cylinders for the new Sprint classes will put Sno Pro power in the new racing Cats. Based on the new 6000 series Spirit liquid-cooled engine design, the new racing powerplants combine state-of-the-art performance with the affordability of large quantity production components.

Also new for 1980 is a clutch combination. Consisting of a new Comet wide pitch diameter drive clutch and a recently developed helical driven unit, the new transmission combines top performance with consistant and predictable tuning.

Three years of development work have allowed the race tuners and technicians at Arctic Cat to build a high-quality, competitive oval tracker. Designed to be adjustable to track and driver demands on ride, handling and power transmission, the new Arctic Cat Spring Class machines should once again be among the top sleds in the fierce world of snowmobile oval track racing.

Lofton will head a staff of specially trained men to man the Arctic Cat driver support program during the 1979-80 season.

The program includes a 40-foot driver support van — a complete machine shop on wheels with a full inventory of snowmobile parts that will be appearing at all Sno Pro races throughout the snowbelt this season.

"We'll be there to help people — racers of Arctic Cat snowmobiles — in any way we can," says Lofton about his role in snowmobile racing. "Arctic feels a strong obligation as a company to the people who buy our racing snowmobiles, and we want to give the independent racers any help we can in their efforts on the racetrack."

"There's a real sense of satisfaction in helping at the track," mentioned Lofton. "The drivers that are entered and come by to see us most often are looking for a little extra help in the areas of engines, clutching, studding, gearing and we help them in whatever way we can. After all, that's why we're involved in racing ... to help our customers and to design better snowmobiles. We know Team Arctic can win, and we want to take that knowledge and experience and pass it on to our customers."

Bob Elsner

The date was January 21, 1979. The World Championship at Eagle River, Wis. was about to begin. Ten of the best drivers the bullet-fast sport of snowmobile oval track racing had ever produced were on the starting line. In seconds, the green flag would fall and what has been called the toughest fifteen laps in racing would begin.

On the pole was Team Arctic's Bob Elsner. If he was tense, you couldn't tell by looking. While other drivers fidgeted nervously, he waited motionless. Eyes steady on the starter's flag, he looked every bit the seasoned pro he is.

Elsner had been on this starting line before, qualifying virtually every year since the advent of Sno Pro in 1973 and a couple times before that, too. But, this time, he had the pole position and the sleds of Team Arctic had dominated the pro action all weekend. Bob knew he was looking at his best shot at the famous championship ever. As the reigning Sno Pro driver of the year for his record-setting string of victories in 1978, he was clearly the man-to-beat in the World Championship 1979.

Finally the flag fell. Elsner hammered off the line into the first turn to take the back straight just inches off the lead. Five laps of ski-to-ski action later, there were still three drivers racing right together. This was one of the most closely-fought championship events ever and the 25,000 Eagle River fans knew only a driver of consummate skill would go home with the victory this time.

A few laps later, the message was delivered with a wave of the checkered flag: nobody beats Team Arctic's veteran oval track pro to the gold this time.

"I knew the holeshot would count," Elsner said afterward, "but I didn't expect the lead to stay so close for so long: For me, it was a race of handling and keeping a level head. And I guess I didn't make any mistakes out there, so I won it." Sporting his widest grin ever, Elsner accepted the trophy, the prizes, the congratulations and the title, World Champion.

Elsner's 1979 season was one of his best in 12 years of racing. Carding wins at Grand Forks, Kinross, Owatonna and Portland as well as Eagle River, he finished his fourth season with Team Arctic as third overall in Sno Pro competition as Team Arctic posted another in a series of top five overall racing season.

Now 36, Elsner is Sno Pro's senior competitor and one of the acknowledged greats of oval track racing. But this man is not one to rest on laurels. "1980 is another year," Bobby says with another grin, "and Jim (Dimmerman), the Team and I will be out there 'jammin'."

Jim Dimmerman

When Team Arctic's Jim Dimmerman gets rolling on the icy snowmobile oval tracks, it seems there is just no stopping him. Witness, for example, the spectacular performance Jim put in at the classic Eagle River World Championship in January, 1979. Jim came out and showed the south side of his northbound Cats to the competition in the 250, 340 and 440cc professional classes to post a record-setting sweep of the action. Jim has scored sweeps before, but this time it was against the biggest single field to race on the Sno Pro circuit last season.

Dimmerman says he "burnt the midnight oil" like never before in the days and nights prior to his Eagle River triumph in a singleminded effort to be ready to fly on that famous midseason Wisconsin weekend. "I've raced at Eagle River just about every year since I was 17," he explains, "and I know that track is like no other on the Sno Pro circuit. With the special conditions there, your equipment has to be set up differently and everything has to be just right."

The talented 25-year-old obviously knew what it would take to win because he and his perfectly set-up Cats delivered a shut-out that the fans who were there will never forget.

Dimmerman backed up this dazzling sweep at Eagle River with wins or high finishes at Grand Forks, Kinross, Portland and Peterborough on the Sno Pro circuit to finish the season in fourth overall in 1978-79 professional racing standings, his second top five overall finish since joining Team Arctic in 1977.

In his years as a top amateur oval track racer, Dimmerman distinguished himself as one of the very few in racing who never seems to stop improving in skill and competitiveness. In his last season as an independent, he raced his Cat stockers to victories weekend after weekend, just narrowly missing the overall win at the Kawartha Cup races with four wins and several runner-ups in the stock classes.

Now looking forward to his third season as a member of oval track snowmobile racing's most successful team, Dimmerman has the experience and finely-honed abilities necessary to win against the best in the world of professional snowmobile racing. He pulled off a sweep in his first season as a pro and he did it again last year too, against incredible odds.

A FORMER DRIVER, Charlie Lofton will head a staff of specially trained men to man the Arctic Cat driver support program during the 1979-80 snowmobile racing season. The program includes a 40-foot van — a complete machine shop on wheels with a full inventory of snowmobile parts that will be appearing at all Sno Pro races through the snowbelt this season. The season gets underway Saturday and Sunday with weekend races at the Grand Forks, N.D. fairgrounds.

Wildlife Group Offers Series Of Readers

National Wildlife federation has announced the launching of a new publication for preschoolers ages three to five. "Your Big Backyard" is a 12-issue full-color series of readers filled with photographs, puzzles, games and nature stories.

"We wanted to provide parents with a program that will help their pre-school aged children learn to read, and more important, to enjoy reading," explained James D. Davis, NWF's vice president for membership and promotion. "We know from our experience with Ranger Rick's Nature Magazine, designed for children five to 12, that youngsters respond enthusiastically to pictures and stories about animals, natural history and our environment."

The premier 20-page issue of "Your Big Backyard," to be mailed in January, 1980, features picture stories about the cottontail rabbit, the caterpillar and three common backyard birds — the warbler, the chickadee and the cardinal. There are animals to count and color.

To enroll a child for this 12-part series of magazine-sized publications send $7.50, your name and address, and the name, age, and address of the child to receive "Your Big Backyard" to National Wildlife Federation, 1412 16th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036.

SPORTSCASTER JIM ADELSON will be Boyd Christenson's guest on the December edition of Boyd Christenson Interviews Thurs., Dec. 6, at 8:30 p.m. on Prairie Public Television. For the past two decases sports fans across North Dakota and Northwestern Minnesota have cussed and discussed Adelson, whose point of view and style have endeared him to many and angered others. Adelson will talk about his career, family and controversial style in a freewheeling half hour with Christenson, a former sportscaster himself who now produces his own program that is shown the first Thursday of each month on Prairie Public Television's three stations — KFME in Fargo, KGFE in Grand Forks and KBME in Bismarck.

Many large, migratory birds, such as geese, who mate for life, do so out of necessity, according to the National Wildlife Federation. After migrating thousands of miles to their nesting grounds they don't have time to court a new mate each year.

Expect Demand For Ag Loans To Hold

Bankers in the Ninth federal reserve district expect the demand for agricultural loans to remain strong, but they anticipate problems meeting with that demand, problems caused by the recently settled grain shippers' strike and by the legal ceilings on interest rates that exist in many states.

Bankers are surveyed quarterly in rural areas of Minnesota, Montana, North Dakota, South Dakota and northwestern Wisconsin. Together with the Upper Peninsula of Michigan, these states make up the Ninth federal reserve district. In October, 134 bankers responded.

The bankers in our October survey reported that the recent demand for agricultural loans has been very strong. A majority characterized the demand for short-term farm loans as greater than usual, and the rest rated it about usual. Lending is up substantially from last year, also a brisk lending year.

The main reason for this strong credit demand appears to be the prolonged grain shippers' strike in the port of Duluth. Since no grain could be shipped through Duluth for three months, farmers and owners of rural elevators needed short-term loans to finance the grain inventories they were forced to hold. And because they could not sell their grain, many of these people were short of cash. This forced them either to postpone repaying their current debt or to take out additional debt.

The data on repayment and refinancing from the survey support this picture of farm finances. The percentage of bankers describing repayment as slow shot up to 46 per cent in October — from only 20 per cent in the July survey. Refinancing demands rose almost as rapidly; 37 per cent of the sample termed demand high, compared to only 19 per cent in July.

The state-by-state data is also consistent with the view that the Duluth strike is the principal cause of the current strong demand for credit. This demand has been concentrated in the states where farmers depend most heavily on the Duluth port, i.e., Minnesota and the Dakotas. A full 63 per cent of the bankers from these states reported high loan demand. In contrast, only 15 per cent of the Montana bankers in the sample reported high loan demand.

In addition to the grain strike, a change in the usury law pushed loan demand higher in South Dakota. Effective July 1, the state's 10 per cent usury ceiling was raised to 12 per cent. Because the change in the law made it profitibale for South Dakota banks to lend, more funds became available and many borrowers whom the banks could not accommodate when the ceiling was 10 per cent came back to commercial banks with their loan requests. So even though South Dakota may not have felt the effects of the strike as acutely as did Minnesota and North Dakota, its bankers reported the highest demand in our survey. A whopping 77 per cent said ag loan demand was unusually high.

Even though the Duluth strike ended just as the October survey was taken, the bankers are still expecting the high loan demand to continue during the next three months. The number of bankers who expect future demand for agricultural credit to be high is only slightly lower than the number reporting high current demand.

They probably expect high demand to continue because they believe credit pressures will not ease quickly after the Duluth strike. It is unlikely that all of the grain held up during the strike can be moved before the end of the Duluth shipping season. When the port closes, farmers have the uncomfortable choice of either holding their grain until the port opens in the spring or relying on rail or truck transport to move their crops. Holding the grain is, of course, expensive, and transporting it by rail or truck may be impossible because, in recent years, there has been a shortage of onland transport facilities during the winter.

Though the demand for ag loans is likely to be favorable, many bankers in the sample anticipate problems in supplying the funds to meet that demand. The bankers in the states affected by the strike and its aftermath expect the most problems. In Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota, 42 per cent of the agricultural lenders expect problems, while only nine per cent of the Montana lenders do.

The bankers in Minnesota and the Dakotas would probably not be expecting so many problems if those states did not have such tight interest rates, banks do not find it profitable to borrow money elsewhere in order to lend to customers inside their state. In such circumstances, funds for agricultural lending may be very scarce. Since interest rates have been rising lately and 98 per cent of our October sample expect this trend to continue, the fixed interest rate ceilings for certain classes of loans in Minnesota, North Dakota, and South Dakota should contribute to a funds shortage.

The Well-Rounded Life

There are times we want to paint, and times we want to study. Who says a fellow can't wear his work clothes while enriching his mind? And relax with his shoes off, too!

Indeed all of us need to be cultivating the well-rounded life. We need to make provision in our busy weeks for work and play and learning and worship.

Much of the pressure under which we live may not be so much the result of life's unreasonable demands upon us as the result of our inadequate preparation for meeting life's demands.

Time spent with God . . . learning of His purposes, His power and His love . . . is one of the essentials for the well-rounded life. And while custom has long prompted folks to express reverence by donning their best clothes, in the church today the important thing is not what you wear — but that you're there.

Liberal Education Explores Values, Teaches Thinking

by William Huntzicker
'U' M News Service

Despite the high cost of living, it's still popular.

Yet many people believe that the real value of living can be lost when the concern with making a living comes at the expense of other important things in life.

In the academic world, the relationship between a liberal education and vocational training has become a subject of discussion, particularly in liberal arts colleges where enrollments are declining and budget difficulties are projected.

"Nobody denies that a liberal education is important," says University of Minnesota graduate student Carol Boyer. "But some people tend to think about it as a luxury rather than a necessity. The more complicated society gets, the greater the potential impact of a liberal education."

Her view is echoed by history professor Clarke A. Chambers, chairman of a committee that studied bachelor of arts degree requirements at the University of Minnesota to see if they provide a liberal education.

"In the last 20 years, there's been such an acceleration of history that we just can't deal with it as individuals and as a society without being prepared to move quickly beyond what we know now. That's why the teaching of different modes of inquiry is so important," Chambers said.

While in school, students should be prepared to deal with problems they may face in the future, problems they cannot predict while they are students, Chambers said. Solutions to such unforeseen problems will be based on information not yet available, he said, and a liberal education can teach a student how to make informed decisions.

Chambers committee report is Minnesota's response to a situation that is being studied at institutions of higher learning throughout the country, including Harvard, Berkeley, Michigan, Indiana and Carleton college in Minnesota.

"Fiscal retrenchment, inflation, declines in enrollment, a surge of vocationalism along undergraduates, facilities heavily (and increasingly) tenured, retardation of professional mobility — these constitute a source of trouble for liberal arts colleges throughout the nation as well as here in Minnesota," the report states.

The report, which is being discussed at faculty and student hearings at Minnesota, recommends more emphasis on communication, individualized projects to help students integrate the methods they learn in different courses, and some changes in the course distribution requirements for a bachelor of arts degree.

Fred Likermann, dean of the college of Liberal Arts (CLA), said the main purpose of the discussion is to create a consciousness among faculty and students about the definition of a liberal education.

"It's not to teach a trade. And it's not to fill up our minds with a bunch of facts. It's basically to be liberally educated, to be able to learn to make use of learning," he said.

Lukermann feels there need be no tension between liberal and vocational education. CLA, which enrolls about 16,000 students, is the largest college in Minnesota. "There's no segment of this college or this university that shouldn't be teaching what it's teaching in a liberal way," Lukermann said.

A liberal education, Lukermann said, involves teaching people how to learn, how to develop an open mind. "It isn't what you learn in a factual sense that constitutes a liberal education, but the way in which you inquire, the way in which you ask questions, and, then, the way you organize what you've found out so that you can act.

"In other words, you learn by doing. The meaning of anything is in the consequences of acting on it and not from some dictionary definition. Liberal education is a mode of inquiry, a way of doing things as much as learning how to think," he said.

"The liberal arts teach students to analyze," said Anthony N. Zahareas, director of CLA's office of research development. "To analyze means to observe, to describe, to explain, to interpret, to evaluate and even to classify."

Zahareas, who is also a professor of spanish, said that the learning of a language, for example, can help students acquire discipline for factual learning while, at the same time, preparing them to look at the world from the perspective of another culture.

While the role of the liberal arts is not to train students for specific jobs, Zahareas said, they do teach students to deal with information and problems they will encounter throughout their professional and personal lives. "There is no more concrete, practical education," he said.

Lukermann said that graduates in a tight job market — Ph.D.'s in English, for example — get jobs on the basis of skills they obtain in acquiring a liberal education.

According to Boyer, a liberal education is successful if a student is intellectually stimulated "so that the person will not want to stop learning, in formal or informal ways."

Mulford Q. Sibley, professor of political science and American studies, feels that such an education contributes to a person's freedom.

"In principle, there is no need to ration intellectual ideas because they're infinite," he said. "My possession of an idea doesn't prevent you from possessing it. My appreciation of a work of art doesn't inhibit you from appreciating it. In the material realm, however, if I fence off a piece of land then I can prevent you from using it."

No area of study has all the answers, and exposure to a broad range of ideas is important to a liberal education, Sibley said. But each area of study will provide as many questions and answers.

"As science advances, mystery multiplies. In the higher reaches of almost any area of study — quantum physics, for example — the kinds of propositions that are posed egg you on to more study. Instead of finding answers, we get more questions. New knowledge poses new questions," he said.

Lukermann agrees that science cannot provide all the answers. "The power in learning, I suppose, is in asking the right questions, not in the answers. The answers have always been wrong. I mean we've replaced Aristotle with Ptolemy, Ptolemy with Copernicus, Copernicus with Newton, Newton with Einstein, Einstein with Planck.

"Nobody ever has the right answers," he said. "Conceptually we have to structure the world in order to get out more facts. These facts are not suddenly revealed. If you don't arrange them, if you don't order them, if you don't manipulate your sense experience, then you can't make choices. Then you never discover anything new," he said.

"Einstein isn't wrong in any absolute sense any more than Newton was wrong," Lukermann said. "Each culture, each generation, each era, in a sense, has found the truth in resolving its questions."

"Every system of thought," Sibley said, "has to depend on an act of faith. That includes systems of scientific thought. I don't consider faith irrational; it's something you work with — like logic itself."

Answers of previous generations will not work for the questions of today, Lukermann said. And, Chambers said, today's answers will not work tomorrow.

CARPET CARE

Helpful Hints On Beauty And Economy

Keeping a carpet beautiful doesn't have to floor you if you follow some simple suggestions.

By treating well-constructed carpets of man-made fibers with the care they savor, you can prolong their like-new appearance and save yourself unnecessary worry and expense.

Begin by carrying out a routine maintenance program recommended by the experts at Du Pont:

1. Vacuum all areas of the rug frequently—daily to weekly, depending on foot traffic and carpet location. This reduces wear and abrasion of the carpet caused by sand and grit embedded in the fibers.

2. Remove spots, smudges and spills promptly. Spills should be first blotted or scraped clean, depending on the thickness of the material. For spills of water soluble or wettable substances, a warm water and detergent solution may then be used to remove the stain. A commercial dry cleaning fluid or spot cleaner is usually effective on oily substances. Never rub a spill into the carpet and remove detergent residue after cleaning.

Major Cleaning

As soon as your carpet begins to show soil, give it a major cleaning. In most instances, the best available method is extraction, or steam cleaning. With this method, soil is immediately removed by a vacuum system that extracts detergent solution and loosened dirt.

You can save elbow grease and avoid frequent major cleanings with "Teflon" carpet protector on your rug. "Teflon" helps maintain the original beauty of carpet by forming a protective coating that enables removal of many household spills before they are absorbed by the carpet. You may purchase carpet treated with "Teflon" from your local retailer or have a professional carpet cleaner apply the finish to carpet already installed in the home.

Making Repairs

Don't be alarmed when you see minor carpet damage. You may easily correct it:

1. Snip off snags. Extra long yarn ends that rise above the pile surface do not indicate that the carpet is coming apart. Just clip off (never pull) the protruding sprout.

2. Clip off cigarette burns. Unless the burn is severe, you can usually cut off the blackened ends of the tufts and sponge the evidence away with a soapless cleaner and water. If it is deep, a professional carpet repair service can remove the burned spot and replace it for you.

3. Trim off frayed ends or seams. These are usually jobs for the professional. If you attempt to repair the damage yourself, start where it's deepest or most severe. Using a sharp knife or large, sharp shears, cut from the wrong side, following one of the yarns or ridges. Save the scraps for future repairs.

4. Freeze chewing gum. Use dry ice to freeze gum while it's on the rug. Then crumble it with the blunt end of a pen or similar-sized object. Remove residue with dry cleaner fluid.

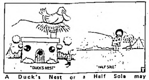
WHAT'S IN A WORD?



A Duck's Nest or a Half Sole may not mean the same to everyone.

Do you know what a Duck's Nest, a Christmas Tree or a Doodlebug is?

If you ask an oilman, he may give you an answer that could surprise you.

In today's complex world, every business has its own terminology, and the oil business is no exception. The odd meanings taken on by some common words give an interesting flavor to an oilman's speech.

Here's a sampling:

Christmas Tree. Saint Nick wouldn't recognize this variety. It's the assembly of fittings and valves that caps a completed well. It controls the flow of oil from the well to storage tanks or pipelines.

Duck's Nest. A standby tank or pit used to hold extra drilling mud or the overflow if mud should be displaced from the well by a blowout.

Doodlebug. That's another term for a dowsing rod, the Y-shaped branch that, in the hands of a skilled user, is supposed to pinpoint favorable drilling sites. Today it refers to any item of geophysical prospecting equipment.

Pig. Both oil field pigs and the four-legged variety have an affinity for dirt. An oil field pig is a cylindrical device that is forced through a pipeline, scraping the side wall clean as it goes. Pigs are used to keep a quarter of a million miles of pipeline in this country clean and at peak operating efficiency.

Hot footing. The application of heat to the lower extremities ... of a well. Hot footing involves installing a heater at the bottom of an input well to thin heavy crude oil and increase its flow to nearby producing wells.

Fire flooding. Although it sounds like a contradiction in terms, it refers to another way to increase protection of heavy oil. Oil deep underground is ignited and fed large amounts of air. This heats and thins nearby oil and provides pressure to move it to producing wells.

Half sole. When a section of pipeline becomes corroded, it can be patched with a half sole. The patch, cut from a pipe of the same diameter, is securely welded over the defective section.

Fishing. The oilman's fishing is not done in a lake or stream. Instead, he fishes in the tight confines of an oil well's steel casing. He does it to recover tools, cable or pipe that have become detached or lost downhole. His "fish hooks" are a variety of ingenious, highly specialized tools.

Lessee. Not the contraction for "let me see," as in "lessee now, where was I?" A lessee is the company or individual that, under the terms of a lease, is entitled to drill and operate an oil or gas well.

Washington Report

Sen. Dave Durenberger

Keeping pace with Inflation

Everyone knows the effect of inflation. In the last five years, the cost of living has gone up 45 per cent. That's a staggering statistic. It has meant dramatic changes in the lifestyle of almost every person.

But, that 45 per cent hike in the cost of living only tells half the story. In many ways, the other half of the story is even more cruel because it is largely hidden. During the same five-year period that has seen prices soar 45 per cent, taxes have jumped an astounding 70 per cent. The average Minnesota family faces a tax increase of nearly $1,000 by the end of 1981 because of higher payroll taxes and because inflation is driving income into higher tax brackets.

Fortunately, momentum is gaining for a long overdue solution. A bill I recently introduced in the Senate will index inflation out of the federal tax brackets. My bill, S. 1974, won't cure inflation, but it will help you keep pace with the rising cost of living.

Indexing isn't a complicated concept. Under our present tax system, almost every time you receive a pay raise you're pushed into a higher tax bracket. In fact, for every extra one per cent in salary, the average worker's taxes go up 1½ per cent.

My bill will end that system. Federal tax brackets for individuals will be adjusted annually to take into account the inflation rate during the past year. Under my bill, your cost-of-living pay increase will keep you abreast of today's prices, instead of pushing you into a higher tax bracket.

Take a look at what could happen without S. 1974. At current rates of inflation, taxpayers earning $10,000 in 1975 will be earning $50,000 in the year 2000. They will move from the 19 per cent tax bracket to the 50 per cent tax bracket. So, while their incomes adjusted for inflation, have remained constant their tax bills have jumped by more than 2½ times. My bill, by adjusting the tax brackets for inflation, will avoid that tragedy.

The benefits my bill will have for individual taxpayers is obvious. But, just as important, are the provisions in my bill for indexing capital gains, income taxes for small business and depreciation.

The first item, for example, will be a great boost to homeowners in this era of inflation. Suppose you bought a home in 1977 for $40,000. If inflation averages 12.2 per cent — which is about what it has been for the last year — you would have to sell the house for $400,000 in 1997 just to break even. You would face taxes on a capital gain of $144,000, even though that profit is just on paper. My bill will adjust the capital gain to reflect the effects of inflation.

Some members of Congress have been reluctant to support indexing because government reaps a huge windfall from inflation. During the next three years, for example, the federal government is expected to take in about $80 billion just because inflation is pushing people into higher tax brackets and increasing their tax bill.

The result has been that government can continue its unchecked spending and promote so-called tax cuts. What the public doesn't hear is that those tax cuts don't even keep up with the effects of inflation on your tax bill.

The mood, though, is shifting. A broad range of people — from Jerry Brown to Ronald Reagan — have endorsed indexing. They have joined other leaders who realize the time has come for this sensible program.

Another inflation-fighting proposal I've introduced in the Senate will benefit savers. My amendment to the windfall profits tax will allow individuals to earn interest of up to $500 per year without paying taxes.

The people who will gain the most from this measure are those who are hit the hardest by inflation — the average worker who is trying to build a nest egg by stashing the few dollars he or she can spare in a passbook-type savings account.

However, the small gains those people make are quickly eroded by the tax bill on the interest they earn. My proposal will end that tax bite, help people save for the future and encourage the savings accounts that are so vital to our economy.

Of course, we have to take some immediate and hard steps to cure inflation. But, in the short-term, the indexing and incentives for savers will help the average Minnesotan keep pace with the ravages of inflation.

Beauty Tips From America's Newest High School Cover Girl

Fifteen year old Anne Forrest of Easley, South Carolina, like many teens, had long dreamed of becoming a model. And for this sunny, brown-haired beauty, the dream came true—Anne recently won the title of National High School Cover Girl! Going into its 19th year, the contest is sponsored annually by Co-Ed Magazine and the Noxell Corporation, makers of Cover Girl Make-up. Anne vied with nine other finalists from all parts of the country to be chosen as the teenager who best typifies the American ideal of charm, personality, perfect grooming and fresh good looks. Anne's laughing blue eyes, abundance of golden-brown hair and glowing complexion—plus her friendly, unaffected manner—helped her win the coveted title.

One of seven children, Anne's a champion of the active life (she's a cheerleader, pep club member and part-time exercise instructor). Although all the healthy activity makes her glow naturally, she realizes that make-up know-how lets her have a variety of fresh, natural looks.

When asked about her make-up tips, Anne was happy to pass some along. Since her fair complexion tends to be oily, she relies on Cover Girl's All Day Oil-Control Make-up for fresh long-lasting coverage that won't streak or turn "orange-y." This light, natural-looking make-up also tones down Anne's charming freckles without covering them up.

Anne admitted that, like many girls her age, she was a little unsure about applying eye make-up. But she found that with Cover Girl Moisturized Eyeshadows it couldn't be easier because the sponge-tipped applicator automatically strokes on just the right amount of color. Anne's favorite shade is Mulberry, a smoky mauve touched with grape.

Since winning the National High School Cover Girl title, Anne has appeared on the cover of Co-Ed magazine and in a full-page Cover Girl ad. In addition to these modelling assignments, she received a $2500 Noxell Educational Scholarship. Quite a lot of excite*ment for a fifteen year* old from Easley!

If you're between the ages of 12 and 17 and are interested in entering next year's contest, please write for an entry blank, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed business size envelope to: High School Cover Girl Contest, c/o Co-Ed Magazine, 50 West 44th Street, New York, N.Y. 10036.

Will Leaders Admit The Cause?

Following editorial is from the Wadena Pioneer-Journal:

If you think you're getting straight talk about inflation, you're wrong. That is because some politicians and many of those in the metropolitan media — two principal sources of information about inflation — cannot seem to get it straight themselves.

First, they blamed wage increases and price hikes for inflation. Then, when "voluntary guidelines" were established, the blame shifted to OPEC oil prices. Both explanations were wrong.

Government policy is responsible for inflation. Paying for deficit spending by "creating money" out of thin air debases the currency and makes every dollar worth less. That's inflation. Not wages. Not price increases. Not OPEC oil.

If oil prices caused inflation, Germany and Japan would have double digit inflation, too. West Germany imports about 97 per cent of its oil. Its inflation rate is 6.6 per cent. Japan imports 99 per cent of its oil. Its inflation if 6.9 per cent. But the U.S. imports slightly less than half of its oil and has controlled the price of domestic oil since 1971. Our inflation rate is 13 per cent.

It is important to understand the cause of inflation in order to cure it. But many of our elected representatives seem unable to differentiate between inflation and the result of inflation — the increased cost of living.

Unless government fiscal policy is reformed, the budget brought into balance and deficits eliminated, inflation will continue to rage out of control.

What can you do about it? Well, we think it's time working Americans speak out to Congress and say, "How dare you pay out millions of dollars that you have never put on my tax bill at all? How dare you appropriate money for these grants and hundreds of other giveaways without raising my taxes to cover them? How dare you finance them by increasing our shocking deficit? How dare you sit in Congress year after year spending more money than you raise from taxing us?

"Congressmen, you are ducking the consequences of your financial irresponsibility. You think you're postponing the days of reckoning to the next generation, but instead you are laying it on every one of us in the form of inflation.

"Suppose, Congress, you stopped being cowardly and decided to tax the country to cover what you are spending. All the poor working stiffs would rise up — as they did twice in California with Propositions 4 and 13 — and say, 'We don't want to pay for your list of goodies, your ideas of what our country needs, your selfish trade-offs and log-rolling.' And then, Congressmen, all the big spenders among you would lose your seats in the next election. That's what makes you too cowardly to raise taxes — or, much to our preference, cut appropriations."

Liberals will quickly cream over this suggestion. "Surely in a country as rich as ours we can afford to subsidize this or that (or pay for other giveaways)," is what they'll tell you. But we'd answer, "Surely in a country as rich as ours we can manage to balance our budget — not pay out more money than we take in."

The solution — we must retire such liberal congressmen and elect representatives who will put balancing the budget ahead of subsidizing a wish-list with non-existent dollars. When that happens, our inflation problem will be solved.

Tax Revolt Alive and Well

Following editorial is from the St. Paul Pioneer Press:

The vote of California's Proposition 4 should dispel any politician's hopes that the taxpayers revolt has run out of steam.

Nicknamed "The Spirit of 13," California's latest tax-limiting proposition won by a 4-1 margin. The measure was so popular that voters in every county gave it resounding approval, with the lowest margin being 54.4 per cent in San Francisco and the biggest being 86.5 per cent in Glenn County.

Proposition 4 ties future property tax increases to a formula based on increases in population and the consumer price index.

The voters' overwhelming response prompted Proposition 4's author, Paul Gann, to announce plans for a nationwide campaign to reduce federal spending. "Beginning next January," he said, "we will launch a nationwide grass roots movement of taxpayers from every state in the nation. We will focus on a single goal — to bring federal spending under control in the quickest, most effective way possible by removing from our congressmen the power to spend this nation into economic ruin."

Gann was co-author of the famous Proposition 13, which led the anti-taxing groundswell in 1978. While Gann was celebrating the Prop 4 triumph, the other author of Prop 13, Howard Jarvis, was in Washington delivering the messsage to Congress. Jarvis had a pile of mailbags — 100 in all — filled with what he said were 200,000 petitions demanding substantial reductions in federal taxes and spending.

Nobody in Washington except the press paid any attention to Jarvis, who is advocating reducing federal income taxes by 25 per cent, federal spending by 20 per cent and capital gains taxes by 15 per cent over a period of four years.

Congress has ignored both Jarvis and Gann, hoping that Americans will be districted by other problems and that the tax revolt will fade away. But, said Gann, "There's a west wind blowing out of California and best we can tell, it's heading for Washington, D.C." As that wind sweeps across the country on its way to Washington, it might pick up enough strength to blow some of the big spenders right out of town.

Ridiculous Ruling

Following editorial is from the Duluth News-Tribune:

The Minnesota Supreme Court ruled Friday that farm equipment manufacturers must be held liable for accidents caused by that equipment, even when the user doesn't follow directions in the equipment manual.

Robert Provost, president of the Minnesota Insurance-Information Center, called the decision "downright stupid." His assessment seems accurate.

In a 6 to 2 decision, the court ruled that Allis-Chalmers Corp. is liable for injuries to a Beltrami County farmer who lost most of his right arm five years ago when he attempted to remove some corn from his clogged harvesting machine. The man had failed to turn off the machine as instructed by both a sign on the machine and in the owner's manual.

Provost said that while he was sympathetic to anyone injured by farm machinery, "for a court to hold the company responsible for a careless act and to push the cost of the injury to all farmers for more expensive machinery in the future is downright stupid."

It would seem to be asking manufacturers of all forms of machinery to do the impossible by making equipment accident-proof. Manufacturers must rely somewhat on the intelligence and judgement of equipment operators to assure safety. There probably isn't a machine that can be made to be accident-proof from someone careless enough or determined enough to injure himself.

The Supreme Court would have been on sounder ground if it had tried to establish a precedent for sharing liability, as is done in car accidents. A review of a farm machine accident might reveal some fault in the manufacturing process plus a major act of carelessness on the part of the user. An insurance settlement could be adjusted to consider to the fault of both parties.

To leave manufacturers totally vulnerable to insurance claims, without any regard for the carelessness of users, is to drive some manufacturers out of business while making all forms of machinery increasingly expensive. The careless user should be left vulnerable to sharing some of the blame, which might prevent him from being careless in the first place.

Borrowed Nonsense:

Despite his past successes, the farmer was known among his neighbors as a pessimist. When prices were high he lamented his taxes. When hay tonnage was high he complained of its coarseness. When one of his dairy cattle brought a record price he said he had lost his top producer.

This year had been a bumper one. Grain and corn crops had produced record yields, prices were up and, the farmer's neighbors felt, this year he could find nothing to complain about. Wrong. "Oh, yah, the crops were pretty good," he conceded. "But yields like that must take an awful lot out of the soil."

Three housewives were chatting in the supermarket. "We just redecorated our house in early French Provincial," said one. "We're having ours done in Japanese modern," offered another. "Well," said the third, with three preschoolers tugging on her skirt, "right now mine is in temporary disorder."

AMERICAN AID TO HURRICANE VICTIMS

HELP IN A HURRY — Hurricane David left a swath of death and destruction in the Dominican Republic. But it also released the constructive energies of many American voluntary agencies who have sent in millions of dollars in food, medicines, and other relief help. Among them was Catholic Relief Services. With a $1.7 million in food reserves and clothing stockpiles already warehoused in Santo Domingo when the hurricane hit, CRS was able to set up its relief efforts on a wide scale in the Dominican Republic. Catholic Relief Services' Executive Director Bishop Edwin B. Broderick (far left), Elaine Edgecomb who is the Central America Regional Director of the agency and Rev. Edwin Brooks, S.J., Assistant Director of the Catholic Medical Mission Board, oversaw the loading of a special chartered mercy flight out of New York with $88,000 in medicines, blankets, shelter material and farm tools as another urgent response to the suffering endured by the people of the Caribbean. By air, land and sea Catholic Relief Services was among the first to provide major, effective relief to the victims of Hurricane David.

ENERGY SAVING IDEAS

What Others Are Doing • How You Can Help

Check The Big Ten Checklist

You may be able to save more money by saving more energy if you use this checklist.

You are probably using more electricity, gas and oil than necessary. By using the following checklist, you can identify ways of reducing energy use—and save yourself money.

1. Weather stripping/caulking—look for air cracks around doors, windows, and other openings. Seal them by caulking or weather stripping.

2. Thermostat—set at 65 degrees in winter and at least 5 degrees lower when sleeping or away. (Higher heating temperatures are recommended for homes with sick, elderly, or infants). Set at 78 degrees in summer.

3. Water heaters—try a lower thermostat setting and an insulation wrap. Install water flow restrictors in showers and faucets.

4. Heating/cooling system—clean or replace filters as needed. Close vents in unused rooms. Insulate ducts and pipes in unheated spaces. Consider devices that can increase the efficiency of your existing system.

5. Sunlight—keep direct sunlight out in summer; let it in during winter.

6. Appliances/lighting—fully load dryers and clothes and dishwashers. Turn off unnecessary lights.

7. Attic insulation—check to see if your attic has the recommended level of insulation, including the attic door.

8. Floors and foundation walls—check for adequate insulation under floors, around basement, crawl space, and foundation walls.

9. Windows and doors—consider storm windows, doors or double-panel glass to keep in heat and air conditioning.

10. Exterior walls—consider adding insulation, particularly when remodeling or residing your house.

These suggestions come from the Committee for Home Energy Conservation (CHEC), a newly formed group of leaders from industry, government, labor, consumer and civic organizations, formed under the auspices of the National Institute of Building Sciences. CHEC has included these suggestions in the Home Energy Conservation "BIG TEN" CHECKLIST a simple guide that CHEC is making available to all consumers.

The checklist recommends that homeowners seek additional advice on ways to correct energy waste in the home. Some of the measures suggested involve little or no cost to you. Moreover, you may qualify for federal income tax credits on many items that save energy in the home.

To get your copy of the checklist, write: CHEC, 1015 15th Street, NW, Suite 700, Washington, D.C. 20005.

THE VOICE of BUSINESS

by Richard L. Lesher, President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

What a difference a year can make! In 1978, while still President Carter's Treasury Secretary and chief economic spokesman, Michael Blumenthal offered this lucid explanation for the nation's number one problem. "Inflation," he said, "is caused by a number of factors that act together and interact in strange and mysterious ways."

When Mr. Blumenthal made that statement, he was still a member in good standing of the Administration's team--that group of inflation-fighters who use words like "restraint" to describe policies that have given us a near tripling in the rate of inflation in less than three years. Now, however, Mr. Blumenthal has bid farewell to his old friends. Once again he is a free man . . . and is he ever speaking out!

In a devastating critique of his own experiences, Mr. Blumenthal recently told the Washington Post why the administration's anti-inflation efforts have failed. Citing what he called the "basic schizophrenia within the administration," Mr. Blumenthal said the president has never developed "a clear, simple, single economic philosophy."

He notes, for example, that the president and his advisers are committed to fighting inflation, "if for no other reason than that they know (inflation) is politically damaging."

But then he singles out the administration's liberals who he said believe that ". . . fighting inflation hurts poor people and that we have to be very careful how we fight inflation in order not to hit the natural constituency of the Democratic Party."

He concludes: "So there has been an effort to fight inflation, but not too hard. It was tighten the belt, but don't cut out any important programs; cut down on government regulation, but don't offend any special interest groups. It made it difficult for the president to stand up and say: 'My economic philosophy is that inflation is the No. 1 problem, and that's what I'm going to stick to.'"

We can confirm from personal experience the truth of Mr. Blumenthal's complaint. At a White House meeting earlier this year, the administration's inflation czar, Alfred Kalin, criticized the Chamber and told us he just could not understand our position. We told him to listen one minute and let us explain it to him. First, we warned that inflation is far more severe than his administration realized; second, we said his belief in wage and price guidelines is not just wrong, but counterproductive, because what is really needed to fight inflation is less government spending and regulation; third, we suggested that a fixation on specific, single numbers for guidelines for all industries virtually guaranteed failure, and fourth, we urged his administration to stop its demagoguery and to start developing substantive policies that would treat the real causes of inflation. The White House has been unhappy with us ever since.

Others have agreed with the chamber. Recently, a high-level official of the department of commerce said the chamber has been right all along, and that only a substantive anti-inflation effort would win the public's confidence. The Wall Street Journal has run several brilliant editorials stressing the need to combine spending and regulatory restraints with significant tax rate reductions. In other words, we must also fight inflation on the supply side of the economy by providing individuals and businesses greater incentives to work, save and invest. This, in turn, would finally generate genuine opportunities for the poor.

One look at our competitive record against our major trading partners illustrates the logic of the Journal's plea. During the past few years we have experienced the lowest rate of savings, the lowest rate of productivity increase, the second lowest rate of investment and a declining rate of growth. How's that for progress?

Unfortunately, the administration does not care much for incentives. The government claims allowing people to keep more of what they earn is inflationary. So whenever we suggest incentives, they're apt to cry out GREED; we request a tax reduction (even a morsel would help), but they demand huge new tax increases; we beg for some—any—cut in federal spending, and they bust the budget by increasing spending approximately 17 per cent during the last half of 1979, while looking for still better ways to control our wages and prices.

Consistency has not been the hallmark of this administration—or the 96th Congress for that matter. It's time to recognize we can't have it both ways, and that inflation must be brought under control, for the benefit of all Americans.

"CAROUSEL" COMES TO CHANHASSEN

Julie and Billy fell in love. She was a shy, sweet mill hand in a little New England town, and he was a barker with a carnival, a good looking rascal with a fiery temper. They married and Billy tried to settle down. But he couldn't find a job and he missed the excitement of the carnival.

That's "Carousel," the Rodgers and Hammerstein musical comedy just opened at the Chanhassen Dinner Theatre. Molly Sue McDonald, a 1978 graduate of the University of Iowa who made her Chanhassen debut in "The Robber Bridegroom," plays Julie. Richard K. Allison, a popular Chanhassen performer since his recent 10-month role as King Arthur in "Camelot," portrays Billy.

Chanhassen's artistic head, Gary Gisselman, is directing one of his largest casts in "Carousel." Tom Butsch designed the colorful sets ranging from a carnival scene to a fishermen's wharf.

"Carousel" is performed eight times weekly, Tuesdays through Sundays and including Wednesday matinees. Reservations may be made by phoning (612) 934-1525 or, toll free from Minnesota communities outside of the metropolitan area, (800) 362-3515.

cancer answers

"Cancer Answers" is a weekly column sponsored by the Red River Valley Medical society, the Red River Valley unit of the American Cancer society and the Thief River Falls Times. Questions may be mailed to the editor, Thief River Falls Times. All questions will be answered, and those of a general interest will be published in "Cancer Answers."

Dear Cancer Answers.

Would problems with swallowing be a sign of throat cancer? What would other signs be? What tests are done to diagnose throat cancer? I'm afraid I might have this.

Jean

Dear Jean:

Difficulty in swallowing can be due to a number of conditions—including cancer of the esophagus (the muscular tube that carries food from the throat to the stomach). One symptom of cancer of the esophagus can be a feeling that food is sticking along the way to the stomach. Most often, this feeling of sticking occurs as the food is passing behind the breast bone. Meat is usually the first food to cause a sticking sensation. The feeling may occur whether or not food is actually stuck and blocking the esophagus.

Pain may also be a symptom. It may be no more than a momentary burning as food is swallowed, or it may last longer. Usually the pain seems to be located behind the breast bone.

To determine whether your symptoms are caused by esophageal cancer or some other condition, you need to be examined by your doctor. He may suggest an X-ray examination which could require you to swallow a liquid containing barium sulfate, a substance that makes parts of your body more visible in X-ray pictures.

If there are any abnormal areas, the doctor can use a slender instrument called an esophagoscope to examine them more closely and, possibly, remove a small sample of tissue for examination with a microscope.

Cancer of the esophagus is quite rare. But if your symptom has persisted for more than two weeks, you should see your doctor.

Dear Cancer Answers:

I have cancer and have received different opinions on treatment from two doctors. One of the suggested treatments involves experimental drugs. Is this safe? What should I do? How do I know which treatment is best?

R.W.

Dear R.W.:

The ideal solution would be to have the two doctors meet with you, but this frequently isn't possible. The next best thing is to have written opinions from each doctor in language you can understand. If you are still confused by this, you certainly have a right to show these opinions to yet another doctor.

You must realize that medicine is not an exact science. Doctors sometimes disagree in their opinions about the best way to treat a specific medical condition. Also, there are many new treatments for cancer that are still in the experimental stage. Many of the experimental drugs are effective and save lives.

Be open and honest with your doctors. Ask them more questions so that you can make an informed decision about your cancer treatment.

Dear Cancer Answers:

Are there several kinds of skin cancer? If so, what is the difference? What do they look like? Are some kinds more easily cured than others?

Cheryl

Dear Cheryl:

Skin cancer is divided into two main types: carcinoma and malignant melanoma. Carcinoma is by far the most common.

Carcinoma is further divided into two types: basal cell carcinoma and squamous cell carcinoma — so named for the types of skin cell in which the carcinoma begins.

From outward appearance, it's often impossible to distinguish between basal cell and squamous cell carcinoma. In general, it may start as a small, pale, waxy lump that eventually bleeds and crusts; as a dry, scaly, rough red patch; or in many other ways. Skin cancer occurs mainly on sun-exposed areas, such as the head, neck, hands and arms. But it can appear on any area of the skin.

Both kinds of carcinomas are diagnosed in the same way and may be treated in the same way. Both types are usually cured. Of the two, basal cell occurs more frequently and grows more slowly. Basal cell cancer very rarely spreads through the blood or lymph system to distant organs.

Malignant melanoma is rare compared to carcinoma of the skin—and it is less easy to control. It usually begins as a dark brown or black spot on the skin, although some melanomas have no color. As the small, mole-like growth increases in size, it may develop into an open sore. It may also bleed easily upon slight injury.

Melanoma can begin in a mole. Because early diagnosis and treatment are particularly critical for patients with melanoma, any change in a mole-like growth should always be brought to the attention of a doctor promptly.

Dear Cancer Answers:

Is there a relationship between psoriasis and cancer? I have had psoriasis for a year and recently it has started spreading. I'm concerned about cancer.

Walt

Dear Walt:

There is no relationship between psoriasis and cancer. Psoriasis is a fairly common skin disorder. The exact cause of psoriasis is not known at this time, but heredity is a factor in about one third of patients. Some secondary factors that may affect psoriasis include local injury, climate, and emotional or psychological distress.

Prices brought about only by production costs without a corresponding rise in quality or invention of greater utility are inflationary, reports of American Institute of Industrial Engineers in a film presentation which explains productivity.

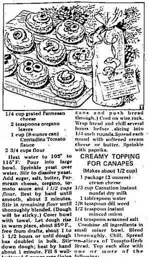
Caroline Sihlberg celebrated her 97th birthday at the home of her son and daughter-in-law, Earl and Ebba Sihlberg Friday, November 16. Her niece, Joyce Bothum of Kennedy, baked a lovely birthday cake for the occasion. Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Erickson of Karlstad, Leonard Jacobson of rural Stephen, Joyce Bothum of Kennedy, Mrs. Vance Lefrooth, Margaret and Vanette all enjoyed the birthday celebration and cake in honor of Caroline. Caroline also received greetings via telephone from her daughter Gladys in Minneapolis, from a sister in Tacoma, Wash., and a brother in Newfolden. Roger Holmstrom also stopped by in the evening with a greeting from his mother, Ruth Holmstrom.

While the Soviet Union is leading the world again this year in total wheat production with 85 million metric tons, the figure indicates nearly a 30 per cent decline from the U.S.S.R.'s 1978 output.

Canape Creations For Holiday Giving



To make this holiday season merry, here's a delicious gift you can make ahead for every friend and hostess on your list: homemade loaves of Tomato-Herb Bread. Rich with the warmth and color of Contadina tomato paste, each zesty loaf can be baked right in the can (use the skinny 6 oz. size tomato paste or juice cans) and sliced into a dozen 1/4-inch rounds just right for holiday canapés.

The recipe makes eight loaves. Wrap individually in silver foil, and freeze until needed. Then tie up each silvery loaf with a yard of red plaid ribbon (long enough to be recycled into a hair ribbon collection) and you have a beautifully useful gift.

For good measure, take along a jar of Creamy Topping for Canapes. A smooth blend of cream cheese and instant nonfat dry milk powder (to help hold down the holiday Calories), it's seasoned lightly with onion and dill. The beauty of Creamy Topping is that it forms a superb base for any number of topping variations, such as sliced fresh mushrooms, sardines, or water chestnuts. A list of suggested canapés is given with the Creamy Topping recipe.

As a final touch of thoughtfulness, copy these recipes and include them with each gift package. These gourmet gifts can go on indefinitely!

TOMATO-HERB BREAD

(Makes 8 canapé loaves)

1/2 cup water
1 package (1/4-ounce) active dry yeast
1 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon melted butter
1/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese
2 teaspoons oregano leaves
1 cup (8-ounce can) Contadina Tomato Sauce
2 3/4 cups flour

Heat water to 105° to 115°F. Pour into large bowl. Sprinkle yeast over water. Stir to dissolve yeast. Add sugar, salt, butter, Parmesan cheese, oregano, tomato sauce and 1 1/2 cups flour. Beat by hand until smooth, about 2 minutes. Stir in remaining flour until thoroughly blended. (Dough will be sticky.) Cover bowl with towel. Let dough rise in warm place, about 85°F., free from drafts, about 1 to 1 1/2 hours or until dough has doubled in bulk. Stir down dough; beat by hand about 1 minute. Fill 8 well-buttered 6-ounce cans (juice cans, tomato paste cans) half full with dough. Cover cans; let rise until dough reaches top of cans, 20 to 30 minutes. Bake in moderate oven (375°F.) 15 to 20 minutes. Remove bread from cans immediately by shaking cans. (If bread is difficult to remove from cans, remove bottom of cans and push bread through.) Cool on wire rack. Wrap bread and chill several hours before slicing into 1/4-inch rounds. Spread each round with softened cream cheese or butter. Sprinkle with paprika.

CREAMY TOPPING FOR CANAPES

1 package (3 ounces) cream cheese
1/3 cup Carnation Instant nonfat dry milk
1 tablespoon water
1/8 teaspoon dill weed
1/2 teaspoon instant minced onion
1/4 teaspoon seasoned salt

Combine all ingredients in small mixer bowl. Blend thoroughly. Chill. Spread on slices of Tomato-Herb Bread. Top each slice with one or more of the following:

Sliced fresh mushrooms, sliced radishes, sliced ripe olives, sliced green olives, sliced green onions, chopped hard-cooked egg, pimiento, chopped green chilies, sliced green peppers, sliced pepperoni or frankfurters, sardines, sliced water chestnuts, capers, chopped parsley, paprika.

Junior High Students Review Shoplifting

"Shoplifting: Is It Really Worth It?" This is the question asked, by members of the DECA club at the area vocational technical institute's sales and marketing class, of students in sixth, seventh and eighth grades at Franklin middle school.

The question was asked as part of the DECA chapter's emphasis on shoplifting prevention and was answered by students who wrote themes on the topic. A winning entry was selected from each of the three grades with the winners awarded $10 cash prizes by the sponsoring club.

Winners selected were Kirsten Freeman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hal Freeman, sixth grade; Kelli Olson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Olson, seventh grade; and Dawn Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Miller, eighth grade.

In the following essays, the three winners gave their views on shoplifting and its probable results:

by Kirsten Freeman

Is shoplifting really worth it?

At the time you and your friends might think so and they might urge you to do so, but have you ever thought of what you are getting yourself into? Just think, it will be in your head forever and your parents, will they ever forgive you? You might even go to jail; have you ever thought about that?

Think about the police record that will follow you all of your life. The police record will interfere with your life or things you want to do in your life. It may interfere with a job you might like to get or a college you are interested in attending. And when you grow up to be an adult, breaking the law will come back to haunt you and then you will regret what you did and wish you wouldn't have been so stupid to do such a thing.

Then, after awhile, you would have wondered why you had listened to your friends. Did you know that back in ancient times if you stole a loaf of bread the penalty was death or loss of a hand or arm?

I don't know what the punishment is now for shoplifting but who wants to take a chance to find out? Think of how your parents would feel getting a phone call from the police headquarters telling them to come and pick up their son or daughter. Or even knowing that their son or daughter has a bad record that alot of people know about.

Studies have shown that shoplifting leads on to bigger and worse crimes. Think of what shoplifting can do to your life; you won't be very happy any more, that's for sure.

When you shoplift people don't think much of you, like you're nobody. Not very many people trust you or want anything to do with you. Remember your life comes first. Getting something free once in awhile is okay but shoplifting can ruin your life. So if you want to live a happy life, "think before you lift!"

by Kelli Olson

To be one of the "gang" may cause a major part in shoplifting. Just because your friends do it doesn't mean you have to! Shoplifting can be a sickness, sometimes starting with five and 10-cent items leading to dollar items.

For instance, a child may steal a candy bar or a pack of gum and get away with it. So the child may think it was pretty easy. He then brags to his friends and they encourage him. He then starts stealing for them; pop, cigarettes or cosmetic items.

This kid I know of wasn't doing well in school so to influence his classmates he started giving gifts. First he gave simple things like gum or candy bars, pretty soon pencils or pens, jackknives and lipsticks. His classmates were suspicious of his

Storage And Tillage Problems For Area Sunflower Growers

Late harvest of sunflowers is now 90 per cent complete in the Thief River Falls area, according to estimates by the Pennington county extension service, and growers are faced with two important management challenges: How to handle the high moisture sunflowers in storage and what tillage practices to consider when the soil is frozen to a depth of several inches.

"Lateness of harvest and onset of winter with wet snow and now cold have presented a number of difficult problems for area sunflower growers," stated Terry Courneya, Pennington county extension director.

In a normal year, frost kills the sunflower plants and results in drying of the heads and seeds. This year no killing frosts occurred until late September, and fall rains, cloudy weather, high humidity and finally a wet snowfall combined to keep the seeds high in moisture content.

Fields became soft and many farmers turned to night harvesting when the soil was crusted with frost. Snow on the sunflower heads would be more likely to powder in the combine during cold nights and not be carried in as large quantity into the hopper with the seeds.

"Flowers that were harvested and stored in a frozen state at 20 to 30 per cent moisture — and frequently with an additional 10 to 30 per cent ice and snow — will need special attention to maintain quality until they can be adequately dried or delivered to local markets for drying," Courneya said.

"Wheather stored in piles outside or in covered storage, they must be watched closely to assure that heating does not start. Heating would be more likely expected where the outer layer of the pile began to thaw during the above freezing temperatures of the week of November 19. Once heating has started, it can continue to progress despite below freezing temperatures which might prevail outside," he emphasized.

"If this should occur, the heating can be stopped by moving the pile or the host spots while temperatures are below freezing. Aeration will also stop the heating," he said, "provided spoilage hasn't occurred to the extent that crusting has developed."

Post harvest tillage must be

SUNFLOWER GROWERS throughout the area have experienced an exceptionally difficult fall harvest season and their problems aren't over yet, according to the Pennington county extension office. Not only are farmers faced with the problems of getting the crop combined, the wet seed dried for storage and keeping the stored seed from heating,' they also have the problem of fall tillage. County extension director Terry Courneya, who took the above photos, suggests that going over harvested fields with a spring tooth harrow takes a minimum of power and will reduce the snow catch which could delay next spring's field work. Photos above show a pile of seeds in a harvested field where stalks are still standing; a harvested field which has been covered with a harrow; and the snow catch of only a few unharvested rows in comparison.

Jarvis Olson's Perfect Game Talk Of Bowlers

If the Bowlers who pound the pins at the Family Bowl in Thief River Falls were to have made a consensus list last Monday of people they would expect to roll the first sanctioned 300 game here, the name of Jarvis Olson wouldn't have been on it.

But Tuesday the 24-year-old bowler with the 142-pin average turned improbability into reality with 12 straight strikes in his first game of the night to earn a spot in local sports history.

"I tried not to think about the score and just concentrate on bowling," Olson said in a Times interview. "I was pretty shaky in the sixth frame. . . you get a free dinner for six strikes in a row. After I got that one I pretty much relaxed until it came to the last ball."

That last ball effort came before a pretty good crowd as other bowlers in the 10-team league forgot about their own efforts for awhile and gathered around lanes nine and 10 to watch. They were joined by everyone else in the building. Olson said he was conscious of their presence but didn't really pay much attention to how big the crowd was.

"The first time I got up to throw the last ball my leg was shaking so I had to sit back down," he said. "Then I got up again and the leg was still shaking so I sat down again. The third time the leg felt pretty good, but when I let the ball go I knew I was off my

FIRST PERFECT GAME in the history of Family Bowl in Thief River Falls was turned in by 24 year-old Jarvis Olson last Tuesday, bowling with the IWA Local 4-348 team in the three man Tuesday Happy Hour league. Olson strung the 12 straight strikes on alleys nine and 10 while bowling with Fred Montry and Howard Rux. Rux was substituting for team regular Jeff Hanson. Olson's 300 game bettered the previous high mark of 290 rolled by Bob Kosel eight years ago.

Winds Topple Scaffolding At New High Rise

High winds Sunday evening created added labor for the workers on the Riverview Terrace apartment building located between the school district service center and the Northwestern hospital's medical office building in Thief River Falls. Force of the winds caused the plastic sheeting enclosing the west side of the building and the scaffolding to collapse to the ground.

SOCIETY and CLUBS

Shirley Doreen Miller Weds Donavon Verbout

Miss Shirley Doreen Miller and Donavon Eugene Verbout exchanged marriage vows at a recent afternoon wedding at St. Bernard's Catholic church in this city.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Miller of Goodridge. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Donald Verbout of Grygla.

Rev. Leon Rausch, S.J., officiated at the double ring ceremony witnessed by approximately 300 relatives and friends. At the organ was Lorene Ubel, a friend of the bride. She played "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring," and "Bridal Chorus" for the processional and recessional. She also accompanied Sheila Powe, a friend of the bride, as she sang, "Devoted To You," and "Wedding Song." During the ceremony, Vernon Iverson played the guitar and sang, "For Baby, For Bobbie."

Candelabra and yellow ribbon bows graced the church.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents, was attired in a white Chantilly lace gown styled with a fitted bodice with a Queen Anne neckline and long sleeves with wide cuffs. Her six-tiered skirt flowed back into a chapel-length train. To complete her ensemble, she wore a Juliet styled headpiece of matching lace. Her veil of bridal illusion, edged with Chantilly lace, was borrowed from her cousin, Rosie Dahlen. The bride carried a cascade bouquet of white and yellow roses with ribbon streamers.

Tami Johnsrud and Shelly Hyland were the bride's personal attendants.

Matron of honor was Marilou Anderson of Grygla, a sister of the bride. Other attendants were Naomi Johnson, Goodridge, and Linda Hermanson of Thief River Falls, sisters of the groom; and Theresa Johnsrud, Goodridge, a friend of the couple. Their long-sleeved, floor-length gowns of a floral mint green, were fashioned with rounded necklines trimmed with a matching ruffle. They carried bouquets of yellow and white roses, accented with white daisies, corresponding with the white daisy that trimmed their straw hats.

Serving as flower girl was Lisa Verbout, sister of the groom. Her gown of floral mint green was styled like those worn by the bridesmaids. She carried roses and daisies in the same flower girl basket used at the groom's parents' wedding.

The rings were carried by Robert Coan of Goodridge, a cousin of the bride. Like the men of the wedding party, he wore a mint green tuxedo and a yellow rosebud boutonniere.

Jack Miller, Goodridge, a brother of the bride, was best man. Groomsmen were Danny Johnsrud, Goodridge, a friend of the couple; Tim Hermanson, Thief River Falls, brother-in-law of the groom; and Dale Verbout, Grygla, a brother of the groom.

Serving as ushers were Bobby Miller, Goodridge, cousin of the bride; Gary Miller, Goodridge, brother of the bride; Leon Johnson, Goodridge, brother-in-law of the groom; and Gary Anderson, Grygla, a brother-in-law of the bride.

The usherettes were Becky Brouse, a friend of the couple, and Sandy Olson, fiancee of the bride's brother. They wore yellow, long-sleeved gowns with corsages of yellow and white roses. Altar boys were Chris Verbout and Paul Polansky. Ralph Rundell was the reader and Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Kiem of Lakota, N.D., were gift bearers.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Miller selected a mint green floor-length gown designed with a short-sleeved, gathered bodice, tied at the waistline. The mother of the groom wore a mint-green gown featuring a rounded neckline and short, draped sleeves. Their identical corsages were of yellow roses and white daisies. Their flowers, like all the flowers at the wedding were made by Mrs. Chester Aubol of Thief River Falls.

Honor guests at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Bert Coan and Mr. and Mrs. Morris Miller, grandparents of the bride; Mary Polansky and Hip Verbout, grandparents of the groom; and Eugene Polansky and Louise Squer, godparents of the groom.

A reception at the church followed the ceremony. Host and hostess were Joel and Rosie Dahlen. Roxanne Iverson and Lois Verbout presided at the guest book as Mavis Paulson and Patty Anderson ladled the punch.

Centering the serving table was a pillared, three-tiered wedding cake, decorated with yellow roses and white wedding bells. Topping the cake were a miniature bride and groom. The cake was cut and served by Ilene Miller and Sharon Miller. Pouring coffee were Sharon Iverson and Mary Miller.

Waitresses were Donna Vraa and Fern Horachek, assisted by Jennifer Anderson, Marcia Coan, Bonnie Verbout and Jean Verbout. At the gift table were Tami Miller and Sandy Verbout.

Following the reception, the parents of the couple hosted a supper at the Edgar Miller home.

The bride is a graduate of the Goodridge high school and the Thief River Falls AVTI, cosmetology department. She is currently employed by the Dyna-Team Hair Cutters in this city. The groom, a graduate of the Grygla high school, is employed by Arctic Enterprises.

The couple is at home in this city at Countryside Trailer court, lot 54. Photo, Orvis Haugen, Grygla.

Kyle A. Waterworth Baptized at Newfolden

Kyle Anthony Waterworth, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Joel Waterworth, was baptized Sunday, November 25, at the Bethlehem Lutheran church at Newfolden. Rev. Hans Floan administered the sacrament.

40th Anniversary Is Observed By Ernest Swansons

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest L. Swanson of Goodridge were honored guests at a 40th wedding anniversary reception held Saturday evening, November 3, at the Faith Lutheran church at Goodridge.

Hosting the event were the couple's children: Mr. and Mrs. Royal (Sharon) Knutson of Ada, Mr. and Mrs. Lowell Swanson, Mr. and Mrs. John (Anita) Pietila of Lake Park, Mrs. Mickey (Linda) Zimmerman of Reno, Nev., and Alan Swanson.

Also present were all ten grandchildren: Sheri and Shelly Swanson, Chadwyn and Christopher Knutson, Amy and Heidi Zimmerman, and Karen, Katherine, Kimberly and John Robert Pietila.

Also present were six out of seven of Swanson's brothers and sisters and their spouses. They were Mr. and Mrs. John Swanson, Fridley; Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Swanson, Willmar; Mr. and Mrs. Clarence (Alice Naer, St. Paul; Mr. and Mrs. Floyd (Mabel) Olson, Perham; Mr. and Mrs. Clayton (Marjorie) Johnson, St. James, and Mr. and Mrs. Albert (Emma) Kassa of Goodridge.

Unable to be present was Ethel Moquin of California, who visited the Swansons in July.

Upon arrival at the church, the honored guests, their children and grandchildren were presented corsages and boutonnieres featuring ruby red strawflowers, white babies' breath and red ribbon, fashioned by Mrs. Pietila.

The anniversary observance began with a program with Alan Swanson as master of ceremonies. Mrs. Clarence Peterson and Mrs. Arnold Hammer sang, "Bless This House," with Mrs. Hammer as accompanist. The history of the couple was given by Mrs. Floyd Olson. She traced their lives from their marriage on Nov. 29, 1939 at the parsonage in Thief River Falls, their honeymoon trip, and through 40 years of living on the home farm where Swanson was born. The best man, John Swanson, was introduced and it was noted that the bridesmaid, Gail Brunston of San Diego, Calif., a sister of Mrs. Swanson, had sent a congratulatory letter. She had visited the couple in May.

Sheri Swanson, the oldest granddaughter represented the grandchildren by giving a reading.

Representatives of several organizations were present and spoke of their associations with the couple. They were Sheldon Peterson of Grygla, who represented the area postmasters; Dexter Femling of Dent, past president of the Minnesota State Postmasters association; Clarence Peterson, who represented the Goodridge post office employees; and Dayle Kainz, president of the Faith Lutheran church, who also spoke of his association with Swanson in the Masonic lodge and in community organizations.

Unable to attend but sending letters were Ralph Rundell, a representative of the Lions; and Mrs. Lynn Hanson, who represented the American Lutheran church women and the Deer Park garden club. Their letters were read by Lowell Swanson and Sharon Knutson, respectively.

The probram concluded with words of appreciation by the honored couple and the devotional meditation and benediction by Rev. Gene Broughton.

For the reception that followed, the serving table featured a three-tiered anniversary cake, iced in pink with scroll work in red. A cluster of straw-flowers, matching those in the corsages, topped the cake, which was flanked on either side by red candles. The cake was decorated by Mrs. Pietela and was cut and served by Mrs. Roy (Carol) Anderson, a sister of Mrs. Swanson.

At the silver service was Mrs. John (Adeline) Anderson. Sheri and Shelly Swanson ladled the punch, and fellow members of Mrs. Swanson's Rebecca church circle served the lunch and were in charge of the kitchen. Serving as photographer was John Pietila.

Out-of-town relatives and friends attending were from Reno, Nev.; Bagley, Dent, Detroit Lakes, Grygla, Lake Park, Minneapolis, Moorhead, Perham, Staples, St. James, Thief River Falls and Willmar.

Shoplifting Emphasis Of DECA Promotion

Loss prevention week, sponsored by the distributive education clubs of America (DECA) chapter of the AVTI sales and marketing department, will be noted today through Friday as various activities are performed in the Thief River Falls schools. Emphasis for the week is preventing shoplifting.

Two surveys will be conducted, one a student survey for students from the sixth through 12th grade, and the other a retail survey distributed to Thief River Falls retailers in an effort to learn if shoplifting activities have occurred in their stores and if so, how the situation was handled.

Jan Ginter, Warren, DECA historian, and Sandi Nelson, Thief River Falls, vice president of DECA, along with juvenile officer Jim Haugen, will speak on a local radio station about loss prevention week and shoplifting.

DECA class is furnishing Thief River Falls retailers and employees with buttons with a picture of a huge thumbprint along with a slogan that reads, "Don't leave a mark on you."

Presentation describing shoplifting — who does it and why, along with other aspects —will be conducted on various schools. A slide show will accompany the presentation, while Jim Haugen will speak on the law aspects of shoplifting.

DECA officers who will be involved in the loss prevention week include: Denise Stokke, Viking, president; Sandi Nelson, Thief River Falls, vice president; Patty Erickson, Pine River, secretary; Helen Kloop, Thief River Falls, treasurer; Jan Ginter, Warren and Nancy Peterson, Sebeka, historians; and Marilyn Gustafson, adviser from Thief River Falls.

Loss prevention week appears to be appropriate today, especially during this time of the year, the DECA members note. Various facts indicate that shoplifting is the largest monetary crime in the nation with losses estimated to be in excess of $8 billion annually.

Data provided on the subject explains various aspects and findings connected with shoplifting. The consumer pays the cost of shoplifting in the form of increased prices, an average of five to seven per cent for retail items. Also, each state loses millions of dollars in tax revenue each year as a result of shoplifting. Recent Federal bureau of investigation (FBI) estimates show that shoplifting is rising at approximately 20 per cent each year. More than 45 per cent of all shoplifting losses occur during the Christmas selling season, followed by "back to school" days.

Girls shoplift four to one over boys because they shop more frequently and the items which interest them are more accessible (i.e. jewelry, cosmetics, clothing, etc.)

Recent surveys show that over 50 per cent of shoplifting apprehensions indicate the most common violator to be between 13 and 19. The most common items stolen are jewelry, clothes, perfume, tools, appliances, records, 8-track and cassette tapes, perfume and beauty aids. The average item stolen was valued at $28 due to a high percentage of expensive items. For the most part, items that were stolen could have been purchased by the shoplifter. A Los Angeles psychologist reported that many young people do not regard shoplifting as a crime but as a game in which to "beat the system."

People shoplift for a variety of reasons. The true kleptomaniac, an individual with an uncontrollable impulse to steal, is a rarity. Other shoplifters may be classified as either amateur or professional with amateurs accounting for the largest percentage.

Professional shoplifters "earn" their livelihoods through frequent thefts. They steal in order to resell their loot for cash and on the average take more expensive items than the amateur. Professional shoplifters are not only hard to apprehend but because of their smooth and skillful techniques they are hard to detect.

While it can usually be determined what kind of items the professional shoplifter will be drawn to, desperate shoplifters (drug addicts, vagrants or other in dire need of money) are quite unpredictable. Their methods are often the result of an impulse which reflects little or no planning in their operation. Because they steal out of desperation the desperate shoplifter is more apt to be violent when stopped in the process.

Results of student surveys indicate that of over 25,000 high school students surveyed, 70 per cent admitted to having shoplifted. The majority of students surveyed did not think of shoplifting as being a serious crime. Vast majority of students admitting to previous shoplifting indicated having done so on impulse, a dare, peer pressure, or as a requirement to join a club. They also indicated that in the majority of cases, the item was not needed, and that they had the money to purchase the item had they chosen to do so.

Laws concerning shoplifting vary from state to state. Over the last decade shoplifters have been detected and prosecuted at an increasing rate due to more sophisticated devices and greater concern to halt the growth of shoplifting by retailers.

Some of the more widely used shoplifting prevention devices are: Closed circuit television cameras aimed at counters displaying goods which are most attractive to shoplifters. Also, some larger department stores use mirror-like domes which contain a camera rotating as much as 360 degrees to cover an entire area. Dome stores even mount "dummy" cameras in order to discourage potential shoplifters. Electronic tags cause an alarm to ring if someone has not had the cashier or clerk remove it properly after the item was purchased. There is one drawback to electronic tags and this is if a clerk has forgotten to remove the tag from a purchased item it might lead to a possible lawsuit against the store from the disgruntled customer. Use of guards is another prevention. Also, there are radio-communication systems between security personnal in plain clothes and others watching monitors in a back room. False columns with detectives inside looking through an opening during large sales are also used. Glass panels that look like mirrors work nearly in the same order as the false columns. Store warnings such as signs and posters which remind possible shoplifters, that, if caught, the store owner will prosecute, are often found. And, a device called "Clerk-Alert" which is basically a cable looped through objects on display at retail counters is sometimes used. An electronic current flows through the cable and if someone were to remove, or attempt to remove, an item there would be an audible or inaudible alarm sound to alert store employees.

To Hold Paper Drive Again In January

Another paper drive will be held in January when the company which purchases paper from the local drive will send a truck here to load the paper collected, according to Mrs. Donna Olson, drive organizer.

There has been no place available locally to store collections from paper drives, she said, and they have had to make collections only when a truck has been available for direct loading. Last pic-up was held on November 10. January pick-up date will be announced when a definite date has been selected.

Legal Services Organization Receives Funds

Northwest Minnesota legal services has received a preliminary recommendation from the legal services corporation for funds to continue providing civil legal assistance, Congressman Arlan Stangeland announced recently.

"This northwest program was a pilot venture which has proved its worth by providing necessary legal services to those who can least afford them. Without the assistance provided by Northwest Minnesota legal services, many people in the seventh district would be forced to do without important legal counseling and advice," Stangeland said.

Northwest Minnesota legal services is a private, non-profit agency established to provide legal assistance to residents of 22 counties in northwestern Minnesota who are unable to afford the cost of legal services. NMLS is funded by the legal services corporation and serves Kittson, Roseau, Lake of the Woods, Marshall, Pennington, Red Lake, Polk, Beltrami, Norman, Mahnomen, Clearwater, Clay, Becker, Hubbard, Wilkin, Otter Tail, Wadena, Traverse, Grant, Douglas, Stevens and Pope counties.

The NMLS is part of the delivery systems study under the legal services corporation, which is mandated to test various ways of providing legal services to the nation's poor. Under this program the type of legal assistance provided is called "Judicare" or "open-panel private attorney" approach. Clients are screened for eligibility and those approved are referred to participating attorneys with the services being provided in the attorney's own office.

"The need for Northwest Minnesota legal services and the judicare program it provides is great, and there is no question that this is the best way to bring excellent legal services to the poor and elderly who live in rural areas of the seventh district," Stangeland said.

In 1967, half the food produced in India was lost to rats, rot, birds and insects. Three years later, 50 per cent losses in developing countries were not unusual. It's estimated modern pest control could save enough food for 40 million people.

Perfect Game Talk Of Local Area Bowlers

mark."

Olson said he thought the final ball scarcely caught the head pin but was breaking sharply and carried through the pocket to complete the strike.

"I know I was really excited but I don't remember what I did," he said. "I remember there were a lot of people congratulating me and I really felt good about it."

To carry the improbability factor a bit further, one must look at the record and past history. Thousands of bowlers have come and gone during the 21 years since the Family Bowl has been in operation and Jarvis was a three-year-old. During all that time, nobody had rolled a 300 in league play.

Olson has been bowling for three years now and generally bowls twice a week — in the Tuesday Happy Hour and Friday night leagues. His average is about the same in both leagues. Prior to last Tuesday, his high individual game had been a 212 and he had never bowled a 500 series: 490 was his top series mark.

Olson followed the 300 game with a 217 game — which in itself would have been his personal high — and when three splits reduced his last game to a 150, still eight pins above his average his 667 series was 177 pins over his previous high.

Owner-manager Tom Greelis of Family Bowl disagrees that Olson had a light hit on his 12th ball. "He was wide of the mark on his release," Greelis admits, "But he had a solid pocket hit that cleaned the alley. He couldn't have thrown a better ball."

Greelis also notes that there was a good crowd on hand to witness the milestone game. "We had make-ups on 11 through 16 so we had all 16 alleys going," he said. "In the 10th frame alleys nine and 10 were the only ones operating and on the last ball it was only alley 10."

After the final strike, Olson "jumped up in the air and fell on his rear on the approach", Greelis said. "Then everybody rushed over to congratulate him and it was quite a scene."

Greelis knows of the pressure Olson felt on that final ball. He bowled a sanctioned 300 game Jan. 8, 1973 in Hayward, Calif. The only other known Thief River Falls bowler with a sanctioned 300 is Ken Bergman, who rolled a perfect game Oct. 15, 1963, at Slayton.

Reaction among local bowlers has been tremendous, Greelis said. Comments have ranged from "Jarvis, who?" to "unbelieveable" and "it's a miracle." Most frequently asked question is what Olson will get from his 300 game effort.

For sure he will receive a "300" emblem ring from the American Bowling congress, set with a diamond and valued at about $300. He will receive a 300 patch for his shirt and a Century club patch for bowling more than 100 pins over his average. The Jewel Box has offered a $25 gift certificate and the Family Bowl is as yet undecided but will make an award at the time the "300" ring arrives.

"And because he has two strings of six strikes in a row during the game," Greelis added, "I gave him two tickets for $5 discounts on dinners at the American Legion. "We haven't had that problem come up before, but it will probably be a long time before it happens again!"

Has Jarvis realized another free dinner was on the line in the 10th frame he might have really been nervous.

Olson said he had several Brooklyn strikes in the game and admits he had to have a bit of luck in reaching the 300 mark. He usually gets his share of strikes, he said, but open frames have kept his average down because "he hasn't been able to find the line on converting his spares.

Greelis notes that it isn't unusual for a 140 to 150 average bowler to roll a perfect game. "It happens every year in the ABC," he said, "but there are probably 10 or 12 million bowlers in the country. Chances are somebody is going to have a hot night."

For Jarvis Olson it was Nov. 27, 1979. He will remember the date. It was also the day he got his seasonal lay-off slip from Arctic Enterprises.

Sunflower Growers Have Fall Problems

considered unless the field is scheduled for summer fallow during the 1980 crop year, the extension director added. It is important to work the sunflower stalks down to avoid excessive snow catch which could significantly delay spring tillage.

Some area farmers have found that one trip over the field with a flexible tooth harrow does a good job of breaking up and working the stalks down on oil seed varities of sunflowers.

"This practice can be accomplished with minimum power and time requirements and it will leave the topsoil protected from wind erosion," states Allan Gustafson, work unit conservationist for the Pennington soil and water conservation district.

"It will also eliminate the need to apply this practice during the spring when soils are vulerable to compaction and time is generally at a premium," Courneya added. While it is often damaging to a disc to use it on frozen ground, the flexible tooth harrow tends to "float" on a cushing of stalks without significant stress on the equipment.

Most of the sunflowers being harvested in the last couple of weeks were planted in mid to late June, the extension director said. Yields from these late plantings have been running from below 1,000 pounds to 1,500 pounds per acre. Farmers who were able to get their crop planted around May 20 and harvested earlier had yields up to 2,000 pounds per acre.

Local LP gas dealers report being swamped with requests for gas for dryers during the peak of the harvest but note that the demand has fallen off now. Extra equipment was put in temporarily in an effort to meet demands for delivery but most suppliers were unable to keep up with requests. The dealers also said they have exceeded their allocations and that the press for farm delivery has left them behind on their deliveries to heating customers. Generally favorable weather in the past several weeks has helped from that standpoint.

Dear friends,

The making of a will is one of the most important acts in a man's life. By his will, he plans the distribution of the fruits of his life's work and the welfare and future of his loved ones.

A will usually lessens family disagreement, reduces probate expenses, inheritance taxes, and confusion. In our profession, we repeatedly see the advantage of a properly drawn will.

Respectfully,

8 Government Posts Created Daily In 1978

Number of state and local employees on the public payroll increased by 3,000 in 1978, according to the Minnesota taxpayers association. This means 8.2 new government positions were created every day in Minnesota last year.

Over the past decade the number of state and local employees has increased by approximately 49,000, or an average of 13.4 new positions every day for the last 3,650 days. While public employment has risen 33 per cent in the past 10 years and payrolls have risen 154 per cent, Minnesota's population has increased only eight per cent.

The association cites figures from the U.S. department of commerce which show the growth in full-time equivalent (FTE) employment and payrolls as of October of each year. State and local employees numbered 197,022 in 1978, representing an increase of 3,000 or 1.5 per cent over the 194,022 reported in 1977.

Of the 197,022 employees in 1978, 53,356 or 27 per cent were counted as state employees and 143,666 or 73 per cent were employees of local governments. From 1977 to 1978, state employees increased by 1,580; local employees were up by 1,420 positions. The latter can be broken down further: county employees were up by 1,518; municipalities added 1,527 positions; townships showed a decline of 398; school district employment declined by 1,927; and special districts added 700 employees.

By function, education was by far the largest employer in the state, accounting for 99,697 employees or 51 per cent of total state and local employment. Hospitals and health was the second largest functional employer with 23,044 public employees. Highways employer was third with 12,291. The majority of the new positions in 1978 were in the areas of hospitals and health which added 2,700 positions and welfare which added 2,060 employees.

According to Don Paterick, Executive director of the association, "Welfare is the fastest growing sector of public employment. In 1978 Minnesota had more employees administering welfare programs, than providing police and fire protection combined. Welfare employees totaled 9,994, police numbered 7,955, and 2,033 were employed in fire protection. Based on employees per 10,000 population, Minnesota's welfare personnel numbered 24.9. Only three states, New York, New Hampshire and Pennsylvania have higher ratios. The number of welfare employees has nearly tripled in the past 10 years, increasing by 173 per cent. Taxpayers in the state are paying $9.5 million every month in salaries for welfare personnel."

The total monthly state and local public payroll in Minnesota amounts to $240 million, representing an eight per cent increase over 1977 and a 154 per cent increase since 1968.

The number of state and local employees in Minnesota per 10,000 population is average compared to the rest of the nation. This ratio was 491.4 in Minnesota in 1978 compared with 491.8 on the national average. Minnesota ranks 33rd highest in the nation (excluding the District of Columbia) in state and local employees per 10,000 population.

Figures pertaining to city employment for Minnesota's five largest cities are also cited by the association. In aggregate, the five cities showed a decline of 96 employees or .9 per cent in 1978; monthly payrolls showed a moderate rise of 4.8 per cent.

Specifically, the employment and payroll figures were as follows: City employment in Minneapolis declined by 129, totaling 5,208 in 1978. The monthly payroll rose 3.5 per cent, reaching $7.8 million. St. Paul showed a minimal decline of 10 employees from the 3,483 reported in 1977. Monthly payroll totaled $4.9 million, representing a two per cent increase. City employment in Duluth rose by 70 positions to 1,385 in 1978, while the monthly payroll increased 16 per cent to $1.9 million. The number of city employees in Bloomington declined by 41, to 464 in 1978. The monthly payroll rose 4.4 per cent to $695,000. And in Rochester, city employment was up by 14, reaching 625 in 1978 with a 13 per cent rise in payrolls which totaled a monthly $813,000 in 1978.

Counties Are Given State Land Money

Minnesota counties received more than $546,572 during fiscal year 1979 as their share of receipts from two classifications of state lands administered by the Department of Natural Resources.

Receipts from timber sales, leases and other revenue from consolidated conservation area lands" and state owned lands within designated state forests are divided equally between the counties within which the lands are located and the state treasury.

Receipts from the two classes of land totaled $1,093,144 for the year.

Consolidated conservation area lands are located in the counties of Aitkin, Beltrami, Koochiching, Lake of the Woods, Mahnomen, Marshall and Roseau.

More than 28 counties receive revenue from lands within state forest boundaries. Receipts from these lands are deposited in the "state forest fund".

Total revenue to the seven counties from consolidated conservation area lands amounted to $347,377. State forest lands produced $199,194 to the 28 counties involved.

Following is a list of the counties and the monies they received during fiscal year 1979 from the two sources:

Alcohol Fuel Seminar Slated At Bird Island

Anyone who wants to learn how to make alcohol fuel should consider attending the first state-wide alcohol fuels seminar, according to Diane Nelsen, spokeswoman for the Minnesota state automobile association (AAA).

Scheduled for Wednesday, December 12, at 9 a.m. in the Bird Island-ballroom in Bird Island, the seminar will feature some of the nation's top speakers on alcohol fuels, according to Nelsen. Seminar is sponsored by the Minnesota gasohol commission, a non-profit organization.

Highlights of the seminar will be an operable alcohol plant, a see-through distillation column, an alcohol fueled tractor and various farm-related displays.

Moderated by Nelsen, associate editor of the "Minnesota AAA Motorist" magazine and author of several articles on gasohol, the all-day program will include a number of technical experts: Dr. Robert Middaugh, South Dakota State university, will talk on alcohol conversion; Dr. Al Rusk, Southwest State university, will explain how the still works and the six-step process of changing raw materials to alcohol; Bob Butler, Butler Engineering, St. Paul, will explore the feasibility and economics of on-farm alcohol plants; and Lance Crombie, a farmer-microbiologist, will explain how he has built a solar still and how governmental loans for alcohol production plants will be administered.

Addressing the production, marketing and legislative aspects of alcohol fuels will be: Rep. Dave Fjoslien, author of alcohol fuels legislation, who will discuss state and national alcohol legislation and gasohol tax credit bills; Carl Reeder, a technical marketing expert with Archer Daniels Midland (ADM), who will tell about ADM's alcohol production plant and their promotion of alcohol fuels; and Jerry Morrow, regional marketing manager for Cenex, who will speak on the distribution of gasohol through Minnesota co-ops.

Archie Zeithamer, an Alexandria area farmer who has built his own alcohol plant and uses alcohol to power his farm machinery, will discuss how other farmers can do the same, and how the residue from the alcohol production can be used for animal feed.

Ray Anderson, president of the Minnesota gasohol commission, will report on the national gasohol commission's convention in early December.

Seminar also includes a tour of an operating alcohol production plant on the Les Krueger farm near Redwood Falls. Kiecker noted that because of insurance requirements the plant cannot be operated during the tour.

Registration fee ($20 for MGC members, $25 for non-members) also includes a noon lunch and informational materials. Because of limited space, pre-registration is encouraged. Send your name, address and check to: Glenn Kiecker, Secretary, Minnesota Gasohol Commission, 5641 Newton Ave. S., Minneapolis, MN 55419, or Minnesota Gasohol Commission, Highways 212 and 71, Olivia, MN 56227. Or for further information please call 612-348-7828.

Lung Ass'n. Traces Origin Back To 1906

Present Minnesota Lung association was organized in 1906 under the long name "Minnesota Association for Prevention and Relief of TB." Its purpose was to lead the fight against tuberculosis, a contagious disease which was killing thousands across the state each year.

This new voluntary health association developed a plan to attempt to control the spread of the "white plague". The association inspired people and gave them hope. Christmas Seals were used as a means of raising the necessary funds to finance a statewide campaign to conquer tuberculosis.

Today, over 70 years later, TB is being kept under control by the Christmas Seal associations in Minnesota.

In an appeal letter sent to Minnesota residents, Dr. R. Paul Marvin, Minnesota Lung association president, mentions some of the current services made possible by Christmas Seal contributions. Among them are anti-smoking programs in schools; free breathing capacity tests; Camp Superkids, the camp for kids with asthma; educating medical and school professionals about lung health; promoting the protection of the rights of non-smokers; and research into the causes, treatment and prevention of lung diseases.

Today, as in 1906, the Christmas Seal association of Minnesota is working year-round to prevent crippling lung diseases (emphysema, chronic bronchitis, asthma and TB).

THIEF RIVER FALLS

Prepare yourself for another big jump in the price of energy.

Build with Stran now.

You might as well get ready for it. Energy costs continue to go up. And most forecasters don't see them ever coming back down to earth.

All that stands between you and a small fortune in energy costs is a well-insulated building that holds utility costs to a minimum. A building like Stran builds.

You see, Stran has factory-insulated wall and roof systems, including our famous Stranwall 70 system, that can cut heating and cooling costs in half as compared to other methods.

Which is why some Stran wall and roof building products are specified for constructing refrigerated warehouses with temperatures held at 20 F or more. So we know how to keep you cool. Or warm, very efficiently.

As long as you're planning a new building, you might as well be prepared for the future. Give us a call. We'll show you why Stran buildings are looking better all the time.

Who Gets The Blame?

FOLLOWING ARTICLE BY Raleigh Dingman, executive director of the North Carolina school boards association, appeared in that association's monthly bulletin:

"Johnny on the ocean,
Johnny on the sea,
Johnny broke the telephone
And blamed it on me.
I told Ma.
Ma told Pa
Johnny got a licking.
Ha! Ha! Ha!
—Children's Doggerel

This bit of undignified verse from our childhood games serves to remind us of a very American trait that has been amplified in our modern society with its trend toward increased participation and (maybe) excess communication.

I'm speaking of the ever increasing need to "put the blame" on somebody.

As children we solved that problem by seeing that the culprit (or at least the one we felt was the culprit) got a licking.

As adults we resort to the more mature (?) approach of demanding "accountability". And being more mature, we don't settle for mere licking to set matters straight.

Rather, we want to see the responsible individuals removed from their positions. Or, to put it in the verncaular, we want to see "some heads roll."

The unfortunate part of this approach is that "making heads roll" is not any more effective than seeing that somebody gets a "licking".

Especially in the business of education, which is more of an art than a science, it is difficult to determine who's "to blame."

A good example is found in the recent brouhaha about "Johnny can't read". Among those who were principals, the superintendents, and the school boards.

The teachers were "blamed" for not having enough training in reading, not seeking outside help from reading experts and for not making use of teacher aides.

Yet, the most recent reading research (a study by the Federal Reserve Bank and The Philadelphia Public Schools) tell us that "the number of graduate courses in reading taken by the classroom teacher and the teacher's experience. . .made no difference in improving reading achievement."

Also, "the more time a classroom teacher spent away from a "direct link" to his or her pupils — through absence, in-service training during class hours, or even by using reading aides — the less the pupils learned."

Another factor which makes no difference, according to the study, as reported in Education U.S.A., was: "the time spent on reading instruction and whether the instruction was in the morning or the afternoon."

So. . .. are the teachers "to blame"?

How about the principals? Can they be blamed?

The study did say that "When principals. . .were former reading professionals, they are, therefore, 'tuned in' to the importance of reading and better able to motivate teachers. Consequently, their pupils achieved significantly more reading growth. . ."

And, "the more the principal observed in the classroom, the better the pupils achieved."

Let's blame the principal!

How about superintendents and school boards? Legislators apparently thought that the way in which boards and the administrators arranged class size and the use of personnel were factors to blame!

So that "Super School Board" in the legislative building passed laws mandating class size and the use of aides.

What did the study find?

"Perhaps the most controversial finding of all, however, was that in every class of 24-35 pupils, those in larger classes experienced more reading growth than pupils in smaller classes. . .And that "as the number of reading aides in a class increased there was a decline in achievement growths".

Now, I quote this research not to place "the blame" on anyone. And not to absolve school boards or superintendents from their responsibility.

Rather, the intent is to point out that the problem is complex. Just as education (and the human mind) is complex.

Mistakes will be made. But I submit that mistakes made at the local level are less damaging and more easily corrected than state-wide mistakes.

Locally, Johnny can quickly recover from his "licking."

Uneasy Feeling

Following editorial is from the Riverton (Wyoming) Ranger:

Does anyone else get an uneasy feeling when the federal government tells us:

—where to set our thermostats.

—how much a filling station can mark up its gasoline.

—how fast we can drive.

—how much money the state will lose if it doesn't obey Washington.

—what color the stripes in the highway must be.

—we can't use saccharin, while warning sugar also may be bad for health.

—our cars must have air bags.

—future cars must get so many miles to the gallon.

—we should pay more for foreign oil than for domestic.

—we must pay $600 a car for emission and safety equipment.

—de-regulate oil, but tax away the extra profits as "windfall."

—we can't mail a letter except in certain size envelopes.

—what were you thinking when you wrote.

—don't smoke in public, but if you get cancer, don't use any cure not government approved.

The list of don'ts goes on forever. We get the feeling that Big Daddy is creeping deeper and deeper into the citizens' lives. Taking unto government functions once reserved for private businesses, adding regulations on rule to where the country is choked in the process.

Allan Grant of American Farm Bureau suggests a one-year moratorium on all new federal regulations. He says we have to start somewhere. There are others who want to stop nowhere short of cradle-to-grave regulation, domination and nationalization of our lives, our businesses and our institutions.

We're not alone with the uneasy feeling that the freedoms Americans cherish are being eradicated, eroding away, one by one by one.

Borrowed Nonsense:

Uncle Zeb didn't get to the big city very often, but one day he decided it was time to go to town. He put on his best suit and caught a ride into the downtown area. It wasn't long before a stranger approached him and said, "Say, mister, would you give me a dollar for a sandwich?" "I dunno," Zeb mused. "Let me see the sandwich first."

Arrested for gambling, the man protested to the judge that he was playing for chips, not money. "Chips are the same as money," the stern judge replied. "I fine you $15." Dejectedly the defendant reached into his pocket and handed the judge three blue chips.

CONCENTRATION on hitting his spot and trying not to think about his score helped Jarvis Olson roll the first sanctioned perfect 300 game in the history of Family Bowl in Thief River Falls. The game was 158 pins over Olson's 142 average. His next game of 217 was also five pins over his previous personal high of 212 and his 667 series was the first time he had rolled a series above 490.

THE VOICE of BUSINESS

by Richard L. Lesher, President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

America, the land with more freedom, more opportunity and more prosperity than any other, sets aside one day a year to give thanks for all these blessings. Maybe the good Lord deserves two!

I say this not entirely in jest, for we do have much to be thankful for — more in fact, than most of us can remember on this uniquely American holiday. Yet how easy it is to instinctively reflect on what we want, rather than on what we already have. . .and on what should be, rather than on the good that now is.

Certainly I would not suggest we take our eyes off the horizon. From our earliest days, America has been the world's beacon toward the future, and it is through this role that we have contributed most to the progress of mankind. Neither would I suggest America is already a perfect place, nor that we are even nearing perfection. We all know better. Our history is filled with mistakes, and problems like inflation, regulation, taxation and unemployment which seemed bad ten years ago, are worse today. Indeed, polls indicate many Americans have never been more gloomy, more pessimistic about their future.

Still, a mature nation can learn from its mistakes, pick itself off the ground and begin anew. America wants to do that, and is doing that. Slowly, we have begun turning away from the dishonest, free-lunch, no-fault philosophy that inflicted so much harm on our society. As we do, we can reach out with reassurance to such tested, traditional values as self-reliance, ambition, patriotism, concern for community, support for private charity and trust in heaven. Like old friends they're all patiently waiting for us. Some feel a bit neglected no doubt, but all are still ready to help us again as they have so often in the past.

Of course some people have lost faith — even respect — for the traditional values. More and more we hear them criticizing America, disparaging her history, finding fault with her institutions, questioning her size and strength and impugning her motivations. But this rhetoric, no matter how strident, can never match the reality of our accomplishments.

What these people forget, or refuse to admit, is that a recession here, however unwelcome, would be like prosperity nearly everywhere else. What they ignore is that the average American gives away more each year in charity, than millions of other people can ever hope to earn for 12 months of back breaking labor. And even after Americans have given their share, they dig down and give more. Look at Cambodia, at the awful spectacle of nearly an entire country being callously starved by its "neighbors." If there is any hope, any at all for these helpless people, it will be thanks to all those in the United States who are thousands of miles away, but who still feel the pain, share the suffering and refuse to sit and watch an innocent people die.

I'm thankful to have people like that for countrymen. Equally important, I'm thankful we can live together in a free country — the kind of country where people can start with nothing, then grow, improve, succeed, and finally leave this world having provided their family the means to live even better; the kind of country based on the rule of law where, as Abraham Lincoln once said: "No man is good enough to govern another man without that other's consent."

Other countries, most other countries, lack these fundamental guarantees of individual rights. The result is people do not live as well as we do. Ever wonder what we would have to do to achieve equality with the Soviet Union? The answer is: Cut our paychecks by more than half; move tens of millions of workers back to the farm (where they would then proceed to grow less food!); also, tear up and destroy most of our railroads, highways, automobiles, single-family homes, telephones and television sets. Of course these are just material sacrifices. Stripped away as well would be so many of those precious personal freedoms that permit us to make basic decisions concerning our jobs, homes, churches and schools.

Does America have problems? You bet she does. But we can lick those problems if we just remember our principles have never failed us when we have had the wisdom and courage to live up to them. Let's be thankful that we, unlike so many others, still have that opportunity. Because to paraphrase an old English verse:

There will always be an America, and America will always be free.

If American means as much to you, as America means to me.

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

The issue of Sunday store openings is one upon which much could be written. My intention in writing this letter is not to expound on this issue or to sit in judgment of those who choose to open their businesses on Sunday or those who choose to Shop on that day. I only wish to state what God has said in His Word about honoring the Lord's Day. If you disagree, please take it up with Him. You might as well talk to Him about it now, for one day He will have the final say.

"The Lord says, 'If you treat the Sabbath as sacred and do not pursue YOUR OWN interests on that day; if you value My holy day and honor it by not . . . working . . . on that day, then you will find the joy that comes from serving Me.'"—Isaiah 58:13.

"Observe the Sabbath and keep it holy, as I, the Lord your God, have COMMANDED you. You have six days in which to do your work, but the seventh day is a day of rest dedicated to Me. ON THAT DAY NO ONE IS TO WORK."—Deuteronomy 5:13.

"As for the peoples of the land who bring wares or any grain on the Sabbath day to sell, WE WILL NOT BUY FROM THEM ON THE SABBATH DAY."—Nehemiah 10:31.

". . . they refused My laws. They would not obey My rules even though obeying them means life. And they misused My Sabbaths."—Ezekiel 20:13.

Tradition Changes In Observance Of Christmas Holiday

by David M. Maxfield
Smithsonian News Service

Christmas, you may be surprised to learn, was a work or school day for many Americans until the mid-1800s.

The traditional American Christmas, in fact, is not so very old at all. Gift-giving, card-sending, tree-trimming and other present-day customs did not become widely popular until the final decades of the 19th century, arriving then as a package of Victorian style and business zeal.

For many years, Thanksgiving actually was far more special than Christmas in New England. In the South, firecrackers were set off Christmas morning; colored eggs decorated evergreens in Dutch settlements along the Hudson river, and well into the 1800s, Santa Claus was portrayed as quite a small, elfish figure sometimes capped off with a feather.

"Technological developments, advances in transportation, printing and mail services probably were responsible for the enormous change and popularization of Christmas day in the Victorian period," according to Shirley Cherkasky, a sociologist responsible for holiday research at the Smithsonian Institution's division of performing arts.

"Certainly, the publication of Charles Dickens' "A Christmas Carol", with its themes of charity and good-will, affected the idea of how people felt Christmas should be observed," she adds.

Early in the country's history, the Puritan settlers believed Christmas should not be observed at all, and in 1659 the celebration was outlawed in Massachusetts by the decree: "Whoever shall be found observing any such day as Christmas and the like. . shall pay for each offense five shillings to the country."

The Puritans associated Christmas with the Church of England, a painful reminder of their struggle for religious freedom. The December 25 holiday, they strongly felt, was a human invention, a fabrication: Christ's birthdate was unknown, and therefore, the day should never have been ordained by the church. The Puritans also didn't care much for the occasion, thinking it too closely linked to the spirited pagan celebration of the winter solstice.

But in New York, Pennsylvania and the southern colonies, Christmas was another matter altogether. The Anglicans, Lutherans, Dutch Reformed and Roman Catholics in these regions celebrated with music, dancing, feasts and family gatherings. A French traveler, visiting the home of a Virginian in the 1680s, reported: "There was a great deal of carousing. He had sent for three fiddlers, a jester, a tightrope dancer, an acrobat who tumbled. . .they gave us all the entertainment one could wish for."

"Today, if you're talking about getting back to a more religious holiday, you might remember that Christmas used to be pretty wild," Cherkasky notes. So wild that one early custom called mumming — knocking on doors, ringing bells, rattling cans and shooting off firearms — got completely out of hand in Baltimore late in the 1800s, falling into decline when quieter residents complained.

After years of struggle, the Massachusetts Puritans in 1681 repealed their anti-holiday decree, apparently won over by two reasons: the seasonal joy they could see their neighbors experiencing, plus the protection of the U.S. Constitution gave to the separation of church and state. The Puritans, according to social historian James H. Barnett, were less inclined to oppose the secular celebration when it was no longer a symbol of the political and religious dominance of the Church of England.

But some in the colony still were not reconciled to the decision. Complained one Judge Sewell: "I believe that the body of the People Profane it; and blessed be God, no authority yet to compel them to keep it." In 1856, though, Massachusetts joined the growing list of states giving legal recognition to Christmas day — the first being Alabama 20 years earlier.

By the mid-1800s, Christmas spirit was on the upswing throughout the country. Dickens' "A Christmas Carol", published in 1843, helped bridge local and regional differences in holiday customs. Its themes of kindness and generosity, according to Cherkasky, crossed many cultural and regional boundaries, thereby helping to universalize the Christmas celebration.

In 1868, Dickens gave readings of the tale in the United States and, after one appearance, he wrote: "They took it so tremendously last night that I was stopped every five minutes. One poor young girl burst into a passion of grief about Tiny Tim and had to be taken out."

As it did in other areas of American life, the industrial revolution began to influence the way Christmas was observed. Christmas cards, for example, could be produced and mailed inexpensively, gaining wide popularity by 1875. And for better or worse, the first holiday advertising appeared in the 1830's.

But it was not until late in the century, when the business and pleasure of gift-giving began in earnest, that elaborate Christmas celebrations became an annual American experience. "Gifts at first were given mainly to children, servants and tradespeople," Cherkasky notes. "It was a time for evening up accounts. But that was all to change."

"The folk-secular aspect of Christmas was taking precedence over its religious one," Barnett says. "This was apparent in the increasing importance of Santa Claus." Thomas Nast's drawings in "Harper's Weekly" portrayed Santa for the first time as a jolly, white-bearded character dressed in fur.

The popularity of the Christmas tree grew right along with the change in social customs and technological progress. After Queen Victoria set up a Yuletide tree at Windsor castle, the style was set, reaching the White House in 1865, during Franklin Pierce's presidency.

Thomas Edison's lab came up with a string of tree lights in 1882, three years after the incandescent light breakthrough, and immediately this novel idea became the rage among the wealthy. Christmas tree parties to show off the expensive, lighted trees were major social events.

Today, of course, the Christmas season is the sum of many traditions. "We're so encrusted with a whole set of things to do, compared to the time when the season was really quite simple," says Cherkasky.

Future Of Ag Meet Dec. 4 In Nebraska

Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland will chair the fourth in a nationwide series of public discussions on the future of agriculture and rural communities in Sioux City, Neb., on Tuesday.

"Our purpose is to look at the forces that made agriculture and rural America what they are today and to consider what kind of programs and policies will help shape the kind of agriculture we'll need and the kind of rural life we'll want in the decades ahead," Bergland said.

Twenty-one persons are scheduled to testify at the December 4 hearing. Witnesses will make five minute presentations, then will be questioned or asked to expand on certain points by Bergland and Dale Hathaway, undersecretary for international affairs and commodity programs with USDA.

Meeting will start at 9 a.m. in the Best Western-Marina Inn at Fourth and B. Streets. It is expected to draw attendance from Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska, North and South Dakota.

Explaining why he called the meetings, Bergland said: "We need to stand back and look at farm programs, tax policies, marketing and transportation systems, environmental concerns, community development programs and credit policies that have shaped agricultural development in the past, then decide what kind of programs and policies will help us move wisely into the future."

Bergland said he decided earlier this year to initiate a national dialogue to determine if and how current policies should be refocused. The Secretary said he wanted to hold hearings now so there would be time to incorporate a wide range of public opinion into the policymaking process. It is particularly important, he said, that we look ahead to anticipate emerging problems and to develop solutions that could be written into the new farm legislation that will be enacted in 1981.

"There is no 'one' answer, no single 'right' policy," Bergland said.

"It is my hope that wide-ranging, informed discussions will give us a better understanding of our choices and enable us to select wisely among them," Bergland said.

Shoplifting Views Given By Students generosity and those who suspected he was stealing and didn't agree with it refused his gifts.

Of course there's always a few who think it's cool and brave to break the law, so they encouraged him to steal larger items for them. He felt good about the popularity his shoplifting was giving him so he continued with his glamorous career, getting involved in more expensive items. Next on his list was a portable radio for his friend he kind of liked. The friend accepted the radio and asked for a-pocket calculator.

Later he admitted he was really scared to take larger items but didn't dare to let his "friends" down. He even considered going "straight" for awhile so he talked his little brother into going into the back of a grocery store and stealing the empty pop bottles. He would then go into the front of the store and sell them to the store owner. He then felt he was no longer stealing. He now had money to buy things for his friend.

However, his little brother wasn't too good at this and was soon caught. When the police came the little brother soon confessed the whole story and this kid's popularity didn't last too long when all his so called friends found out what he had been up to.

The greatest percentage of shoplifting is done by kids, however plenty of adults also have this sickness. They use many tricks, for instance emptying potato chip boxes of one bag and filling the bottom with more expensive items, carrying shopping bags to hide things in or large coats with inside pockets.

Most everyone who has shoplifted finds it really isn't worth it. It may seem exciting or profitable for awhile, but the shame and embarrassment of getting caught soon makes them regret ever having tried it. Five out of 10 shoplifters are brought to the attention of the law enforcement center, however many shoplifters are caught by storeowners who feel it isn't necessary to involve the police. Shoplifting is a major cause of inflation—hurting small businesses as well as large.

Shoplifting: Is it really worth it? That's a question to think very hard about before going through with the idea. Many people, young and old, female and male, black and white or whatever will go through with it and just decide to pick something up before leaving a store, whether it would be a 25-cent candy bar or a $100 outfit. It's still the same crime and a person committing it could be punished severely.

Facts show shoplifting is one of the most common crimes today, probably by far the most committed by juveniles. There's alot of reasons for shoplifting, starting probably with the number one: I didn't have any money, and the item wasn't worth that much anyway. True, things aren't worth what you pay for them anymore.

At the rate shoplifting is increasing, the cost is going to keep going higher and higher, too. Anyone and everyone who shoplifts will pay for it, whether you're caught in action or not. If you don't pay for it by fine or by imprisonment, you'll be paying by taxes and inflation. Things stolen from stores must be paid for, so what would be a better way than to raise the prices on everything else in the store. But not only you, the shoplifter is going to pay, everyone is; your mother, your father, dear old grandmother, friends and every other citizen.

Or is it the excuse that everyone else does it, or that if you don't you don't belong in the group. True, you probably don't belong with the friends who will commit crimes this way. No one really belongs with that kind of person.

Prices were put on products for a purpose, not to be rejected or laughed about. Maybe if people would talk to friends about what they are starting, people would realize the wrong they are doing and would change their ways, not only with shoplifting, but also other crimes.

Maybe your reason is to get some attention once in awhile. Does it work? Maybe it does get you all the attention you can handle. After long enough juveniles can end up in reform schools or you can get alot of attention sitting in a courtroom with several strangers staring you in the eyes, putting a mark on you and your record. Is it worth it?

A real great excuse "I didn't do it", is one of the most popular with kids these days. Maybe it wasn't you, one of your friends possibly. Well have you ever heard the saying, "You're judged by the company you keep". It's true, even though you probably had nothing at all to do with the actual taking of the item. You were at the scene of the crime and you'll be held very responsible for that.

Well many people say, "They're the only friends I have, I can't let them down". Maybe they are your only friends, but are they really true friends? Will they admit it was them who is to blame when you're busted, or will they run and leave you when you need a friend? I guarantee you'll never get any other kind of friends either unless you try and change for the better.

Many things influence people to shoplift. Number one is probably the parents who don't give their children any attention unless they do something wrong. Maybe the parents even shoplift themselves.

Before you ever think about starting to shoplift or doing it again, consider the facts, then ask yourself is it really worth it? When you're going through the punishment it'll be too late to ask that question. Just always remember, "CRIME DOESN'T PAY".

Crookston Impressive

Crookston, according to sentiments expressed by Pirates coach Marshall Olson, appears to be the favorite for the 1979-80 Northwest Athletic Conference high school basketball title. In fact, the Pirates may rank as a title threat to favored Moorhead in the post-season North Half Region 8AA tournament.

Talking to sports editor Lori Mateer of the Crookston Times, Olson said, "I'm so excited about this season. I've got such good talent and I'm going to be able to use it all."

Olson said his team has a "super" attitude heading into the 1979-80 season. "They know how to win, and they've got the winning attitude carrying over from the football season."

Eight members of the cage team played on the Pirates' Northwest Athletic Conference champion football team that reached the state Class A playoff semifinals this fall, including Tim Knotek who quarterbacked the football team and is recognized as the premeier basketball player in the area.

"Tim Knotek is one of the finest ball players in the northwest area," confirmed Olson. "He has a good head for both ends of the court."

Knotek will be complemented by three other returning lettermen, including Jerome Simmons, John Erie and Dave Hoganson. "Jerome Simmons and John Erie will have good years, I know they will," said Olson. "Erie will play at both ends of the court at a guard position, and I would say that he is probably my best shooter."

A major problem facing the Pirates, however, is size. "We're small," admitted Olson. "We've got two boys 6-3, then we drop to around 6-0 and 5-11. But I'm hoping that our speed can make up for our lack of height."

There are only five seniors on the team, with most of the ball players coming off an outstanding 17-1 sophomore team a year ago that lost only a two-point game to Moorhead.

Miscellaneous

+Jim Jensen, the 6-7 center who led Bemidji high school to the 1978 Region 8AA basketball championship, told Ralph Anderson of the Detroit Lakes Tribune he plans to enroll at St. Cloud State for the spring quarter and thus would be eligible for the 1980-81 basketball season for the Huskies. Heavily recruited after his fine prep career with the Lumberjacks, Jensen started school at South Dakota State and then dropped out to return home to Bemidji.

+For the first time in history the Roseau high school hockey team has tri-captains this winter in Mark Huglen, Andy Odegaard and Mark Tangen. Roseau coach Gary Hokanson looks for a balanced Section 8 field this winter, but told the Roseau Times-Region, "I'll put the finger on Warroad and Thief River Falls. Warroad has much the same team as last year—boys who have played together since the ninth grade. Thief River has the best goalie returning and can build around him." East Grand Forks and Crookston are also contenders, says Hokanson, "and then I wouldn't count out the Rams either," he said.

+Crookston coach Jim Sutherland, looking at the MJCAA Northwest Division basketball race, told Lori Mateer of the Crookston Times, "The team to beat this year is Northland, with UMC, Brainerd and Fergus Falls fighting it out for second." The Trojans were 6-15 a year ago, but Sutherland says, "I'm very optimistic about this season. If we can get off to a good start, I feel we can play with anybody in the conference." Center Tim Rolf, a former all-stater at McIntosh-Winger, is the top returning performer for the Trojans who have bolstered their backcourt with the addition of speedy freshman Keith Strickland of Grand Forks Red River.

+Senior Dave Swanberg, whose multiple roles on the East Grand Forks high school football team this fall saw him accumulate 1,010 yards total offense, was voted the team's most valuable player. A runningback, linebacker, kick returner and pass receiver, Swanberg was co-captain of the Green Wave team that finished 6-3, the best record for the school since a 6-2-1 season in 1971. "At the start of the year we said we could possibly be 7-2 if everything broke for us," said East Grand Forks coach Gary Berg. "But 6-3 is not bad. We were well pleased with the season." In 1980 the Green Wave will be led by tri-captains Jeff Strandell, Paul Hjelle and Dan Austin.

Roseau, TRF Rated Top Section 8 Hockey Teams

Defending champion Roseau Rams, as one coach says, "Have been there before," and were selected by Section 8 high school hockey coaches as the team to beat in a poll conducted by Frank Fee of KROX radio in Crookston.

The Rams barely squeaked by the Thief River Falls Prowlers. In fact, Thief River Falls had more first place votes, but Roseau collected more second place votes. Sixteen coaches were polled, with five points going for first, four for second, etc.

The outcome, with first place votes in parenthesis:

Roseau (6) 65 points; Thief River Falls (7) 62; Warroad (3) 45; East Grand Forks 26; Crookston Central 25; Fergus Falls 11; Bemidji 10; and Moorhead 2.

These were the only eight teams to receive votes for top five. A new team to Section 8 this year, Crosby-Ironton, doesn't play section teams, but will participate in the subsection tournament.

Some comments in the poll tell you how close it appears to be. One coach termed it, "a real dog fight." Another, says "a much better balance in region this year. All teams look to be improved. Should be a very interesting year."

Coach Gary Hokanson of the favored Rams points the finger at Warroad and Thief River Falls. Says Hokanson: "Warroad has been together now for four years and should be the team to beat, and Thief River Falls with Bill Jury in the nets will be right there too."

Coach Doug Hiney of Mount St. Benedict in Crookston says cross-town rival Crookston Central will be in it. "They have the best talent in the section, but need to find a goaltender. If they don't, Roseau, with their tradition and B-squad from last year, should take it." Hiney also thinks East Grand Forks could be the surprise team. "They have excellent team speed and a new coach bringing new attitudes."

Following is a capsule look at the teams:

Roseau — Lost nine seniors from last year's third place finish in state tournament. Strong defensively, with all-stater Mark Huglen returning. Up front Billy Yon returns, but goaltending question mark.

Thief River Falls — If the Prowlers can put the puck in the net they will be more than strong. All-section goalie Bill Jury (22 games, 2.7 goals against average and save percentage of 90) returns. Six of top eight scorers are back, including Wade Hoppe with 12 goals and Jim Thompson who had 10.

Warroad — All kinds of offense back for Warriors, but lack proven goaltending. Have some blue-chippers from Bantam team. Led by Eddie Christian, all-section last year when he had 38 goals and 22 assists. Appear to have more depth than ever before.

East Grand Forks — First year coach Tony Palmiscino welcomed 12 veterans and a powerful group off last years B-squad. A sleeping giant the last few years and many feel coaching change will wake them up. Led by Dave Swanberg (15 goals) and Tim Mishler (11 goals).

Crookston Central — Finished strong offensively last year and have eight of nine top scorers back, including sought-after Bob Clauson who finished fourth in Section 8 scoring with 28 goals and 23 assists, along with Tom Johannson (20-19—39). Coach feel one of best defensemen in state could be Pirates' Elliott Solheim. Need goalie.

Fergus Falls — Return only five of top 13. But goalie Mark Hedstrom is back (17 games, 3.4 goals against average) and fine defenseman Lance Nygaard (11-16—27). Strong program will help fill gaps.

Bemidji — Twelve vets back, including Steve Saceoman who had 24 points last year. Strong in nets with returner Jim Wizner and transfer Galen Nagle from Baudette (18 games, 4.3 goals against).

Moorhead — Lost only five off last year's team. Both goalies back: John Hajostek (12 games, 6.4 goals against) and Kreg Korinek (9, 6.0) Scoring should come from Shawn Anderson (13-17—30).

Detroit Lakes — New coach Duane Earnest has eight returning vets and at key positions. Second team all-section forward Bobby Landry is back (sixth in league in scoring). Goalie Mark Thorson also returns (10 games, 3.5 goals against average and save percentage of 90).

Mount St. Benedict — As always, depth a problem for Blue Wave. They do have second team all-section Matt Baab, a four-year starter, at defense. Top scoring line returns intact and sophomore goal tending sensation Jon Brekken is on hand.

Alexandria — Goalie Robbie Nyvold is back (19 games, 4.9 goals against average).

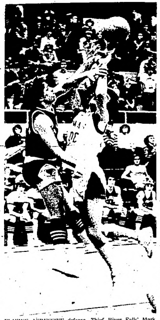
Brainerd — Lost top goalie, but have top scorer Mike Doran back (12 goals).

Lake of the Woods — Both goalies transferred, eight players ineligible. Rely on Paul Hanson for scoring punch (15-13—28 points).

Hallock — First year coach Jon Bittner (at East Grand Forks, last year) greeted only eight seniors. Nathan Gillie led returners with goals with only four.

Red Lake Falls — Gone is French Connection Line (accounted for over 90 goals). Inexperienced, but have some depth. Good goaltending with Mark Schmitz. Jay Martell is top scorer returning (10 goals).

Indus — Lost only two players from last year's 1-16 team. Should improve. Steve Dobbs (11 goals) is top scorer back.



PLAYING AGRESSIVE defense, Thief River Falls' Mark Schmitke batted the ball away from Roseau forward Lu Vern Wicklander in the second half of Friday's high school basketball game played here. However, Schmitke was a little too aggressive on the play and was called for a personal foul—one of 28 infractions called against the Prowlers who still managed to post an easy 67-49 win over the Rams in the 1979-80 season opener for both ball clubs.

Prowlers Win Basketball Opener 67-49 . . .

Lincoln Defense Shuts Down Roseau Offense

Limiting Roseau to just 26 points through three full quarters, the Lincoln high school basketball team opened its 1979-80 season Friday with a surprisingly easy 67-49 victory over the Rams, considered one of the better Class A teams in northwestern Minnesota this winter.

"Defense won the game for us," pointed out Thief River Falls coach Glen Peters. "The kids have a lot of pride in their defense, and they concentrated on that. We took their offense away from them."

It was close for only 76 seconds when the visiting Rams opened with a 3-2 edge. The Prowlers then scored eight straight points and outscored Roseau 17-2 the rest of the quarter for a 19-5 bulge at the first stop. The lead went to 37-17 at halftime and expanded to a yawn-producing 51-26 after three quarters.

"It was a good effort on the part of our kids," mentioned Peters who found a great deal of satisfaction in the Prowlers' play for the first quarter and a half before fouls forced line-up changes. "They all played well, really," he said.

It wasn't particularly pretty, as witnessed by 47 fouls, 68 free throw attempts and 44 turnovers.

Co-captains Kyle Hams and Todd Young led the Prowlers with 13 and 11 points, respectively. Loren Thacker, a 6-5 forward, scored 12 points for the Rams.

Thief River Falls shot 48 per cent from the field for the game, hitting 25 of 52 shots. Roseau finished with just a 33 per cent mark on a 17-for-51 effort. The Prowlers made 17 of 29 free throw attempts while the Rams sank only 15 of 39 chances. Thief River Falls finished with an ever so slight 28-27 rebound edge while the Rams did likewise in the turnover department, 23-21.

It was the first Thief River Falls season opening win over Roseau since the 1975-76 season. "They wanted that first game this year and they went out and got it," mentioned Peters.

The Prowlers play at Grafton Tuesday before returning home to host Kennedy Friday. Both games start at 7:30 p.m.

EGF 1-0 Jamboree Winner Over TRF

Annual Section 8 high school hockey jamboree was played Saturday at East Grand Forks as Moorhead decisioned Crookston Mount St. Benedict 2-0, Crookston Central doubled Warroad 4-2, Roseau edged Bemidji 2-1 and East Grand Forks shut out Thief River Falls 1-0 in games consisting of two 11-minute periods.

"We played very poorly," said Thief River Falls coach Wendell Grand whose Prowlers will officially open their 1979-80 season Saturday against Mount St. Benedict in the sports arena. "Of the eight teams at the jamboree the only teams who didn't score a goal were Mount St. Benedict and us," mentioned Grand. "It should make for an interesting game Saturday."

"The team that looked the best that particular day," said Grand of the jamboree, "was Crookston Central. They moved the puck very well."

Brenda Lund Places Fourth In State Meet Diving Competition

Brenda Lund

Making her fourth straight state meet appearance, Lincoln high school junior Brenda Lund reached an athletic milestone with a lofty fourth place finish in the diving competition of the 1979 Minnesota state high school girls swimming and diving championships held Friday and Saturday in the Cooke Hall pool on the University of Minnesota campus in Minneapolis.

Lund scored 367.40 points on her 11 state meet dives, placing fourth in the highly skilled field behind only Kelly Johnson of Irondale with a meet record 471.15 points, Kim Christopherson of Cooper 393.20 and Tracie Johnson of Irondale 372.75.

"We're extremely happy," said Thief River Falls coach John Hustad. "We knew she had that kind of ability, but there's so much involved in diving where the opinions of the judges decides everything."

"Brenda dove really well. She dove with desire and confidence. And when her concentration is there, very few people can beat her," mentioned Hustad. "She had a couple of dives that were shaky, but she also had a couple of other dives that were fantastic. I'd say she had concentration on nine of her 11 dives, but then, nobody can hit all 11 dives. And on those other two, she still managed to muscle her way through them. When she did miss a dive she just blocked it out and came right back with a good dive."

Lund did indeed have some fine dives, with a 48.8 and a 48.0 ranking as the third and fourth highest scoring dives in the two-day meet that featured 44 divers.

Cuts were made after three dives when Lund ranked third; after five dives when she slipped to ninth; and after eight dives when she again climbed to third for the Saturday finals.

It wasn't the first time Lund made the elite state meet finals. She stunned most observers with a sixth place state meet finish as an eighth grader. She followed with Section 3 diving titles in 1977 and 1978, but never made her way back to the top at the state level.

"Those next two years were learning experiences," pointed out Hustad. "As a freshmen we set up her dives wrong — too little difficulty in the beginning. As a sophomore she just didn't have the concentration. This year she wanted to place in the top 12."

She did, finishing only behind the likes of Kelly Johnson, a sophomore who is a year-round competitor who competed in the Can-Am games at Mexico City in 1976, dove the past two years in the Junior Olympics at Omaha, Neb. and participated in the AAU senior women's meet at Houston, Texas.

"I think Brenda finished about where she should have," acknowledged Hustad. "And I don't think there's any reason why she can't be in the same position again next year."

However, success one year doesn't guarantee continued success, as Lund discovered in the past and as Joan Bastien of St. Cloud Apollo found out this year as the defending state diving champion failed to reach the finals this time.

Lindbergh won the state team title Saturday with 136 points. Jefferson was a distant second with 79, followed by Richfield with 67. Lund provided Thief River Falls with 11 points and a 27th place position among the 46 teams scoring at the state meet.

Lund was also a member of Thief River Falls' 400-yard freestyle relay team that made a state meet appearance. But Kathy Dillon, Joan Glauque, Johanna Desrocher and Lund did not swim well, finishing with a 4:08.59 in the prelims. Richfield won the event in a record 3:40.99. Lund was the meet's only competitor entered in both the diving and swimming end of things, and the Prowlers were without sprint ace Betsie Hallstrom who was unable to swim after being involved in a car accident

Nordics Lose To Argyle 54-43

Cold shooting, a definite factor in a season-opening 49-37 loss to Karlstad earlier in the week, plagued the Marshall County Central high school basketball team again Friday as the Nordics shot just 29 per cent from the field in a 54-43 loss to Argyle.

"The difference was the shooting percentages," mentioned Marshall County Central coach Ron Ueland. Argyle was 22-for-52 from the field for 42 per cent while the Nordics hit just 18 of 62 shots. "We've just got to start shooting better."

Richard Dufault, Randy Ness and Greg Lubarski all scored 12 points for the Eagles who limited the host Nordics to just 23 points through three quarters for a 38-23 cushion heading into the final eight minutes.

Marshall County Central held a slight 30-29 rebound edge and the turnovers were even at 20 apiece as both teams pressed. But the difference, pointed out Ueland, was that Argyle turned several Marshall County Central turnovers into points while the Nordics failed to capitalize on their opportunities.

Badger will visit Newfolden Tuesday.

Basketball JV 49-40 Winner Over Roseau

A big lead almost disappeared Friday before the Lincoln high school junior varsity basketball team finished with a 49-40 season-opening victory over Roseau.

Roseau rallied to within 43-40 with 4:12 remaining in the fourth quarter to force the reentry of several Thief River Falls starters. Still, the score remained unchanged until David Kays scored on a short base line jumper with 1:18 left. Kent Kainz put in a rebound with 50 seconds to go for a 47-40 edge and Hal Swanson finished it with a fast break lay-up with 32 seconds on the clock.

Thief River Falls led 27-18 at halftime and had a 39-29 third quarter advantage. The two teams played to a 12-12 first quarter draw.

Roger Lund of Roseau was the game's only double figure scorer, finishing with 11 points. Mark Lundin's seven points led Thief River Falls' spread-out scoring.

Skippers 3-0 After Beating Warriors 65-51

Middle River ran its record to 3-0 Friday with a 65-51 high school basketball win at Warroad, but Skippers coach Eldon Sparby was far from satisfied.

"Our defense was fair, but our offense was just pathetic," said Sparby whose team built quarter leads of 16-10, 29-19 and 43-37.

A trio of Middle River scorers reached double figures as Scott McKeever collected 13 points, Jon Newmann 12 and DelRay Ness 11. John Johnson led the Warriors with 13 points.

Middle River will be at Grygla Friday.

earlier in the week. Hallstrom also forfeited an opportunity to swim the 50-yard freestyle.

Sophomore Lisa Desrocher joined Lund in the diving portion of the meet, surviving one cut and finishing 23rd overall with 140.9 points on five dives.

"I was pleased. I thought Lisa dove well," praised Hustad.

Besides Lund, the only other Section 3 swimmer earning a spot in the top six state meet finalists was Fergus Falls' Barb Hefte with a 55.6 in the 100-yard freestyle.

Ski Workshop Is Planned For Roseau

A cross country skiing workshop, sponsored by the Agassiz Environmental Education Council, has been planned for Saturday beginning at 10 a.m. at the D & E Sports Shop in Roseau.

Geared for individuals who are interested in learning the fundamentals of the sport, the workshop will include a morning session on how to select and care for skiing equipment and an afternoon session demonstrating basic skiing at the Roseau city park. This will include a tour for those participants with skis.

Those who own or who can borrow or rent skis are urged to bring them along for this afternoon session. The workshop is free of charge.

To aid in planning for the event, interested individuals are urged to contact D & E Sports at 463-1074.

THIEF RIVER FALLS center Todd Young went up for a short jump shot over Roseau defender Loren Thacker (52) during the first half of Friday's season-opening high school basketball game. Young scored 11 points in the Prowlers' 67-49 win over the Rams in the Lincoln gym.

Harris Leads Northmen Past NCC Alumni 102-85

Terry Harris, a 6-5 freshman from Inkster, Mich., made an impressive Northland community college basketball debut Saturday by scoring 25 points, pulling down 22 rebounds and blocking six shots as the Northmen outscored an Alumni squad 102-85.

Harris had 17 points by halftime when Northland owned a 53-40 lead, thanks to a brief outside shooting blitz by freshman guard Daryl Robinson who hit four long jump shots in the final minutes of the first half.

Northland led 77-61 at the 10-minute mark of the second half, but the 13-member Alumni squad stayed close, trailing just 89-79 with 3:32 remaining.

Harris put the Northmen at the 100-point mark at 100-85 with a fast break dunk with just 20 seconds to go and freshman Lyndell Knight completed the scoring with a tip-in at the buzzer.

No less than six Northmen reached double figures. The alumni had half that many, with guard Willie Bayne (1971-73) collecting 18 points on an eye-opening 9-for-12 shooting night from long range. Jon Nelson (1977-79) finished with 17 points, Doug Engelman (1977-79) 16 and Dave Kjos (1973-74) 12.

"We made a lot of mistakes, but that's why we played this game," mentioned Northland coach Chet Engelman. "I think we'll be all right when we get a few things straightened out."

Thief River Falls Times sports editor Mike Lundgren coached the Alumni.

Northland shot 49 per cent from the field, hitting 46 of 93 shots. The Alumni connected on 38 of 93 attempts for 41 per cent. The Northmen were 10-for-19 at the free throw line where the Alumni were just 9-for-22.

A weekend trip to Winnipeg awaits the Northmen who will try to defend their Red River community college invitational tournament title Friday and Saturday.

Permit Needed For Aeration Unit In Lake

A permit is required from the Department of Natural Resources before installing an aeration device in public waters.

The reminder was issued by the DNR in response to the increasing interest in the devices shown by the public and the fact that many persons do not know of the permit requirement.

Aeration units are installed in shallow lakes to add oxygen to the water so as to prevent fish kills during the winter months when the lakes are frozen over.

Reason for the permit requirement is to allow the DNR to determine whether the installation will adversely affect fish populations or create a safety hazard.

Those wishing to install aeration devices should contact their local fisheries headquarters for further information.

Sno Pro Has Weekend Start In Grand Forks

Steve Thorsen, Jim Dimmerman and Jacques Villeneuve were winners Sunday as the 1979-80 Sno Pro professional snowmobile racing season got underway in Grand Forks, N.D.

Thorsen, driving an Arctic Cat, won the 340 race, followed by Brad Hulings on a Scorpion and Bob Elsner of Team Arctic.

Dimmerman and Elsner gave Team Arctic a 1-2 finish in the 440 event, with Hulings placing third.

Villeneuve drove a Ski-Doo to first place in the 340X final, followed by Hulings and Thorsen.

Next stop on the Sno Pro circuit is this weekend at Kinross, Mich.

Cards Open With 37-32 Win Thursday

Diane Fisher and Mary Westlake combined for 28 points Thursday to lead Plummer to a season-opening 37-32 girls high school basketball win over Mount St. Benedict in Crookston.

Fisher scored 15 points and matched that with 15 rebounds while Westlake collected 13 points for the Cardinals who overcame a 12-7 first quarter deficit to take a 21-16 halftime lead in the loosely played contest.

Fisher, beginning her fourth quarter as a starter for the Cardinals, increased her career point total to 859. Plummer coach Rick Koivisto ranks the 5-7 senior among the best players in the area. "She does it all for us," he said. "She's a good outside shot; she can drive; she can jump; she brings the ball downcourt against a press . . ."

Westlake, a junior varsity performer a year ago, and Sandy Zimpel should provide Fisher with support this winter, but Koivisto admitted, "I'm having more trouble than I thought I would replacing the two girls we lost through graduation—Melanie Skjerven and Rebecca Sorenson." Sorenson quarterbacked the club last year and Kovisto is looking for that type of leader now.

Northwomen To Open Saturday

College basketball season begins Saturday for coach Deb Jacobson's Northland community college women who will play a 6:30 p.m. game at Bottineau, N.D.

Jacobson, whose Northwomen finished 4-16 in 1978-79 after a Northwest Division pennant season a year earlier, says the team has "looked good" in practice, but warns, "I'm sure everybody else is probably improved, too."

Northland's 12-member team includes four returning sophomores: Julie Anderson, East Grand Forks; Arlene Knutson, Newfolden; Karen Sparby, Grygla; and Chris Charlebois, Minot, N.D.

Newcomers include sophomore Carrie Sollom, Thief River Falls; freshmen Julie Easton, Thief River Falls; Angie Sinn, Thief River Falls; Melanie Skjerven, Plummer; Jean Stukel, Warroad; and Jacki Nelson, Hallock; along with area vocational-technical school students Tracy Nelson, Middle River; and Patty Hammer, Badger.

"We're taller than we have been in the past, but we're still short," quipped Jacobson. "We hope to be able to play good defense—that's one of our goals."

Northland will participate in a tournament at Lake Region junior college in Devils Lake, N.D. Dec. 14-15 before opening its home season schedule Fri., Dec. 21, against Willmar.

NDSU Will Host Girls Cage Clinic

A girls' basketball clinic, featuring members of the Minnesota Fillies women's professional basketball team, will be held at North Dakota State University Saturday. Girls in grades four through twelve are invited to attend the clinic free of charge.

Fillies head coach Terry Kunze, a former Minnesota Gopher cager and professional basketball player, will be on hand with two members of the Minnesota Fillies team to provide clinic instruction. Assisting NDSU coach Amy Ruley and the Bison women's basketball team with the clinic will be Fillies all-star forward Marguerite Keeley, who entered the pro ranks from Wichita State University, and native Minnesotan Sue Wahl-Bye, a former St. Cloud State University cager.

Morning session of the clinic, for girls in grades four through six, will begin at 9 a.m. Seventh through twelve grade girls will participate in an afternoon session from 1 to 3:30 p.m. The clinic will give instruction in fundamental basketball skills, and attention will also be given to offensive and defensive strategies. The clinic has been sanctioned and approved by both the North Dakota and Minnesota high school league associations.

Girls who wish to register for the clinic or who seek further information should contact Lynn Dorn, athletic director, at the new field house on the NDSU campus, phone 237-7807.

Tests Match Steel, Lead Shot Hunters

A recent field test of lead and steel shot ammunition has found that, contrary to popular belief, steel shot loads used in hunting geese perform about the same as lead.

The test, however, also found that the opinions of the participating hunters did not reflect the actual performance of the ammunition. Hunters had a lower opinion of steel shot than lead, even though test results showed steel and lead loads to be very similar at all ranges.

Conducted by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service with the assistance of the Oregon Institute of Technology, the test also demonstrated that marksmanship and the range at which shots are fired are far more important factors in bagging geese than the type of ammunition used.

The test was conducted under normal hunting conditions at Tule Lake national wildlife refuge, California, during the hunting seasons of 1977 and 1978. Over 2,000 hunters voluntarily participated in the test, firing 32,000 shells and bagging 4,209 white-fronted, snow and cackling geese. Twelve-gauge, one and half ounce lead loads in shot sizes No. 4, 2 and BB were compared to 12-gauge, one and an eighth ounce steel loads in shot sizes No. 2, 1 and BB.

There were no significant differences between lead and steel in bagging or crippling geese. In fact, no significant differences could be detected in the performance of any of the six loads tested. The performance of lead and steel was very similar at all shooting distances.

Combining all six loads, the hunters bagged only six geese per 100 shots fired at ranges greater than 50 yards. They bagged 15 geese per 100 shots fired at 30 and 50 yards, and 27 geese per 100 shots fired at less than 30 yards. The average shooting distance was 50 yards.

Although most hunters believe that more birds are crippled at greater shooting distances, the Tule Lake tests did not conform this. Instead, the highest crippling rate occurred between 30 and 50 yards where nine geese were crippled per 100 shots fired.

BSU Stages Cross Country Ski Clinics

While cross-country skiing for recreation is becoming one of the most popular winter family events in Minnesota, cross-country ski racing is certainly headed for the top of the family sports competition list.

That's right — the family competition list. Almost all cross-country ski races held in Minnesota each year include entry classes from the youngest children who ski to senior citizens working on their second life.

Most families who ski find that a weekend of recreation and competitive skiing combined is a fine outing. It becomes even more fun if there are some trophies or ribbons to admire on the homeward trip.

Bemidji State University's Bald Eagle Center can help assure beginning and advanced skiers of at least a fair shot at winning a race. In December, January and February the center, located in the heart of the Chippewa national forest near Cass Lake, will offer weekend workshops in cross country ski racing technique for all ages.

Basic topics will include equipment updates, waxing techniques, development of a diagonal stride, double poling techniques, step turns, skate turns, hill climbing, downhill skills, conditioning, race strategies, diet and snow hydrology.

Students can stay at the Bald Eagle Center for the weekends for $45, including food. The workshop fee alone is $27. The center has miles of groomed trails and the workshops will also utilize the ski racing area at Bueno Vista.

The weekends are December 28-30, January 11-13 and February 8-10. For more information contact the Bald Eagle Outdoor Learning Center, Cass Lake, MN 56633. Phone 665-2241.

1980 Fishing Seasons Will Open May 17

Minnesota's summer fishing season on walleyes, northern pike and muskellunge will open Sat., May 17, it was announced by Charles Burrows, director of fish and wildlife for the Department of Natural Resources.

Black bass season will open in most of the state on Sat., May 31, but will open in northeastern Minnesota May 17.

Limits on walleye and bass will be six, northern pike three and muskellunge one.

Stream trout and splake season in streams tributary to Lake Superior (above the posted boundaries) will open Sat., April 12. Steams in the counties of Fillmore, Goodhue, Houston, Mower, Olmsted, Wabasha, Winona, Yellow Medicine, Lyon, Redwood and Cottonwood will open March 1.

In all other streams of the state the stream trout season will open April 12.

Following are some changes that will be noted from past years when copies of the 1980 fishing regulations are printed and distributed to license agents, said Burrows:

+Winter angling season for lake trout and stream trout (in lakes only) will be extended in 1980 to a three month season on lakes within the Boundary Waters Canoe Area wilderness. The decision to increase the winter season from two to three months follwed public meetings and is a consequence of a decline in lake trout anglers during winter months due to the severe reduction in use of snowmobiles under new federal regulations of the BWCAW. For lakes entirely within the BWCAW the winter angling season will open Dec. 29, 1979 and close March 31, 1980.

+Two-month winter angling season for lakes outside or partly outside of the BWCAW (including Alton, Snowbank, Seagull, Magnetic, Clearwater and Ram Lakes) was also changed to open and close two weeks later than last winter. These lakes will open Jan. 12, 1980 (not Dec. 29 as shown in the 1979 fishing regulations) and will close on March 15.

+Summer angling season (May 17 to Sept. 30) and the limit of three lake trout and five steam trout in lakes is similar to 1979.

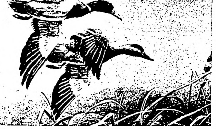
(The above changes also include all Minnesota-Canadian border waters).

+March 1 opening for taking of stream trout will now apply to the counties of Cottonwood, Lyon, Redwood and Yellow Medicine as well as counties in southeastern Minnesota. The earlier opening will allow a better catch of stocked trout, which in some spring suffer natural losses from highwater.

+Winter gamefish season on South Dakota and North Dakota boundary waters will extend through Feb. 29 rather than Feb. 28 as listed in 1979 fishing regulations.

+Recent legislation removed the perch from the lowly definition as a "rouch fish" and it now is a protected species. This means that it no longer is classed as rough fish or minnow and the laws applying to the taking of rough fish or minnows no longer apply to the perch.

+Legislature changed the season for taking of rough fish by spearing, archery and dip netting. It will now open May 1 rather than the opening date of the game fish angling season as was the case in 1979.



AN ACRYLIC PAINTING of a pair of mallard ducks alighting over a foreground of reeds was selected on the winner in the 1980-81 federal duck stamp competition. The painting, done by Richard W. Plasschaert, a Waseca printer, won out over a record 1,362 other entries in the national art contest. The design will be reporduced on next year's migratory bird hunting and conservation stamp which must be purchased by waterfowl hunters 16 years of age or older. The artist chose a simple design against a background of medium-blue sky for his entry. "I wanted it simple, thinking that it would have the best chance to win. I chose mallards because they are very common," Plasschaert said. Interior Department encourages non-hunters who also enjoy wildlife through photography, bird watching and other activities to contribute to the conservation effort by buying a stamp. Next year's $7.50 issue will go on sale at post offices on July 1, 1980.

Experimental Lakes

Here is a list of lakes managed primarily for muskellunge where spearing is prohibited:

Beltrami county — Big Lake; Cass county — Baby, Howard and Wabedo lakes; Chisago county — Rush lake; Douglas county — Lobster lake; Hennepin county — Lake Independence; Hubbard county — Bad Axe, Big Mantrap, Big Sand, Little Sand, Spider and Stocking lakes; Itasca county — Deer, Moose, Little Moose, North Star, Pug Hole and Spider lakes; Otter Tail county — West Battle lake; Pine county — Cross lake, Snake River flowage and Pokegama lake; Rice county — French lake; Wright county — Sugar Lake.

House Rules

If you have a dark house, fish house or a shelter of any kind on the ice on any waters you must remember to have your name and address plainly and legibly printed on the outside in letters and figures at least three inches in height. A metal tag, furnished with the license, must be attached to the exterior side of the door, not more than six inches below the top of the door. When in use, the shelter must be so constructed that the door can be opened from the outside at all times. It is unlawful to have a spear inside a dark house when you are angling.

Game Warden

A very important man in the outdoor picture is the game warden or conservation officer. What he does in his area very often determines the standing of the DNR in the area he serves. One of the most important questions he asks is "May I See your license, please?"

The financial foundation of the DNR rests upon the power of the state to impose the purchase of a license for any citizen who would hunt and fish. The license money is dedicated to game and fish. It is the game warden asking the question about the license that makes secure the flow of money into the game and fish funds. This is one of his most important duties.

Blackduck Report

Orin Wolden of Wolden's Service at Blackduck was happy with the deer season just ended.

"After a slow opener, possibly attributable to unseasonably warm weather, the 1979 deer season closed with a flourish for us. Even now after the season is closed many report seeing big bucks which is rather unusual," he said.

Final registration for the year was 312 bucks and 82 antlerless deer for a total of 394 deer registered during the 1979 rifle season. This compares with last year's 354 bucks and 16 antlerless for a total of 370 deer registered during the 1978 season. The bucks were in good shape with the majority of the kill being the 1½-year-olds. Quite a few big bucks were registered during the second and last weekend indicating the rut was not during the early part of the season.

Attention is now diverted to ice fishing with fair reports coming from Upper Red Lake and Blackduck Lake. Many are also enjoying good grouse hunting.

Grand Rapids

Don Wendt of Rapids Tackle writes, "Our deer hunting was only average. We were lucky to have had tracking snow for the opener, but the bucks weren't in rut the first week. Most of the hunters I have talked to saw lots of doe and fawns but few bucks. In fact it seems like this is one of our poorer years."

Liars Contest

The 1979 Minnesota Outdoors liars contest has two more months to go.

A sportsman's knife has been added to the jackpot of prizes.

Thin Ice Poses Early Winter Safety Hazard

Drops in the temperature may cause Minnesota lakes to begin to freeze, but the Minnesota safety council warns that ice won't be thick enough for travel for some time.

The safety council offers the following guidelines to help you judge whether ice is sufficiently thick:

Two inches of ice are needed to support one person walking.

Three inches of ice will support a group of people walking single file, if spread out.

Four inches of ice are sufficient for fishing on foot.

Five inches of ice are needed to support the weight of a snowmobile and rider.

Seven and one-half inches of ice will support a two-ton auto.

The safety council reminds you that a snow cover on lakes acts as an insulation for water, slowing down freezing. Test the thickness of ice before venturing onto a lake to be sure that it is frozen over the entire surface. Be alert to patches of thin ice and to sections of the lake that have been covered with snow.

Be sure to remind children to wait until lakes have developed a thick cover of ice before skating, playing broomball or other ice-surface games. Ask them to check with you before stepping out onto Minnesota's frozen lakes.

21 Snowmobile Clubs Plan MS Marathon

Plans for marathon rides for MS were announced today by twenty-one snowmobile clubs from Minnesota. Club members will solicit pledge donations on a per-mile basis. Proceeds from the rides will go toward research into the cause and cure of multiple sclerosis. MS, or multiple sclerosis, is the most common of the central nervous system diseases among young adults between the ages of 20 and 40. There is no known cause or cure.

Minnesota has the second highest incidence of MS in the nation.

The Fridley Sno-snoopers, who have a nine year tradition for riding for health charities, plan a fifty mile MS ride from Ham lake to Forest lake on January 26th.

On January 20th, the South Shore Sno skippers of Excelsior will ride 100 miles for MS between Excelsior and Lester Prairie.

Other clubs that have decided to ride for MS this year, include the Duluth Sno saints, Scenic City Sno-drifters and Duluth driftoppers, New Prague Sno drifers, Stillwater Sno club, Monty Sno-busters, and St. Martin Sno club, the Turtle patrol, Eagle Lake Snowmobile Sno-blazers, and Prior Lake Sno club will also ride for MS this year.

More rides for MS are planned by Elk Lake Easy riders, Northwest trails, Spamtown Sno-drifters, Sno ghosts of St. Francis, Chaska Sno-hawks, Woodbury Winter wonders, Hamel Sno runners, and Plymouth polars.

Three representatives from each of these clubs will attend the December 9th Vikings Kickoff celebration.

Former DNR Ass't. Named to FWS Post

Richard J. Myshak — former assistant commissioner of Minnesota's Department of Natural Resources, and most recently deputy assistant secretary of the Interior for fish and wildlife and parks — has been named associate director-wildlife resources of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

In his new position, Myshak, 51, will be responsible for managing the program areas of the Fish and Wildlife Service with the most employees, the broadest array of missions, and over half of the agency's budget. He will oversee and set policy for the operation of 393 national wildlife refuges, a nationwide network of wildlife interpretation specialists, law enforcement officers and wildlife inspectors, the management of migratory birds, marine mammals, other nonendangered mammals and nonmigratory birds, animal damage control and land acquisitions by the service.

"Dick Myshak's demonstrated managerial skills and his ability to deal effectively with people and with sensitive issues make him an outstanding choice for one of the key leadership posts in the service," said director Lynn A. Greenwalt in announcing the appointment. "I welcome the fresh perspective and innovative ideas he will bring to a demanding assignment."

As deputy to assistant secretary Robert L. Herbst, Myshak has directed major departmental policy studies of some of the issues he will now be responsible for; such as animal damage control wildlife refuges, national wildlife policy, organization and management of the service, and the Mississippi Flyway Canada goose program. Other policy studies he directed included the national park fisheries study (conducted by the service), Big Cypress preserve, national fisheries recognition system and the Everglades fisheries program. He represented the assistant secretary in decision meetings on outer continental shelf oil and gas leasing, coal policies, water policies and on the Great Lakes fisheries commission. He also directed the environmental review process.

A noted environmental educator and long-time resident of Minnesota until he came to Washington in 1977, Myshak has held major conservation positions in the private, academic, and government sectors. He served as assistant commissioner for planning and environmental planning and protection for the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources, and as executive director of the Minnesota environmental sciences foundation, where his successful efforts to expand the state's junior college system won him an "outstanding citizen" award from the Minnesota community of Brooklyn Park. During this time, he and Herbst were instrumental in getting the state legislature to pass the first environmental education act in the country. His earlier positions were as administrative and science assistant to the Director of the University of Minnesota school of mathematics and science teaching project and field secretary of the Minnesota academy of science.

Myshak earned a bachelor's degree in forest management with a minor in fish and wildlife management from the University of Minnesota, and a bachelor's and master's degree in science education and biology from Mankato State. He also has taken graduate studies in radiation biology and field biology at the University of Montana. He began his professional career as a general science teacher in the Aurora-Hoyt Lakes public schools, progressing to chairman of the science departments of the Walnut Grove and later the Mankato school systems.

Myshak is president of the conservation education association, past president of the Minnesota academy of science and a life member of the national education association. He was vice-chairman of the first national advisory committee to the U.S. office of education on environmental education and served on similar committees for the Minnesota department of education. He was the alternate U.S. representative to an international council on UNESCO's "Man and the Biosphere" and is a member of the executive committee of that program's directorate.

The new associate director has received awards from the Izaak Walton League, the National Aeronautical Space Administration (NASA) and other organizations for his community, science, and environmental education activities. He has edited and contributed to several professional and scientific journals and presented the first environmental education paper in an international forum at Kiel, West Germany, in 1970. He has written more than 150 instructional materials on environmental education, including the first ever prepared for the Fish and Wildlife Service. These materials were used at Sherburne national wildlife refuge, then at other refuges, and by hundreds of schools and universities across the country and abroad.

THE ARMY WILL HELP YOU SAVE $14,100 TO $17,100 FOR COLLEGE

In the Army, you can take advantage of the generous veterans' educational assistance program (VEAP, for short).

THE PROGRAM WORKS LIKE THIS:

You can enroll in VEAP when you join the Army. You contribute between $50 and $75 of your pay each month. The Government then matches your savings two-for-one.

If you enlist for 2 years — you accumulate up to $1,800 of your own savings plus as much as $3,600 in the government's matching funds. On top of this the Army adds an ADDITIONAL $2,000 EXTRA giving you a total of $7,400 for only 2 years service.

If you enlist for 3 years you could qualify for an ADDITIONAL $4,000 contributed to your funds. The total then: $12,100 for your education.

If you enlist for 4 years instead of just 3, you're eligible for up to $2,000 more (which means $6,000 added to the basic fund). The maximum total: $14,100 which can finance a lot of education.

The new programs together with existing Army cash bonuses of up to $3,000 for training in certain skill areas, make it possible to earn up to $17,100 in cash and educational bonuses.

ON GLARE ICE AT 25°F.

Pointing up the extreme hazard of driving on glare ice, these tests show that stopping on glare ice may take as much as nine times the normal, dry pavement distance. The tests also disclose that conventional snow tires are of no help in stopping on ice, while studded tires reduce braking distance by 19%, and reinforced tire chains by 50%.

Suggest Tips For Safety In Woodburning

Release issued today by city building inspector Robert Bregier, and by the Thief River Falls fire department, states safety information tips for homeowners regarding woodburning appliances.

Release followed city council discussion last Tuesday, in which it was mentioned that many residents are turning to woodburning devices as alternate heat sources to meet rising fuel costs. Information on proper installation should be obtained before a wood burning heating device is placed in a home, according to Bregier. And there are many who do not inquire about this information, he said.

First step involves looking for a listing label on the appliance. Label will include either U.L. (Underwriter Laboratories) or ICBO (International Conference of Building Officials) research committee. The listing label means that the appliance has been tested and accepted in accordance with nationally recognized standards of safety.

The appliance should be installed in accordance with the terms of the listing and the applicable life safety code provision for the appliance. Wood burning appliances installed in mobile homes must be specifically listed for use and installation in mobile homes.

All instructions should be carefully read and followed to make the consumer more knowledgeable of the appliance. Also, a periodic maintenance program for the appliance should be initiated and maintained. The chimney and smoke pipes should be cleaned regularly to remove creosote deposits.

Consumers should know how to react and know what to do should a fire occur. The fire department should be contacted for information on necessary fire extinguishing equipment and its proper use. Fire department phone number should be posted near the telephone.

Insurance companies should be contacted to make certain that policies cover woodburning appliances.

Any questions may be directed to the city building inspector at 681-2500.

STEAM RISES from this large dryer being utilized to dry sunflowers along highway one east of Thief River Falls. Sunflower growers were hard hit with a late and wet fall which left the crop saturated with moisture and impossible to store without artificial drying. The expensive drying process has been further complicated by short supply of fuels used to provide the heat for dryers.

Development of the sugarbeet, potato and sunflower industries are highlighted.

Tax Credits Explained For MN. Employers

Minnesota employers can cut the amount of federal taxes they pay by hiring certain workers, according to Secretary of Labor Ray Marshall.

A telephone call to the nearest local office of the Minnesota job service is all it takes to learn about jobs tax credits and get referrals of eligible jobseekers.

There are two tax credits:

—The targeted jobs tax credit (TJTC) applies to wages paid by taxpaying employers between January 1, 1979, and December 31, 1980, to certified employees hired from seven categories of jobseekers after September 26, 1978. Credit is 50 per cent of first-year wages up to $6,000 and 25 per cent of second-year wages up to $6,000 for each eligible employee.

The seven targeted groups are:

(1) Recipients of supplemental security income (SSI) payments;

(2) handicapped individuals referred from state vocational rehabilitation agencies and the Veterans administration;

(3) Youth, 18 through 24, in economically disadvantaged families, i.e., if income for the six months preceding the hiring date, annualized, is less than 70 per cent of the Bureau of labor statistics lower living standard;

(4) vietnam-era veterans under 35 who are economically disadvantaged;

(5) recipients of general assistance payments (state or locally financed welfare) for 30 or more days;

(6) Youth, 16 through 18, participating in an approved cooperative education program; and

(7) ex-convicts (convicted of a felony) who are economically disadvantaged and hired within five years of release from prison or date of conviction, whichever is later.

Work incentive (WIN) welfare tax credit is for employers who hire participants in the work incentive (WIN) program or recipients of aid to families with dependent children. More information on hiring these workers and claiming the WIN-Welfare tax credit can be obtained from local job service offices, or from local WIN or welfare offices.

Tax credits are administered by the U.S. Department of labor's employment and training administration, in cooperation with the Internal Revenue service, and with various other Federal agencies serving members of the targeted groups.

If for any reason employers cannot reach a local job service office or need additional information about the targeted jobs or WIN-Welfare tax credits, they may call:

—612-296-6415 for Minnesota job service tax credit information or —800-424-5194 (toll free), the national jobs tax credit hotline.

MSU Students Get Boost In Financial Aid

More than 3,500 Moorhead state university students will receive over $6 million in grants, scholarships or government-insured loans this year, a financial aid package involving more students and more money than ever before.

David Anderson, financial aid director at the university, said that money available to MSU students is up about $1.5 million over last year and as a result nearly 1,000 more students will receive aid this school year.

"Basically, more money is available because of a new federal law, the Middle income student assistance act, that went into effect this year," Anderson said. "It took all income ceilings off the interest benefits for federally guaranteed student loans and liberalized requirements for Basic educational opportunity grants, making both programs available to more students."

As a result, Anderson said, federally guaranteed loan money available to Moorhead state students went up from $1.2 million to $2 million this year and student applications jumped from 790 to 1,210.

BEOG funds went from $1.2 million to $2 million while student applications climbed from 1,460 to 2,230.

"Some students and their parents haven't had much success in applying for financial aid in the past," Anderson said. "But with the income ceiling taken off federal loans and grants and with the amount of money available, it would be a mistake not to apply now. "Nobody should assume ineligibility for student grants and loans. And it's never too late to apply."

Long lines will form on campus this week for disbursement of winter quarter checks. "We don't just run a disbursement office here though," Anderson said. Students can also receive counseling from us on how to manage their financial affairs and budget themselves through school."

Financial aid allotments going to Moorhead state students this week for just winter quarter payments (many students receive aid under more than one program, overlapping some of the numbers reported here) include the following:

+ 1,015 students will receive a total of $152,400 from state grant and scholarship programs funded through the Minnesota legislature. Scholarships will go to 451 students, totaling $65,660; grants are scheduled for 564 students, totaling $86,729.

+ 2,100 students will share $662,200 in federal basic educational opportunity grants, averaging $315 a student.

+ 414 students will share $92,900 in supplementary education opportunity grants, averaging $224 apiece. This money comes from the federal government, but is awarded to students selected and screened by Moorhead state.

+685 students will receive national direct student loans amounting to $165,200 and averaging $241 a student. These federally guaranteed loans are made through Moorhead state and are repayable to the university at three per cent interest. Payment of principal and the deferred interest begin as soon as the student graduates or leaves the university.

+ 320 students will share $35,975 in scholarship money administered through the MSU Foundation, a private, non-profit group supporting the university.

+ 1,214 students have made loans through commercial or agency lenders avounting to over $2 millionfor this school year, part of that payable winter quarter. These loans are federally insured.

In addition to these programs, Anderson said, about 790 students are expected to receive $250,000 under the federal and state work-study programs and a similar number of students are on the university's regular part-time payroll.

To help students understand the number of grants, scholarships, loans and work programs available for next year, the financial aid office will run a series of information sessions throughout the winter.

For more information about these sessions, contact the financial aid office at MSU.

"Everybody is Somebody in Thief River Falls"

Published Twice A Week

THIEF RIVER FALLS TIMES

Volume 68 (USPS 627-360) Thief River Falls, Pennington County, Minnesota Wednesday, December 5, 1979 Number 96

"A QUICK WAY to take it down," was the way construction foreman Mike Brown described the collapse of scaffolding and plastic sheeting Sunday evening at the Riverview Terrace apartment building being constructed in Thief River Falls. The structure which had been built to allow bricklayers to finish the southwest part of the building went down during strong winds between 8 and 10 p.m. Sunday. There were no injuries and no damage to the building, destined to be the tallest building in the city. Brown said workmen have been able to complete work necessary from the inside and on top of the building and that the scaffolding need not be replaced. He said the material has been moved to the northeast part of the structure and bricklaying there is underway today. Most of the plumbing and wiring has been roughed in, he said, and sheetrock should be going into place next week. Brown said the project is generally on schedule and the scaffold collapse caused no delay.

Begin Jury Selection In Paul Boman Murder Trial

First murder trial in Pennington county in the memory of local officials began Tuesday with the selection of jury members. Paul Walter Boman, 24, Thief River Falls, is charged with first degree murder in the June 11 shotgun slaying of Duane Morben, 30, also of Thief River Falls.

Morben was killed by a blast from a 12 gauge shotgun in his mobile home shortly before 3:30 a.m. on June 11 at Northwestern trailer court in this city. Boman was arrested about 8:30 a.m. the same morning by Thief River Falls police officers. He has been held at the Pennington county law enforcement center since that time.

A grand jury convened June 15 and the 22-member body returned an indictment of murder in the first degree after hearing five witnesses and deliberating less than an hour. A grand jury determines if there is probable cause a crime was committed and a trial should be held. It also selects the charge of an indictment is returned but makes no determination of guilt or innocence.

During Tuesday's initial session, five persons on the juror list were questioned with three seated and two dismissed. Seated on the jury were Mable Smith, 58, resident of 309½ LaBree av. N., Thief River Falls, a single laundry worker; Mrs. Esther Collins, 42, rural Thief River Falls, an assembly worker; and Clayton Molstad, 54, resident of 907 Knight av. N., Thief River Falls, a maintenance worker.

Dismissed were Waldemar Andor Levorson, 71, resident of 420 Crocker av. N. in Thief River Falls, a retired farmer; and Faron R. Olson, 23, rural Thief River Falls, a construction worker.

At the suggestion of Judge Warren Saetre yesterday morning, and in concurrence with attorneys involved, a list of 12 people was drawn from the jury list to remain available for immediate call. The remaining people on the list were allowed to return to their homes or employment subject to notification later in the day or the following day. Court reconvened at 9 a.m. today and questioning of prospective jurors resumed in the order of those jurors drawn Tuesday.

Representing Boman as defense attorneys are Douglas W. Thomson of St. Paul and Alex Frank Gallegos, also of the Twin Cities area. Thomson represented defendant Roger Caldwell in the highly-publicized trial following the murder of Elizabeth Congdon and her nurse in Duluth, and is considered one of the state's most prominent criminal attorneys.

Gallegos has represented Anthony Quevedo, who was charged with attempted murder in a stabbing incident and subsequently acquitted

Armed Robbery Suspect Enters Guilty Plea

Scott Everett Sherman of Thief River Falls entered a plea of guilty to a charge of aggravated robbery when he appeared Monday in Pennington county district court. Judge Warren Saetre accepted the plea and ordered a pre-sentence investigation.

Sherman, 20, was charged by Thief River Falls police in the armed robbery of Riverside grocery at 5:26 p.m. November 26. He was tracked to a house several blocks away by a police dog owned by Tom Wachsmuth of Greenbush, a Roseau county deputy sheriff.

Money taken in the robbery was recovered where the defendant had apparently discarded it on his flight from the store. It was in a paper bag. Also found by police were a parka worn by the thief and a .22 caliber revolver in the parka pocket.

Police began tracking the robber following a call from Gwen Brooten, store owner, who was in the back room of the store when the robbery occurred. Use of Deputy Wachsmuth's tracking dog confirmed their suspicions of where the tracks led.

While the pre-sentence investigation is being conducted, Sherman remains in custody at the Pennington county law enforcement center under $25,000 bond. He was represented by public defender John Roue of Fosston.

Sentencing of two men also took place at the district court session Monday. Thomas L. Rewertz of Thief River Falls, who had pled guilty to a charge of theft by check October 30, was sentenced to five years in the custody of the commissioner of corrections, with execution of the sentence stayed for five years on conditions. He is serve one year in the county law enforcement center under the Huber law, make restitution of $1,074 and be on probation for the term of the five-year sentence.

William Walter O'Day of Chaska, who pled guilty on September 17 to a charge of theft by flase representation, was committed to the custody of the commissioner of corrections for 10 years with the sentence stayed for an indeterminate period of time or until discharged. He was also ordered to make restitution and to be placed on probation.

O'Day was charged in the illegal use of $10,000 in funds placed with him as a stock broker handling accounts of the Norseman Investment club of Thief River Falls, diverting the money for his own use.

Local AVTI Is Above State's Growth Average

Enrollment is up slightly at vocational-technical institutes in Minnesota, according to figures from the state department of education.

Thief River Falls AVTI showed an increase from 413 a year ago to 447 in October of this year for an increase of 34 students or 8.2 per cent. The increase in number of students was eighth highest among the 33 schools in the state and seventh highest in percentage increase.

Largest number of students gained from 1978 to 1979 was St. Paul with growth from 2,008 to 2,225 or 10.8 per cent. Highest percentage gain was Eveleth with an increase from 297 to 373 for 25.6 per cent. Twelve of the institutes had enrollment declines from 1978 to 1979.

Around the area, Bemidji AVTI gained 31 students from 394 to 425 for a 7.9 per cent increase; East Grand Forks grew from 418 to 442 for a gain of 24 students and 5.7 per-cent increase; and Detroit Lakes increased 23 students from 551 to 574 for a 4.2 per cent increase.

Fulltime day programs in October enrolled 27,596 students statewide, an increase of 305 over October 1978 figures at the 33 public vocational-technical institutes in Minnesota. This is a 1.1 per cent net increase.

"While the number of high school students continues to decrease, the number of those students choosing to attend a vocational technical institute goes up," said Robert P. Van Tries, assistant commissioner of vocational-technical education for the department. "We attribute the increase partially to the relatively large number of vo-tech students above age 22."

Twenty of the 33 institutes reported increases ranging from two to 25 per cent in their enrollment counts, which were made October 1. Minneapolis gained 1.9 per cent from 1,063 to 1,083.

Following UFO Incident ....

No Answers Found In Study Of Deputy's Car

Analysis of damaged objects on a Marshall county sheriff's department deputy's car has revealed no new answers to the mystery of what did the damage, according to the recent article in the Warren Sheaf. The car was struck by an unidentified object in western Marshall county August 27 and the incident was given national attention by the media.

The Sheaf published a report by Roland D. Wardell of Edina, a registered professional metallurgical engineer and supervisor in the Honeywell metal-lurgical and chemical laboratories for 23 years. The Sheaf's account of the report follows:

At the end of September, the following samples were submitted to Mr. Wardell:

Top Antenna — The antenna from the roof mounting on the car.

Rear Antenna — The antenna from the trunk lid mount.

Headlight Glass A — Pieces of headlight glass from the inboard headlight (left set of headlights).

Headlight Glass B — Same source as headlight glass 'A' except consisting of smaller pieces which were picked up from the highway.

Toplight Glass — Perforated red lens and broken pieces of the light (including reflector; which had been mounted on top of the vehicle, left side, facing forward.

The six associated phenomena or happenings are discussed individually and finally what might have caused all of these happenings is discussed:

1. Intense light — First, it occurred in the shape of a beam, then became overwhelmingly bright. The beam, like shape of the light suggests an unnatural source — using lenses, etc.

2. Glass breakage — There are definite signs of impact; analysis shows residue at one fracture containing iron, silicon, aluminum and calcium. These elements are typical of rock fragments. The direction of the impacting media is evident from location of breakage and imprint on indent on the hood of the car. The relative angle of attack on the car is near horizontal. The speed of the car being 60-65 mph would tend to create a relative impact angle near horizontal.

3. Engine stoppage — The stoppage was not due to a mechanical failure as evidenced by the fact that the car functioned normally following the incident. The engine stoppage points heavily to temporary disruption of the electrical system.

4. Driver unconscious for a period up to 40 minutes — It is not clear whether the bump on the head could have caused this or if another "phenomena" might be the source of unconsciousness. To function, the body's nervous system relies on electro-chemical signals. Could there have been disruption of this by electrical means?"

5. Malfunction of the automobile clock and wrist watch — This was of a temporary nature, much as the engine failure. Disruption of the electrical clock could very well coincide with the "failure" of the engine electrical system. The failure of the mechanical wrist watch would, of necessity, be of a different form; but again the temporary nature suggests a "Malfunction" that "dissipates".

6. Bent antennas — Considerable effort was made to solve the problem of the bent antennas. The metal hardness tells us that they were not exposed to a general high temperature that caused bending. Normally, an antenna subjected to a uniform force, would bend at the base. However, on a car traveling 60-65 mph, the antennas are considerably flexed towards the rear. A force from above, superimposed on the flexed antennas could bend the parts

City Gets Tough On Parked Cars After Snowfall

Following a meeting of the Thief River Falls city council's street committee with Mayor Bob Carlson and Police Chief Ken Froschheiser, a "get tough" policy on illegally parked cars during times of snow removal has been announced.

Chief Froschheiser said that during the first snow removal effort by city crews earlier this year, the police department made contact with owners of 229 vehicles to have them moved to permit street crews to operate. An additional 31 vehicles were towed away when the owners could not be located.

"Compliance with the city ordinance on snow removal is the responsibility of the individual citizen," the Police chief said. "Those who fail to comply complicate and delay the work of the street department and cause inconvenience to the other residents and visitors in our city."

In the residential areas of the city, he emphasized, snow removal is conducted during the hours of 6 a.m. to 9 p.m. Avenues, which run north and south, will be cleaned during those hours on Monday, Wednesday and Friday. No vehicles should be

The equipment, used to go into smoke-filled buildings or those that contain toxic gases, adds to the number of older breathing devices owned by the Thief River Falls fire department, which now totals 11. "It's equipment that we've needed," Chief Noel said. "In a smoke-filled building we use the buddy system, and the more people that can enter the building with masks, the quicker the fire can be put out. The equipment plays a large part in life-saving techniques."

Patty Swedenburg And David Carlson Are Wed

Miss Patty D. Swedenburg became the bride of David B. Carlson on September 8 at a double-ring ceremony at St. Bernard's Catholic church in this city.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Swedenburg of Thief River Falls. Parents of the groom are the late Mr. and Mrs. Nick Carlson.

Rev. John Kleinwachter officiated at the double ring ceremony. Kristi Gerardy, a friend of the couple, was the organist, playing the traditional wedding march for the processional and recessional. Vocalist Steve Anderson sang "Wedding Song," "Follow Me," from "Camelot," and "If."

Baskets of white gladioli and pastel mums graced the chancel.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents, was attired in an empire fashioned floor-length gown of white qiana with a sheer overlay. The fitted bodice featured a V-neckline and ling, full sleeves, cuffed at the wrists. Lace enhanced the bodice and was appliqued in scroll design on the front of the skirt. Adding back interest was a chapel-length train, complemented by a cathedral veil attached to a profile headpiece. She carried a cascade of white orchids, stephanotis and trailing spider plants.

Tammy Stevens of Elbow Lake was the bride's personal attendant.

Maid of honor was Debbie Conger of Forest Lake, a friend of the bride. Other attendants were Donna Johnson, Minneapolis; JoAnne Olson, Thief River Falls, friends of the bride, and Denise Lofberg of Colorado, a sister of the bride. Their identical, empire-fashioned gowns were of a cotton pastel floral print with a peach background. They carried bouquets of carnations, corresponding with the pastel colors in their gowns.

Terry Colter, city, a friend of the groom, was best man. Groomsmen were Tim Carlson, Minneapolis, a brother of the groom; Tom Peterson and Mike Lee, Thief River Falls, friends of the groom. The ushers were Tim Swanson, a nephew of the bride, and Bruce Restad, a friend. All wore tuxedos with light brown trim; white ruffled shirts edged in brown, and white carnation boutonnieres.

The mother of the bride wore a green floor-length gown with a white carnation corsage. A similar corsage complemented the pink gown gown by the groom's aunt, Mrs. Merle Carlson, who together with her husband were honor guests at the wedding.

Other special guests were Lois Adolphson, Minneapolis; Glen and Blanche Carlson, Rollie and Donna Carlson, Beverly Carlson, all of St. Cloud; Wayne and Ginger Carlson, Bloomington; and Bess Rowe and Helen Sorenson of Michigan.

Approximately 200 relatives and friends attended the dinner and reception that followed in the church parlors. Host and hostess were the groom's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Carlson. Debbie Bruggeman registered the guests and Mike and Gayle Basham served the punch.

The four-tiered water fountain wedding cake, decorated with peach flowers, was flanked by two smaller cakes. Miniature replicas of the wedding party graced the cakes, which were cut and served by Betty Fitzgerald and Lois Adolphson. Pouring coffee were Louis Hook and Ramona Anseby.

Serving as waiters were Dan Cullen, Scott Loehr and Tony Swanson. Sandy Hanson presided at the gift table.

Following a wedding trip to St. Cloud, the couple is now at home in this city at 817 North Knight. Both are graduates of Lincoln high school; the bride in 1977 and the groom with the class of 1975. The bride is employed at Hardees, and the groom at Lon's. Photo, Jim Solsten

Art And Selma Kleinwachter Note Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Art (Selma) Kleinwachter of Strandquist celebrated their 45th wedding anniversary on Saturday, November 24, at a Mass, a family dinner and an open house at St. Edward's Catholic church in Strandquist.

Celebrant at the Mass and Nuptial Blessing was John Kleinwachter of Thief River Falls, a nephew. He was assisted by Rev. Duane Pribula. Sister Julie of Red Lake Falls, a friend of the family, lead the Prayer of the Faithful.

Members of the family also participated. Grandsons John and David Donarski of Thief River Falls were servers; sons Leland Kleinwachter of St. Paul was reader, Leland Kleinwachter, St. Paul, and Laures Kleinwachter, Stephen, served as ushers, and Tom Kleinwachter, Stephen, was organist, and together with Audrey Donarski of Thief River Falls, the couple's only daughter, sang "Let There Be Peace On Earth." During Holy Communion grandchildren Cathy Beverford of Camarillo, Calif., and Wendell Donarski, Thief River Falls, carried the gifts and Alan Kleinwachter, Stephen, carried the flowers.

Also present for the Nuptial Blessing was Frank Kleinwachter of Strandquist, who was best man at the wedding. His wife Judith replaced the bridesmaid, Kathryn Olson of St. Paul, who was unable to attend the celebration. They, together with the honored couple, were presented with corsages and boutonnieres of blue and white roses and carnations made of silk by their daughter, Audrey Donarski.

Following the Mass, Rev. Pribula read a letter of congratulations from Bishop Balke of Crookston and presented it to the couple.

A family dinner followed. The open house from 2 to 4 p.m., was hosted by the couple's children: Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Donarski and family, Thief River Falls; Mr. and Mrs. Laures Kleinwachter and family and Tom Kleinwachter of Stephen; Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Kleinwachter and family of Strandquist, Mr. and Mrs. Leland Kleinwachter and Michelle of St. Paul.

Unable to be present were Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Kleinwachter and family of Pensecola, Fla.; Mr. and Mrs. Clare Kleinwachter and family, St. Paul, and Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Kleinwachter of Redwood Falls.

Among the honored guests, in addition to Kleinwachter's brother, Frank, who was best man, were his sister and brothers: Emma Brossoit and Adolph Kleinwachter, both of Thief River Falls, and Julius Kleinwachter of Strandquist; and Mrs. Kleinwachter's brother, Jens Steen of Thief River Falls. Also present were 16 of the couple's 23 grandchildren, and one great-granddaughter.

The reception table was highlighted by a square, three-tiered Lady Windemere anniversary cake with four square cakes forming the base. The cake was iced in white and decorated with blue wedding bells and blue accents. It was topped with a gold Christogram and a blue 45th anniversary emblem. The cake was baked and decorated by Martha Przybylski of Argyle and was cut and served by godchildren: Ivadelle Hoppe and Betty Johnson, Thief River Falls.

Cathy Beverford of Camarrillo, Calif., poured coffee, Bernadette Donarski, Moorhead, was at the guest book and Michelle Kleinwachter, St. Paul, and Tami Kleinwachter, Stephen, distributed the thank-you notes. All are grand-daughters of the couple. Punch was served by Helen Hahn of Warroad.

Waitresses and waiters were Lucy Donarski and Kim Adlis, Strandquist; Kim Rathmeir, Redwood Falls; Wendell and Joseph Donarski, Alan and James Kleinwachter and Richard Johnson.

A large number of relatives and friends attended the anniversary celebration although the weather was stormy. Many pictures were taken at the event. Included was a fourth generation picture of the Kleinwachter women: Mrs. Kleinwachter, her daughter, Audrey Donarski; granddaughter, Cathy Beverford; and great-granddaughter, Jaclyn Beverford.

in the manner exhibited. As no impact marks are evident, the force must have been of a relatively uniform kind — that is, not from a series of particle impacts. A few pounds of force applied to the areas involved would bend the parts. The kinds of phenomena capable of performing this bending includes electrical, fluid (air) and, of course, hand forces.

Discussion:

The "best fit" describes a highly charged electrical "thing" with enough mass and momentum to create the effects.

The question arises whether natural phenomena such as lightning (ball or otherwise) could likely cause all these happenings. Two factors discount this. One, the sustained horizontal beam-like appearance of the light (unlike lightning) and the need for mass to accomplish the events. The disruption of the electrical systems points heavily to something electrical in nature, and certainly enough force must be generated to bend the antennas. Super strong electrical fields can produce these effects.

My advisor on electrostatic forces indicates that an electrical field capable of producing the forces involved, would be of an intensity to cause arcing to the car. The round ball on the one antenna is "cleaned" as if this may have happened.

The source of these "effects", whether from a space vehicle or earthly in nature is, of course, speculative. We live in an age that tells us there likely are civilizations more advanced than us. We, as a civilization, are accomplishing extensive space travel. We know how to utilize intense electrical fields for accelerating particles or producing forces.

Of course, there is much we don't understand. For instance, if space vehicles are around, why isn't there communicative contact?

parked on the avenues on those days after a snowfall until snow has been removed.

Streets, which run east and west, and all other roadways bearing the titles of drives, roads, courts, etc., will be cleaned on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday during the 6 a.m. to 9 p.m. hours. No vehicles should be parked on those thoroughfares during those times after a snowfall until crews have had time to complete their clean-up operations.

In the downtown area, snow removal is done from 1 to 6 a.m. and the same no parking provisions apply. Downtown areas are generally adequately marked with snow removal signs.

"Our objective is to keep the streets as cleared and safe as possible during the winter months, not to make a practice of towing vehicles," Chief Froschheiser added. "We would prefer that no towing is necessary. But attempting to contact owners is costly and time-consuming and the determination has been made to place the burden where it belongs — on the vehicle owner."

Chief Froschheiser said that vehicles which must be towed away will be impounded at the city's impound lot on Main av. N. and it will cost owners a minimum of a $15 towing fee and $2 first day storage charge to claim the vehicle. If the car remains impounded, an additional charge of a dollar a day will be added.

"The mayor's office, street committee of the council and the police department all encourage the public to cooperate with the ordinance," the police chief said. "It will prevent unnecessary cost and inconvenience for everyone and assure safer winter driving in our community."

A notice from the police department with a schedule of the no parking restrictions for snow removal will be published in the December 10 edition of the Northern Minnesota Shoppers Guide. Residents are advised to clip the advertisement and post it in the home as a reminder to help vehicle owners comply with the ordinance.

University Tuition Plan Is Questioned

Two student leaders expressed doubts about a proposal to change the way tuition is charged at the University of Minnesota at the monthly meeting of the board of regents Nov. 9.

Brian Jamison, a student at the Morris campus, told the regents that the proposed plan would raise tuition for the average student at the technical colleges in Crookston and Waseca, where students take relatively heavy course loads.

The proposal would change the way tuition is charged in three basic ways:

— Students taking 14 or fewer credits, or 19 or more credits, would pay by the credit. Those taking 15 to 18 credits would pay the same rate as those taking 14 credits. Currently, tuition is charged by the credit only for 13 or fewer credits.

— All freshmen and sophomores would pay the same tuition rate, and juniors and seniors would pay a higher rate, which would vary from college to college.

— Tuition rates in individual colleges would be tied more closely to the actual cost of teaching students in those colleges.

Members of the administration have stated that the proposed system would be more fair than the current system since part-time students and those who carry relatively light credit loads now pay more than their share.

"What's wrong with the present system?" Jamison asked the board. Jamison, who was representing the student representatives to the board, said that no proof has yet been offered that the new system will be better than the current system.

Both Jamison and Sue Gjemse, the student body president, said several questions must be answered before students will support the change. Effects on the coordinate campuses, on minority-group and disadvantaged students, on enrollment, and on the quality of education in general have to be measured, Jamison said.

The tuition proposal is an outgrowth of a report made by a task force on student access in 1977. Several students were on that committee, which was appointed by President C. Peter Magrath in 1975.

"The students who were on that task force are not the student leaders today," Gjemse said. "Times change and the issues change. We need time to study the proposal and conduct an open hearing."

Gjemse said she is concerned that the changes in the tuition structure will "make a tuition hike much less noticeable and thus easier to do" and that "higher rates for juniors and seniors will increase the attrition rate."

Regents have taken no action yet on the proposal, which would not go into effect before the spring of 1981, said vice president for student affairs Frank Wilderson.

Regents asked the administration to look for ways to alter the plan so that students at Crookston and Waseca would not suffer, and to measure the effects of changes in tuition structure at other universities.

David Berg, director of management planning and information services, told the board that the only detailed study of the effects of major changes in tuition structure was done at Florida state university. That study found a temporary drop in the number of credits taken, but no long-term effects, Berg said.

In other business, the regents approved three resolutions that will set the tone for intercollegiate athletics at the university in the future. Briefly, the resolutions state that:

— The university will continue to compete at the current level, and financial support might be sought from the legislature at some point to keep the programs at that level;

— Equal programs for men and women will be offered on each campus; and — The university will urge the national men's and women's conferences to change their rules so that costs of athletic programs will not continue to escalate.

Although the men's intercollegiate athletics program on the Twin Cities campus is expected to run into financial trouble in the future, said Robert Stein, vice president for administration and planning, "we have the situation fairly well in hand for the next two or three years."

Stein said he does not expect to ask the legislature for help with the men's program in the next few years.

The regents also looked at two proposed sites for the Hubert H. Humphrey institute of public affairs building. The regents have already accepted a plan to construct the building on top of an unfinished building on campus.

Much more space is needed to handle the needs of the institute, however, Magrath told the board. "We need a larger building than was projected if it is to memorialize adequately, but not extravagantly." The building must include space for a display area, a Humphrey office replica and a library, as well as for academic programs, Magrath said.

More than $13 million has been raised for the institute, but a building large enough to house the institute would cost at least $10.5 million. Magrath told the group that if some legislative support could be won, the bulk of the institute money could be used to support its academic programs.

A 92,000-square-foot building could be constructed on top of the originally agreed-upon site for $13.5 million, Donald Brown, vice president for finance, said. The same building could be erected on university land just off campus, at Oak street and Washington avenue, for between $10.5 million and $11 million.

Engineering problems inherent in the first site account for the difference in price, Brown said. A building on that site, which is on campus, would be prominent visually and would be most convenient for the other academic units that will cooperate with the institute.

The Oak and Washington site has other advantages, including more space for parking and ease of access for people from off campus, Brown said.

Regents asked the administration to draft plans for a third site on the west bank. That option will be presented at the board's December meeting.

In other business, the regents amended the university's capital request, currently before the legislature, to include $1.9 million to remodel Nicholson hall. Currently home of the general college, Nicholson is unsafe in some places, Brown said. An earlier $3.6 million appropriation to remodel the building is not enough to make minimum changes necessary to comply with code regulations, he said.

The regents also approved a $627,000 plan to build 16 apartments for 64 students on the Waseca campus. Money to build the apartment will be borrowed and repaid through room charges.

Must Burn Elm Firewood Only During Winter

Agriculture commissioner Mark Seetin adds another caution about firewood to those being issued by safety authorities on the several fire hazards posed by this increasingly popular form of alternative energy for home heating.

"Make sure that your present and future winter supplies of firewood either contain no elm wood, or that elm wood is identified, separated and burned soon.

"In buying firewood from commercial vendors insist on a written guarantee that no bark bearing elm wood is included," Commissioner Seetin recommended.

He reminded commercial vendors of firewood that it is illegal to transport bark bearing elm wood for firewood into or even through Minnesota cities because of the proven hazard of spreading Dutch elm disease.

"Just a few elm logs with the bark still attached can be the breeding ground for thousands of the Dutch elm disease carrying beetles to emerge next spring and infect our remaining healthy elm shade trees," Commissioner Seetin emphasized.

He added that consumers who either knowingly or unwittingly have elm wood with the bark still intact in firewood stacks can undo the progress that has been achieved thus far in Minnesota's shade tree disease control program.

Elm wood can usually be identified by examining the inner bark coloring at the ends of logs. Most elms have distinctive alternating light and dark layers under the outer bark. This type of wood should either be burned first or at least the bark removed completely and burned immediately. Minnesotans who have a problem identifying elm wood may contact the local tree inspector via the city hall offices.

Under state law and the implementing rules of the Minnesota department of agriculture, elm wood may be stored for firewood or other recycling purposes in shade tree disease control communities only if specifically authorized by city ordinance or special permit, and only during the winter months. It is illegal to store any bark bearing elm wood in cooperating cities between April 1 and September 15.

Rent Refunds Due Tenants Of HUD Housing

Rent refunds of up to $500 are available to some tenants of apartment projects subsidized through the U.S. department of housing and urban development (HUD) under a subsidy program referred to as Section 236.

Approximately 750,000 people living in Section 236 apartments between Feb. 1, 1975 and Sept. 30, 1977, will benefit from the largest class-action settlement ever won by the poor. More than 10,700 housing units in the state of Minnesota are involved in this settlement. Residents of these apartments could share in the $60 million nation-wide settlement against HUD, according to Bricker Lavik, housing attorney with the legal aid society.

Class action suit resulted from rent increases which were charged from Feb. 1, 1975 through Sept. 30, 1977, to cover increases in property taxes and utility expenses. This type of increase was not allowed under Section 236 at that time. Because HUD failed to administer the program to avoid the unauthorized increases, the agency was named defendant in the law suit.

Claims for the rent refund must be mailed by Jan. 31, 1980, and must be filed on official claim forms. Current tenants of Section 236 housing should have already received claim forms from their landlord. Former tenants of Section 236 housing can get claim forms by calling the toll-free claims processing number 800-824-7980.

Tenants of federally subsidized apartment projects who are not sure whether their project was funded under Section 236 can find out by asking the project manager, contacting their local HUD office or calling the toll-free number listed above.

Women-Owned Businesses Sought By SBA

A Midwestern search is on for women-owned business firms which are capable of contracting with governmental agencies and major U.S. corporations.

Minnesota and Chicago chapters of the national association of women business owners (NAWBO) announced a recently signed contract with the small business administration to identify 1,000 firms that are 51 per cent women owned and organized for profit.

Target states include Kansas, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, Ohio and Wisconsin.

"Purpose of the contract is to enroll women-owned firms on the procurement automated source system (PASS), according to Marlene Johnson, president of the Minnesota chapter.

PASS is a computerized resource listing utilized by more than 300 government agencies as well as private prime contractors for the purpose of obtaining bid proposals. System lists companies under one of four classifications: Research and development, service, construction and manufacturing.

By filling out one form, which takes less than 30 minutes to complete, a business owner will be programmed into the PASS System. NAWBO will help applicants fill out the form, and there is no registration fee.

"In May of this year, President Carter issued an executive order which promises $150 million in prime contracts to women owned businesses in 1980 and a doubling of that amount 1981," Johnson explains.

"Order further dire every agency of the execut branch and every reciplent federal financial assistance take appropriate affirmat action on behalf of wome business enterprise," he sa

According to Johnson, " until now it has been diffic for these agencies to com with the order because of t problems involved in locati women owned enterpris That is why we were hired conduct this search."

Farm Prices Continue Slide In November

Index of prices received by Minnesota farmers decreased one per cent during the month ending November 15, according to the Minnesota crop and livestock reporting service. Price declines for crops and meat animals more than offset increases for dairy products and poultry.

Largest declines during the month occurred for flaxseed, potatoes, sunflowers, slaughter cows, and calves. Prices increased sharply for turkeys and eggs. Compared to a year ago, prices were up for all commodities surveyed except soybeans, flaxseed, hay, potatoes, hogs, sheep and turkeys. Largest gains occurred for wheat, dry beans and milk cows.

Crops index declined three per cent to 203 during the month and was only six per cent above the index a year earlier. Mid-November prices and the changes from last month are: All wheat — $3.81 per bushel, down seven cents from the revised October estimate; corn — $2.06, down four cents; oats — $1.24, down two cents; barley — $2.19, down 10 cents; soybeans — $5.93, down 21 cents; flaxseed — $5.06, down 48 cents; potatoes averaged $2.60 per hundredweight for all grades, down 26 cents. All hay was $41 per ton, up 50 cents. All sunflowers averaged $8.62 per hundredweight, down $1.43 from the revised October price.

Meat animal index at 223 was two per cent below both last month and a year ago. All hogs at $33.10 per hundredweight were down 70 cents from a month earlier. Beef cattle averaged $55.70, down $1. Calves were down $8 to $77. Sheep brought $20.90, down 40 cents. Lambs were down $1.40 to $62.60.

Dairy index increased slightly during the month to 254, eight per cent above the index last year. Preliminary milk price at $11.93 per hundredweight was up five cents from the revised October price.

Poultry and egg index at 211 was up 13 per cent from last month and was three per cent above a year ago. Turkeys were 45 cents per pound liveweight, up seven cents from a month earlier. Eggs brought 48 cents per dozen for all grades in mid-November, up five cents from mid-October and up two and one half cents from a year earlier.

Asks Support Of President By Iran Letter

Congressman Arlan Stangeland today appealed to all the people in Minnesota to let the authorities in Iran know that the American people unanimously support President Carter's refusal to give in to blackmail to obtain the release of the 49 American hostages still held in Iran.

The Ayatollah Khomeini has suggested that the American people do not support the President in his efforts to obtain the release of these hostages in accordance with the principles of international law. By his selective release of some hostages, the Ayatollah has attempted to put American against American and America against its government."

Congressman Stangeland said, "It is urgent, therefore, that we act decisively and in unit to show the Ayatollah that he deludes himself in thinking that Americans are not solidly behind the President and his policies.

"All of us share, in some measure, the agony of the hostages and of their relatives. In the course of the last terrible month, each of us has asked: What can I do to help? We have restrained hostile acts and demonstrations and we have prayed.

"Now there is something more we can do. We can and, we must get the message to Iran that the American people — every man, woman and child among us — demands the release of the hostages."

"I, therefore, urge all of the people in Minnesota to write or cable the Ayatollah Khomeini insisting that the hostages be released and expressing support for a policy of no submission to blackmail. Communications should be sent directly to; Ayatollah Khomeini, Qum, Iran, or sent in care of the Iranian Embassy, Washington, D.C. 20008.

"I earnestly hope that response to this appeal will be overwhelming from not only the people of Minnesota but the entire United States," said Stangeland.

Tax Protesters May Suggest Illegal Acts

Articles on illegal tax protesters have appeared recently in newspapers in different parts of the country. Proponents of illegal tax protest have been going around the country making speeches and conducting seminars telling taxpayers how to evade paying taxes.

To clarify some of the misconceptions these illegal tax protesters present as fact, the Internal Revenue service has prepared the following questions and answers:

(Q) I was at a meeting recently where a speaker told us IRS laws violate my rights against self-incrimination under the Fifth Amendment of the Constitution, so I don't have to pay or file income tax. Is that true?

(a) No. Federal tax laws are in harmony with the Constitution. As early as 1927, and in many cases since then, the courts have consistently ruled that no one may refuse to file a federal income tax return because of the 5th Amendment privilege against self-incrimination.

(Q) What can happen to a person who refuses to file a federal tax return?

(A) If a person has an obligation to file a federal tax return, but knowingly and willingly refuses to do so, that person, if convicted, can be fined up to $10,000, be imprisoned up to one year, or both.

(Q) Are there any other penalties for failure to file a federal tax return?

(A) In addition to criminal sanctions for willful failure to file a tax return or pay income taxes, a taxpayer may be subject to penalties of up to 25 per cent of the underpayment for failure to file or for filing after the due date, or a penalty of 50 per cent of the underpayment where civil fraud is involved.

(Q) What can the IRS do to collect taxes a person refuese to pay?

(A) Congress has given the IRS the legal authority to enforce collection. If no mutually agreeable payment plan between the IRS and the taxpayer can be achieved, enforcement action may include attaching salaries or wages and seizing property.

Unsafe Toys Can Spoil Your Holiday Season

Bad toys can rob children of learning experiences and development, but ever worse, some toys can rob them of life. As consumers, parents need to protect their children against hazardous toys.

Child development specialists warn parents not to overlook safety precautions when purchasing toys for their children this holiday season and offer advice to prevent accidents after the toys are in use.

"There's so much chaos around the holiday season, parents are busy and there's more stuff around for youngsters to get into," says Cynthia Hobbie, pediatric nurse associate.

"Parents and older children have to watch the little ones because they get into toys and supplies belinging to older children," she warns. "They drink the glue and eat the glitter and can harm themselves on sharp objects. Especially dangerous are little plastic trucks with metal axles that have those little rubber wheels that come off so easily." Rewarding toys and play activities can turn to disaster if safety precautions aren't taken.

Consumer product safety commission reports that several hundred thousand children a year have toy-related injuries. And that doesn't include bicycle accidents that number almost half a million each year.

When choosing toys for children, consider these safety suggestions:

+ Purchase toys appropriate for the child's age, needs and level of development.

+ Provide toys without detachable parts for babies and young children. Small parts, such as eyes on stuffed animals, small beads or sharp objects, may be swallowed, cause choking or other injuries.

+ Don't buy an oversized bike for a child to "grow into."

+ Choose toys that cannot cause burns. Avoid electrical plug-in toys (i.e. cooking toys, melting-molding toys) unless they will be used only under parental supervision.

+ Avoid electric airplanes unless a wide open field is available to the child. A child or parent can be electrocuted if a toy plane hits a powerline.

+ Make sure toys are free of sharp edges, are made of or contain non-flammable fabrics, nontoxic materials and lead-free paints.

+ Make sure toys are made of durable materials. Flimsy plastic may break, leaving sharp edges. Take notice of toys that sit broken on the store shelves and displays they speak for themselves.

+ Be wary of toys that shoot things — they can cause eye and ear injuries, and projectiles can be swallowed or inhaled if small enough.

+ After the toys are in use, repair or discard dmaged and broken toys and electric toys with frayed wiring.

Parents can provide a safe and happy playtime for their children by being aware of the potentially dangerous aspects of toys, and instructing their children in the proper use of toys and play equipment.

ALPHA BETA house residents become upset during the production of "Toga! Toga! Toga!" when they learn they may have to leave their home, simply labeled "zoo" by school administrators. 4 Students At TRF Recognized At Concordia

Marisa Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cal Shaw; Kathy Beito, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G.A. Beito; Ruth Dalager, daugher of Mr. and Mrs. James Dalager; and Karyn Richards, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Richards, all of Thief River Falls, were recently recognized as Christian scholars by Concordia college in Moorhead.

Young women were selected on the basis of significant contributions within their church, school and community. Event was the first Christian scholars day at the college. Students represented congregations of the American Lutheran church in North Dakota, northern Minneaota and eastern Montana.

Participants attended Concordia classes, spoke with professors in their field of interest and stayed overnight in residence halls. Highlighting the day was a recognition banquet where Dr. Paul Dovre, Concordia's president, spoke on "What it means to be a Christian and a scholar." Each student received a certificate indicating selection as a Christian scholar.

Slowdown In Auto Industry Affects Public

Importance of the automotive industry to the nation's economy and to each of us has been driven home recently by widespread layoffs and business failures, reports the Automotive information council (AIC).

Almost 130,000 workers at auto plants are on layoff because of reduced vehicle production, more than 450 new-car dealerships closed in the model year, and the "ripple effect" into supplier firms and other back-up industries is too broad to be measured, said AIC.

However, an economic study by a Nobel Prize-winning economist, indicates that layoffs in support areas come to almost 50 per cent more than those laid off by the vehicle makers.

These include those in wholesale and retail sales, service, prefabricated metal products, machinery, business services, advertising, transportation, warehousing, textiles, rubber, glass, chemicals, paint, wood, finance and communications.

In addition, it affects real estate, insuraпce, hotels, restaurants and "even the dry cleaner in Akron," said AIC.

The fallout also will greatly hamper tax collections of all types.

Auto slowdown has resulted from many causes — inflation, oil shortages and high interest rates — but one of the other root causes is the heavy burden of costly regulations placed on the auto by appointed government regulators.

Today's new car carries more than $700 worth of federally mandated items, such as stringent emissions and fuel-economy controls, special bumpers, headrests, side beams and a host of others which have driven up the price of cars, AIC pointed out.

And other regulations will add more than another $1,000 (not counting inflation) in the next five years.

Concert At Ev. Covenant

Dan Thiessen, from Kelowna, British Columbia, together with four other musicians make up a band called "Voice of the Bridegroom" of New Creation Ministries. They will perform Saturday at 9:30 p.m. (after the hockey game) at the Evangelical Covenant church.

Thiessen, who accompanies his original compositions on 12-string guitar, also plays piano and valve horn.

Errors Reduce Some Social Security Aid

It's the $69 billion question: Are you one of many U.S. citizens who is not getting credit for your earnings because of a mistake in your social security account?

Social security administration reports that about $69 billion presently cannot be credited to the proper accounts because of filing errors.

"With those earnings going unreported, it is likely many people will not receive the benefits they deserve," says John Foglesong, product development manager at one of the nation's largest health and life insurance firms.

"These errors may occur when an employer accidentally switches two digits in an employee's social security number or a computer records the wrong number for an individual," explains Foglesong. "There may be a significant difference in the social security benefits a person receives if some earnings have gone unreported due to a filing error."

Social security benefits are based on covered earnings — the amount of money an individual pays social security taxes on during his or her work years. Administration records how much each person has earned by the person's social security number. Thus, an error in the social security number can result in a substantial loss of benefits.

For example, an individual who retired at 65 in 1979, and whose average indexed monthly wage (as computed by social security) was $744 is entitled to about $554 per month upon retirement. If social security records computed the average indexed monthly wage at $600, retirement benefits would be reduced to about $486 per month, an annual loss of $816.

Essentially, social security benefits are a form of life insurance and can provide substantial income when needed. In addition to survivor and retirement benefits, social security can pay education benefits for college age children and disability benefits.

"It is the individual's vital responsibility to find out how much the social security administration has credited to his or her account," says Foglesong. "we advise citizens to determine how much is credited to their accounts by filling out a 'request for statement of earnings' form. The form is available at social security offices."

Administration will routinely correct any errors brought to their attention — but only as far back as three years, three months and 15 days.

Anyone who works should obtain a statement of social security earnings about every three years after the initial audit, says Foglesong. "since the social security administration generally corrects errors only as far back as approximately three years, if an individual doesn' check at least that often, it i possible errors will occu which the individual won't b able to have corrected," he explains.

Child Restraint In Autos Saves Lives

America values its children and does a good job protecting them from life's perils, except from one that is most likely to kill them — traffic accidents, states the national highway traffic safety commission.

Not a happy thought. But last year, some 670 children under five, and 1,160 between six and 15, died in traffic accidents, making them the number one killer of children in this country. Another 160,000 were seriously injured.

Children are introduced to the automobile at an early age. Swaddled in the dubious safety of their mother's arms, a baby's first glimpse of the real world is through the window of the family car on the way home from the hospital.

A car full of kids is an American as baseball, hot-dogs and apple pie. But most parents make no effort to provide their children with a measure or protection in a car crash. "It's all you can do to round up the kids and get them into the car. Who has time to fool with car seats and safety belts?" "They cost too much and the kids refuse to fit in them." These are typical of the excuses that lead to the needless injuries and deaths of so many children every year.

In a crash, or sudden stop, unrestrained children are thrown about in the car. It happens so fast, and with such force, that nothing can prevent the youngster's violent impact against the dashboard, windshield or other unforgiving surface.

Even in a crash at 30 miles per hour, the results can be deadly — it has the same effect on a child as a three-story fall. Put another way, a 20-pound child involved in a 30 mph crash hits the dashboard or windshield at a force of 600 pounds.

It is ironic that approximately 80 per cent of the children in the United States are immunized against communicable diseases, but only seven per cent are protected in cars. Safety experts estimate that more than half of the deaths that occur each year could be prevented by the use of proper child restraints.

In a study done by the insurance institute for highway safety in which children were observed in a care with their parents, three out of four children were not restrained and no restraints appeared to be abailable. Surprisingly, even in instances where the parents were wearing safety belts themselves, the children were unprotected in three out of four cases.

But that won't be the case any longer in Tennessee. That state passed a mandatory child restraint law in 1978 which requires children under four to be restrained. All state police cars carry child seats which are loaned to parents who are stopped and ticketed for violating the new law. The seat must be returned in court when the fine is paid.

As an inducement for parents to profit from their mistakes, the state police usually recommend that the court suspend the fine if the parents can produce a receipt proving that an approved child restraint has since been purchased.

What is the best way to protect a child in an automobile? Regular safety belts are less desirable than child restraints for infants and children weighing less than 40 pounds. Small children need a restraint designed for their small bodies and delicate bone structure. However, if no child restraint is available, it is still safer to use a regular seat belt, regardless of the age of the child, than to allow the child to ride unrestrained.

Restraint systems proven effective in 30 miles per hour crashes are available commercially. For the infant from birth to 12 months, the infant carrier is the only type recommended and proven in a semi-reclining position. The carrier is lined with energy-absorbing materials and has an internal safety harness. Assembly is anchored to the car by a vehicle lap belt. Some models can be converted to forward-facing car seats when the infant has outgrown the original configuration.

All systems designed for use in cars must meet minimum federal safety standards. Shop carefully and avoid flimsy, light-weight feeder seat models that are designed primarily for household use and are not required to meet any standards.

For the toddler, one to four years, three types of restraints are recommended: the conventional car seat, the protective shield and the safety harness.

Conventional care seat is for the child who can sit up without support. It has a harness with two shoulder straps, a lap belt and crotch strap. It is forward-facing and anchored by a vehicle lap belt. The car seat may also be equipped with a "top tether" than anchors the top of the seat to the structure of the vehicle, and it is important to anchor the tether if the seat is to work properly.

Protective shield is a C-shaped plastic shield with energy-absorbing padding on the upper portion to spread crash forces evenly over a child's upper torso. It does not obstruct the child's view and is anchored by means of a vehicle lap belt fastened around the front of the shield. This type of straint requires no harness but provides less lateral protection than most conventional seats.

Safety harness consists of shoulder, lap and crotch straps that are anchored to the car structure with a special attachment. It allows greater freedom of movement than other types of restraints, but less lateral protection.

Older children can be protected by using the lap belt preferably in the back seat. The belt should fit snugly so that it will not ride up across the child's abdomen. A three-pound adult belt system also can be used, if the shoulder belt is positioned firmly across the chest and shoulder and does not cut across the neck, face or head.

Teaching children good safety habits at home — and in an automobile — is an important parental responsibility that could save many young lives in this country every year, the administration says.

More information on child restraint devices is available free of charge by writing Elaine Weinstein, National Highway Traffic Safety administration, NTS-14, 400 Seventh St., S.W. Washington, D.C. 20590.

'U'M Receives $1 Million For Scholarships

University of Minnesota has received a $1 million gift from the McKnight foundation to endow a program of merit scholarships.

"There is a great need at the University to recruit outstanding undergraduate students," said University President C. Peter Magrath. "with these new funds for scholarships based exclusively on merit we will be able to compete with outstanding educational institutions through out the country. Bright students spur teachers to greater effort, serve as models of industry and interest for their fellow students and contribute to the intellectual life of the community."

Magrath explained that state and federal scholarship money must be used based on need and equal opportunity and cannot be used for this purpose.

Plans are to use about $25,000 a year for the Presidential scholars program. The program was established in 1974, but due to lack of funds no money accompanied the honor of being named a Presidential scholar.

The University hopes to use about $75,000 a year for University participation in the National merit scholarship program.

Funds will be available to students enrolling in the winter of 1981.

Endowments will be administered by the University of Minnesota foundation.

Motor Vehicle Complaints On Rise In State

Minnesota office of consumer services (OCS) has completed a detailed study of motor vehicle complaints received during the past four and one-half years. Study covers complaints received on motor vehicles under warranty and breaks them down by manufacturer. Some general statements can be made regarding these statistics:

— Since 1975 complaints about vehicles under warranty have steadily increased — The complaint vs. sales rate for General Motors vehicles and foreign vehicles have generally remained stable.

— The complaint vs. sales rate for Chrysler, Ford and AMC vehicles have generally increased.

Director of consumer services Kris Sanda said the statistics substantiate similar statistics from other sources and show distinct differences among manufacturers in the rate at which complaints are reported on their products. "However, we do not have the type of data at our disposal which explains why these differences have occurred," she said.

Sanda said that the office conducted this research because the agency receives more complaints about motor vehicles than any other single product. Automotive complaints accounted for 29 per cent of the agency's total complaints during the first six months of 1979.

While these statistics show some real differences among auto makers in the frequency of complaints reported to OCS, Sanda said there are other important factors to consider in making a purchase decision, including:

Independent testing reports from such sources as "Consumer Reports" and "Consumer Research", found in most libraries;

Comparison of resale or "blue book" values, obtainable from most lending institutions; Convenience and reputation of the dealer; and suitability of the vehicle to personal and family needs.

Sanda also suggested that buyers may want to obtain copies of OCS brochures on buying new and used cars.

"When getting good value for every dollar spent is as important as it is today," Sanda said, "consumers should be very cautious in making major purchases. It is much better to take time to do some research before the purchase then to spend time afterwards resolving problems."

Gasohol, highly-touted as a liquid fuel that will help ease gasoline shortages, was sold by nearly 2,300 service stations in the Midwest in the 1930's.

Farm Worker Hiring Down 14 Per Cent

Minnesota's total farm employment during the survey week of October 7-13, 1979 of 191,000 workers, was down 14 per cent from a year earlier. Farm operators and unpaid family workers totaled 160,000, compared with 178,000 last year, according to the Minnesota crop and livestock reporting service.

Total hired farm work force at 31,000 was down 14,000 from a year ago. Number of family and hired workers is the lowest for October since quarterly surveys started in 1975. Main activities during the survey week were harvesting soybeans, sunflowers, sugarbeets, and corn silage. Corn for grain harvest was just starting while the potato harvest was rapidly nearing completion.

Employment on United States farms during the survey week at 3.94 million workers is 3 per cent less than October 1978. Farm operators working one hour or more and unpaid family members working 15 hours or more totaled 2.53 million while hired workers numbered 1.42 million.

Minnesota farm operators averaged 58.2 hours and unpaid family members 40.4 hours for an overall average of 50.5 hours worked during the October survey week. Hired workers averaged 45.4 hours in October compared to 42.0 a year ago. October average is the highest for hired workers' hours since this data series began in 1975.

For the United States, all family members averaged 41.9 hours worked during the survey week compared to 40.4 a year ago. Farm operators reported an average of 43.5 and unpaid family members 39.2 hours worked. Hired farm workers averaged 40.1 hours for the week, 1.3 hours more than a year ago.

Average Minnesota farm wages for all hired workers at $3.64 per hour during the week of October 7-13 are up 16 per cent from $3.15 a year earlier. Livestock workers averaged $2.75 per hour compared $2.6 in October of 1978. Fiel workers averaged $3.12 pe hour compared to $2.85 la October. Machine operato averaged $3.80, up from $3.2 a year ago.

Nation's farm wage rate for all methods of pay con verted to an hourly rat averaged $3.56, compared t last year's $3.19. Hourly workers receiving cash only averaged $3.58 this yea compared to $3.19 the previous year. Field workers received an average of $3.50 compared to $3.06 a year ago. Livestock workers averaged $3.04 compared to $2.77 in October 1978. Machine operators averaged $3.52, up from $3.18 a year ago.

Sharpen Your Driving Skill For Winter

When it comes to an up-date on safe winter driving techniques, the man to contact is Raymond Prince of the National safety council.

Prince is a man who should know. For many years he has served as secretary of NSC's committee on winter driving hazards. He coordinates the committee's year 'round activities, including the Council's annual winter driving test project at Stevens Point, Wisconsin.

"You can't stop winter," Prince contends, "but there are new techniques that will help you keep winter from stopping you."

Prince referred to changes over the years in recommended techniques in pumping brakes on slippery road surfaces.

Previously, hard fast jabs at the brake pedal were the proper way to slow or stop in ice slicked roads. This was when cars had drum brakes on all four wheels.

A good share of today's cars, however, have disk brakes on the front and drum brakes on the rear. The "fast and hard as you can" pumping does not allow the front disk brakes to release completely. With the front wheels still locked and sliding, steering is never retained — the basic objective of pumping the brakes in the first place.

"Instead," Prince emphasized, "skid testers recommend a slower, intermittent braking action — fully on and then fully off long enough to let disk brakes release so that all wheels are rolling again."

The technique should be practiced, according to Prince, until it comes naturally and you can feel when the wheels are locked or rolling. Apply the brakes until you feel that a skid is about to start, then release, steer and pump again.

Another problem arises with late model vehicles which have high idling speeds, particularly when the engine is cole — such as leaving a private driveway to enter a street.

"What happens," Prince explains, "is that the degree of braking required to slow down to make the turn may lock the front wheels while the fast idle speed of the motor is still turning the rear wheels.

"As a result, your car is moving forward but you've lost steering control and continue moving straight ahead even though your steering wheel is turned.

"In investigating this peculiar phenomenon with an automatic drive vehicle at the Council's Wisconsin test site, we found that the best technique is to shift into neutral when making this type of maneuver."

After the car has steered around into its new course, the gear can be returned to "drive" and power applied gently.

Prince added this note of caution: "In some jurisdictions, it is illegal to drive in neutral gear. This prohibition probably stems from the days before automatic transmissions and high idling speeds."

In addition to these new findings, Prince urged motorists to heed the committee's not-so-new recommendations for safer winter driving:

1. Get the "feel" of the road by accelerating carefully to see if wheels spin; or brake gently to see if they skid. Reduce speed accordingly.

2. Have good tires with good treads. Better yet, use snow tires which provide half again as much pulling power in snow as regular tires. Studded snow tires (where permitted) offer still more help on icy surfaces.

3. Always carry reinforced tire chains in the trunk of your car for use during severe snow and ice conditions. They provide four to seven times as much traction on snow or ice as regular tires.

4. Keep your windshield and windows clear at all times. Replace streaking wipes blades gone dead from exposure to sun, wind and oily road film. Be sure that your windshield washer solution contains adequate anti-freeze.

Project On RR Line Ensures Coal Shipment

Rehabilitation of a part of the Milwaukee railroad main line between the Miles City, MT. and Jonathan will ensure continued shipment of coal to power plants generating electricity for western Minnesota, according to commissioner Richard P. Graun, Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT).

The $2 million project was funded by Minnesota and North and South Dakota. State funds were provided under the federal railroad revitalization and regulatory reform act. Minnesota's share of the project was $315,000 and the shippers' share was $460,000.

Bruan said enough ties and ballast were replaced on the 300-mile Milwaukee line between Big Stone, S.D. and Gascoyne, N.D., to allow trains to travel 40 mph.

"A South Dakota study," he added, "indicates that the benefits of keeping the line open total nearly $1.5 billion. Loss of rail service would have caused the closure of power plants in Minnesota and South Dakota and the shutdown of a coal mine in North Dakota."

Milwaukee line also gives Minnesota shippers access to the West Coast and Dakota shippers access to the Twin Cities and Duluth.

Sheep Growers Learn About Confinement

Fourth annual Northwest sheep day held at the Northwest experiment station, Crookston, November 29 was attended by 120 persons interested in the future of the sheep industry.

According to Robert Jacobs, extension livestock specialist from the University of Minnesota, the future for sheep is wide open. Jacobs related that there are only one-third as many sheep in the United States today as there had been in 1962. In further retrospect, he said it is evident that there are fewer sheep in the United States today than at the time of the Civil war.

Major reason cited for the decline of sheep numbers was that farmers and ranchers hoped to profit quicker and to a larger extent with other enterprises.

Theme of the day was confinement sheep production. Dr. Kurt Wohlgemuth, extension veterinarian, NDSU, challenged the sheep producers with management suggestions that he judged to be more important than emergency veterinarian services.

Marlin Norby, sheep farmer from Fairview, Mont. showed pictures of his operation and explained to the group why he had switched to raising sheep in total confinement even though he lives in range country. Highlight of his system was a large sheep building that gave complete environmental control during the lambing season and also provided for automatic heating and watering, thereby allowing the producers to devote fulltime to the lambing operation.

Neal Martin, extension agronomist at the University of Minnesota, reviewed research in forage production for sheep and Bill Boylan of the animal science department at the University of Minnesota, St. Paul, showed research results of breeding for good sheep production.

Dr. Harvey Windels, livestock reasercher at the Northwest experiment station, Crookston, reviewed the breeding and lambing problems connected with the Crookston flock over the past year and gave some preliminary results of the housing study which is comparing five different systems.

Windels stated that the record of sheep on the expanded metal floors at the station probably looks better than the system justifies. He said that although losses were at a minimum, the tremendous effort required to maintain high producing ewes were either twins or triplets on expanded metal was perhaps hard to justify and might be nearly impossible for more routine sheep management situations.

CLARA (Nanci Kezar) hides behind her aunt Harriet's skirt (played by Bunny Engelman) to escape from the little white "mouse" Mickey, her cousin (Larry Engelman) has decided to fool her with. Scene occurs during the production of the "Nutcracker" by June Walker Rogers, to be presented Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. and Sunday at 2 p.m. in the Northland community college auditorium.

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

Drugs! Drugs! Drugs! It seems that they are everywhere!

I can remember when about the only time the word was ever mentioned was in reference to a Drug Store, where one could purchase cosmetics, lunches, magazines, newspapers, patient medicines and get doctor's perscriptions filled for, fever, pain or whatever.

Now the word has an almost entirely different meaning. The entire world is faced with the problem of hard drugs, which are warping or destroying the brains of millions of our people; especially the young.

There are many medical names for these brain killers, and those who are partaking of them or selling them, have even more names for them, but for myself and I think most other people, they are drugs or dope.

I, like most people, have been aware of the situation and, like most people, I just sat back and hoped the law or something would solve the problem. Then a few weeks ago "It" hit our family and I realized then and there that "we" had to help take care of it.

The law is constantly picking up those that are selling it, but going through the legalities of the law is just too slow for me. I'm not a Mrs. Columbo but I took it upon myself to find out a number of things, such as names, etc.

This drug thing is spreading like wildfire and unless we people take up the responsibility of helping in the apprehension and punishment of the drug pushers and peddlers, we will have very few youngsters left with the brains they were born with.

In a vague way, I always pictured a drug or dope pusher as a scrawny little middleaged or older man with a dark mustache and beady little eyes and I was surprised to learn that some of them are young men in their early twentys or so, who should be in the prime of life and should be out earning a respectable living. Instead, they are making a huge amount of money preying on anyone that may be vulnerable.

I am told that the pushers keep widening their scope to draw in more victims. They are even offering bonuses by having those that are hooked (especially the young) sell to their friends and classmates, thereby, those that are already hooked, receive free merchandise to satisfy their own habit. Just think what a chain reaction this is causing, especially in the schools!

Even the little children in kindergarten are in danger, as the playgrounds, restrooms, halls, etc. become retail stores for drug and dope sales.

Of course, if you ask anyone who smokes marijuana, they will tell you that it doesn't hurt anyone, but how can they know if it is harmful, if their brain is floating up there on cloud 13?

It is my conviction that anything that can alter one's brain or thinking, in anyway, has to be harmful and common sense tells us that smoking "pot" leads to the use of stronger drugs.

I think it is time that people come out of their cocoons and do something! We can not leave it up to others.

Also, I think parents should call their doctor and ask what symptoms to look for, and then take a good look at their children to determine if they are or could already be on drugs.

Then too, I do not think that parents should let their children "put them down" by saying the parents are "old fashioned" or just "old fogies".

Parents, be proud of that "generation gap"! After all, it is utterly impossible, physically or mentally, to be a real parent to your children if you are the same age as they are.

A few other people and myself have arranged to have a meeting at the city auditorium basement meeting room here in Thief River Falls this Friday, December 7 starting about 8 p.m. We plan to put together something to put a damper on the drug thing.

I know that some of the church groups and the law enforcement are trying to do what they can to stop the drug traffic, but they are hampered by rules and regulations — our group won't have those restrictions.

I hope we can get tough on drug pushers! We could even use "Tough on Drug Pushers" as our title. It could be a good name for a group that means business, but maybe someone can think of a better name.

We plan to have someone at the meeting who knows about drugs and dope, such as the effect it has on the victims and other interesting and vital statistics. It should be an interesting and productive meeting and all interested persons are invited to come.

We are hoping but we do not expect a large crowd, as too many people have no interest and too many parents think that their children are not and won't be taken in by drugs, but if that is their thought, they just do not realize what influence, that one youngster has on another. One of the follies of youth is that they feel they must conform to what the others are doing. Therefore, it is hard for these young persons to resist the pressures of their peers.

We hope we get a good input of suggestions and ideas from those that attend this meeting Friday at 8 p.m.

I'm sure that if one of our family were murdered we would be up in arms, but isn't a dead brain, about as tragic?

Sincerely,
Mrs. L. Carpenter

6 TIPS FOR SAFER WINTER DRIVING

by Professor A. H. Easton
Emeritus Professor of Mechanical Engineering
University of Wisconsin—Madison

1. Get the "feel" of the road by accelerating carefully to see if wheels spin; or brake gently to see if they skid. Reduce speed accordingly.

2. Increase your following distance. It takes three to nine times as far to stop on snow and ice as on dry pavement.

3. "Pump" your brakes to slow or stop — don't jam them on. An intermittent pumping action keeps the wheels rolling and helps maintain steering control.

4. Have good tires with good treads. Better yet, use snow tires which provide half again as much pulling power in snow as regular tires. Studded snow tires (where permitted) offer still more help on icy surfaces.

5. Always carry reinforced tire chains in the trunk of your car for use during severe snow and ice conditions. They provide four to seven times as much traction on snow or ice as regular tires.

6. Keep your windshield and windows clear at all times. Replace streaking wiper blades gone dead from exposure to sun, wind and oily road film. Be sure that your windshield washer solution contains adequate anti-freeze.

Dying Child's Home Care Is Another Option

"It looks like she's smiling because she wasn't afraid," says the sister of a terminally ill patient who died at home. The sister's comment indicates the beginning of a healthy adjustment to a sibling's death because the dying child was cared for in the family's living room.

Lawrence J. Singher, M.D., pediatric hematologist and oncologist, and Becky Bedore, R.N.M.S., say evidence indicates a renewed understanding of the "old time" living room's central role in families' lives.

When births and deaths occurred in the living room, says Dr. Singher, children were accustomed to seeing life begin and end, and probably viewed death as an expected part of life. More recently, however, an aura of mystery and fear surround these natural events because they happen in a hospital.

"Rediscovery of home care is an exciting step forward. The home serves as a more natural place to live and die — with friends not strangers, with familiarity not bland walls," says Dr. Singher. The idea of home care is not new, but its advantages are newly recognized.

Traditionally hospitals are not well suited for dying patients, explains Dr. Singher. They are not peaceful nor comfortable, they are disrupting to the needs of dying patients and their families, they don't encourage the patient to live fully his or her remaining time, and they don't help the family go on living after the patient dies. Many hospitals are making efforts to provide more humane and personal quality care for the dying patient. Nonetheless, when given the choice, patients often elect home care.

Though not indicated for all terminal patients, home care is an especially important alternative for the dying child and his or her family, continues Dr. Singher. The sick child often expresses relief at being home again where he or she will receive loving care in comfortable surroundings. Siblings have fewer major adjustments problems and parents have greater success working through the traumas surrounding their loss when the dying child is cared for at home. Most parents return to normal life sooner, indicate more statifaction with the death process, have more good memories and are better able to concentrate on the positive.

Home care also is economically sound as compared to hospitalization, notes Dr. Singher. Furthermore, caring for the dying child at home eliminates long drives to the hospital, much work interruption and separation from loved ones.

Emphasis in home care is on treating the symptoms — minimizing the pain — not treating the disease. "Health care professionals must believe that symptoms can be treated as effectively at home as in the hospital," Bedore says.

Meet On Soil Classification Set For Friday

Two meetings will be held in Marshall county to discuss soil classification and mapping, according to Floyd Hauff, district conservationist with the soil conservation service. The meetings are scheduled Friday at 10 a.m. at the Newfolden community hall and 1:30 p.m. at the courthouse in Warren.

Don Barron, SCS soil scientist, will discuss soil mapping, classifying and potential use of soils in farming, construction and urban development.

Ray Thompson, county extension agent, will discuss fertilizers and their relationship to soils and crop production.

Soil mapping within the county has been limited with about one-fourth of the work completed. More information about soil resources will help the land user to more effectively plan his operation and conserve energy, Hauff said.

HEW Issues Regulation On Medicare

Medicare beneficiaries must pay for non-covered services only if their doctor gave them written notice in advance that the government would not pay for the procedure, according to the U.S. department of health, education and welfare.

"Patients don't have to pay for items or services if they had no way of knowing the service was not covered by medicare," stated the HEW's health care financing administration in issuing a new regulation.

The decision is intended to clarify an old rule under which some health care providers and insurance intermediaries simply told patients verbally that medicare would not reimburse them.

Now, if the patient does not get a written notice, medicare will reimburse the patient, minus deductibles, and recover the fees from the doctor.

Seek Families For Exchange Student Homes

Local families have the opportunity to share in an unusual Christmas gift this year by inviting a South American student to live with them.

"Sharing your home and love with an exchange student eager to learn about America, can be a gift to enrich your life," stated John Richardson, Jr., president of youth for understanding and former assistant secretary of state for education and cultural affairs. "It is an opportunity to learn about another culture in a very personal way."

Youth for understanding is a non-profit educational program that has exchanged over 75,000 teenagers worldwide, since 1951. It is one of three high school student exchange programs recognized by the international communication agency of the U.S. department of state.

"Purpose of this program is to increase international understanding through the family-living experience for young people and we are inviting families to share the spirit of America with students from South America," said Tuvia Abramson, regional director of the youth for understanding international student exchange program. Students like Elsa Nieto of Columbia and Paulo de Mello of Brazil will be living with host families and attending local high schools.

Elsa is a serious piano student who also enjoys playing the guitar. She has interests similar to American seventeen-year-olds, including tennis, volleyball, dancing and reading. Elsa describes herself as sincere, polite and friendly. She would like to live with a host family in a small town and have a sister close to her own age. She has studied English and French for several years.

Paulo is 15 and enjoys sports in his home town of Rio de Janeiro. Basketball, soccer and volleyball are his favorites but he also likes swimming and rowing. A four year student of English, Paulo also excels in math and art. He hopes to live with an active sports-minded family.

Exchange students become members of their new families and have the same responsibilities and privileges as other children in the home. Maximum effort is made to match the students and families with similar interests. Host families for 800 students, who arrive in January for a six month stay, are needed before December 25 to insure school enrollment. Families interested in participating in the program who care to contribute in this individual way to better understanding and friendship among peoples of our world should contact: Tuvia Abramson, regional director, Youth for Understanding, 4829 Minnetonka Boulevard, St. Louis Park, MN 55416, phone 612-920-2415.

Peat Reserves Subject Of Extensive Studies

by Rebecca Judge
Peatlands Project Coordinator

Recent activities of the Minnesota department of natural resources, the U.S. department of energy and the Minnesota-based natural gas company, Minnegasco have prompted citizens of northern Minnesota to take a good hard look at our vast peat reserves. Referred to as swamp, bog, fen or wasteland, Minnesota's 7.2 million acres of peat are being studied to determine their value to agriculture, forestry and as an energy source, hotricultural supplement and a source for various synthetic chemicals.

Some people argue, however, that the best way to use our peatlands is not to use them at all. In their natural state, peatlands provide habitat for several unique species of plants and animals, retain large amounts of water, and even act as well-contained sink for heavy metals.

Minnesota state legislature is presently developing a policy to govern the use of Minnesota's public peatlands. Peat information will be published on a continuing basis through the next several weeks and is designed to give readers some of the basic scientific information they need to make informed decisions about peatlands utilization. Most information will be taken from reports prepared for the legislature's consideration and will cover topics of concern identified by citizens from this area at a series of public information meetings which took place in October.

Peat is defined by the U.S. department of energy as "a hetergenous material of partially decomposed organic matter (plant matter) and inorganic minerals that have accumulated in a water-saturated environment over a period of time."

Translated to our native tongue, this means that peatlands are tracts of land where the normal decomposition is slowed because instead of falling to a somewhat dry forest floor to be consumed by bateria, fungi and other agents of decay, the plant material which composes peatlands, falls into a very wet, cool environment where the process of decomposition is slowed down tremendously. (Ever notice how lettuce stays fresh longer if sealed in water in a refrigerator?)

By slowing this decay process, those carbon-rich compounds that would normally return to the soil stay in the peat bog itself. Presence of the carbon material is what makes peat a source of combustible energy.

Peat is classified according to its degree of decomposition. Fibric peat is considered young, that is, less than one-third of its plant material is decomposed. Fibric peat consists mostly of spagnum and other mosses and is valued as a horticultural product. Only two per cent of Minnesota's peat reserves are thought to be fibric.

Hemic peat is slightly older with somewhere between one-third to two-thirds of its plant material well-decomposed. Some 85 to 90 per cent of Minnesota's peat is classified as hemic. Averaging six to seven feet in depth, hemic peat is generally considered best for energy, chemical-industrial and agricultural uses.

Sapric peat is the oldest type of peat. It is normally brown to black in color and plants comprising this type of peat are almost thoroughly decomposed.

Minnesota contains approximately 7.2 million acres of peatlands. That's an area roughly the size of Delaware, Massachusetts and Rhode Island combined. Nearly 60 per cent, or 4.4 million acres are totally undeveloped. Approximately 34 per cent of Minnesota's peatlands, (2.6 million acres) are set aside as state and national forests, wildlife refuges, state and national parks and in designated natural areas.

Less than 10 per cent of Minnesota's peatlands are used for agricultural and horticultural purposes.

Pennington county contains 37,803 acres of peatlands. Over 17 per cent (6,632 acres) are employed by agriculture, producing hay, pasture, wild rice and grain crops.

A recent U.S. department of energy (DOE) report finds that "local climatology could be adversly affected by changes in water evaporation and evapotranspiration." The DOE recommends that ponds be created on or near harvested peatlands to mitigate the effects of vegetation loss.

Evapotranspiration is a process whereby a plant releases water it has absorbed from the soil back to the atmosphere via small pore-like structures on the leaf's surface, the stomates. Evapotranspiration is an extremely important and cyclic phenomenon. A plant absorbs water from the soil and loses it to the atmosphere via evapotranspiration. The released water vapor rises, is cooled, and condenses to form water droplets which eventually return to the soil as rain.

By clearing massive tracts of peatlands to prepare the area for large scale utilization, the evapotranspiration rate will decrease. Dr. Kenneth Brooks of the University of Minnesota department of forest resources reports that the reduction in evapotranspiration might be partially offset by an increase in evaporation from the soil surface due to the increase in solar radiation which will reach the soil.

In his publication entitled "Hydrological Factors of Peat Harvesting", Brooks predicts, however, that "the decrease in transpiration will exceed the increase in evaporation." This means that, according to Brooks, not as much water will be recycled to the atmosphere at the bog site following drainage and harvesting as was recycled before operations began. And this will probably result in increased runoff from the area.

According to recent findings by the Minnesota department of natural resources and the U.S. department of energy, peat gasification may present fewer environmental hazards than coal utilization. Peat typically contains far less sulfur than coal, thereby reducing the threat of acid rain.

The major environmental deterrant to peat combustion is the potential release into the atmosphere of certain "heavy metals" most notably mercury. If absorbed by humans in significant amounts (by breathing air or eating food contaminanted with it) mercury can cause birth defects, cancer and even death. There is considerable evidence that in their natural state peatlands absorb mercury and other heavy metals from the air and water. Peatlands trap these materials thus removing them from potential concentration within food webs.

Dr. Richard Crawford of the University of Minnesota freshwater biological institute maintains that the "burning of peat may... be expected to be a significant source of atmospheric mercury." Plans for the containment of the mercury as part of the peat gasification process are being investigated by the U.S. department of energy and Minnegasco.

Minnesota department of natural resources has warned that area air quality could be adversely affected by the release of peat dust from certain harvesting activities. Milled peat harvesting, a European method which scrapes about a half an inch of peat from the field surface, mills the peat over a rotating drum and deposits it back on the field to dry, generates the largest quantity of peat dust.

Small peat particles resulting from the milled harvesting method become airborne quite easily and can travel over long distances. According to a recent DNR report, "any population located within 20 to 30 miles downwind of a harvesting area has the potential for experiencing peat dust emissions."

The U.S. department of energy appears to concur with the DNR's findings. In its recent publication "Peat Perspectus," the DOE states that evolving U.S. peat technology "will necessarily rely on hydraulic harvesting, which dilutes the peat to a slurry which can be pumped because of legitimate environmental and socioeconomic objections to the milled peat and sod peat methods."

In preparing this information article, we relied heavily on the following publications.

+ "Minnesota Peat Program: Legislative Status Report April 1979." Available from the MDNR.

+ "Peat Prospectus," July 1979. Available from the USDOE.

+ "Effect of Peat Utilization on Water Quality in Minnesota," by R.L. Crawford. Available from the MDNR.

Conflict In Viewpoints On Area Flooding

Somewhat conflicting viewpoints on flooding of the Red river valley were presented at an international forum on the subject recently in Winnipeg, Man., Canada.

Robert Calton, assistant to the chief of the U.S. army corps of engineers, said that based on historical data the valley was "moving into a wet period" and valley residents may face floods more severe in the next 20 to 30 years than they did in 1979. He held out little hope that any major project could be undertaken to avert coming floods.

"At this time we are unable to identify any structural measures which would materially reduce the major floods on the Red river or prevent the floodwaters from inundating large areas of formlands in the valley," he said.

The only economically feasible means of protection for communities on the flood plain in the United States were small-scale ring dikes and levees, he said. Current estimates place the cost of 975 separate projects at about $13 million.

Calton has been studying flood problems in the Red river area for the U.S. government for the past 25 years. He claims the increase in the frequency of floods in recent years was because of a gradual change in climatic conditions, not man-made structures such as drainage projects.

Lloyd Jones of the U.S. fish and wildlife service disagreed, saying increased drainage of wetlands that once served as natural reservoirs during spring runoff was contributing to the flood problem, although he couldn't say to what degree.

Jones told the 150 valley residents and officials attending the meeting sponsored by the Manitoba environmental council that laws regulating the drainage of wetlands are not being enforced in the United States. He also warned that the proposed Garrison diversion project could drain another 60,000 acres.

"We can't determine what the climate will be," he said, "but this (drainage) is one area we have control over."

Wide Open Section 8 Race

Nearly everyone expects a wide open race this year in Section 8 high school hockey, and Thief River Falls coach Wendell Grand is no exception.

Asked for a preseason pick in Section 8 this winter, Grand said, "I expect it will be Warroad, Roseau, Crookston Central, East Grand Forks and us. I know picking five is being liberal, but I really think it will be that even."

Pressed, Grand did single out defending champion Roseau as the team to beat once again. "I'd pick Roseau as the favorite," mentioned Grand, "because, No. 1, tradition does mean something. Some people don't seem to think so, but I do. And besides, you're still the champion until somebody beats you."

Past history — tradition, if you will — does say Roseau is the favorite. The Rams have won 21 titles in the 35-year history of the Section 8 tournament, including a current string of three in a row. Only other winners in the history of the tournament include Thief River Falls with six crowns, Bemidji with four, Warroad three and Williams one.

Thief River Falls and Warroad both appear to have the talent to overtake Roseau this season. But the Prowlers haven't won a Section 8 (Region 8 back then) title since 1960 and the Warriors haven't won a crown since 1970. Crookston might have its best team ever and East Grand Forks has opponents worried. But neither team has that beforementioned championship tradition, although the Green Wave appeared in the 1971 Minnesota state hockey tournament as a back-door entry from Region 3.

Playing a bundle of underclassmen a year ago, Thief River Falls was made an immediate Section 8 favorite in 1979-80 as the 1978-79 season came to an end. Thief River Falls players, coaches and fans are still very optimistic, but some of the enthusiasm has been tempered a bit with the realization that it won't be a cakewalk and several teams have the confidence to call themselves title contenders.

What it amounts to is an outstanding 1979-80 season for northwestern Minnesota high school hockey fans. The promise of close games between intense rivals — all of whom consider themselves championship caliber — should keep things hot inside the arenas at Thief River Falls, Roseau, Warroad, East Grand Forks and Crookston.

Miscellaneous

+New Grand Rapids high school hockey coach Buzz Christensen, a familiar figure to northwestern Minnesota hockey fans as an official, told the Grand Rapids Sports Boosters, "We've got a lot of kids back. If we finish the regular season at .500, that should be about right." Ken Hickman of the Grand Rapids Herald then wrote, "Howls of indignation greeted that forecast, and you could almost sniff the aroma of hot tar and feathers. Buzz then named a group of players whose talents make it pretty clear that there's no dreary .500 season ahead." The Indians, who have made six straight state tournament appearances, were state consolation champions a year ago after a first round upset loss to Roseau, 6-4.

+First round pairings for the 1980 Minnesota state high school hockey tournament, scheduled to be played March 13-15 at the St. Paul Civic Center, will show Section 4 vs. Section 5 and Section 3 vs. Section 8 in the first round afternoon bracket, with Section 1 vs. Section 2 and Section 6 vs. Section 7 in the first round evening bracket. If all 1979 section champions return this spring, it'll mean St. Paul Harding vs. Minneapolis Southwest; Hill-Murray vs. Roseau; Rochester John Marshall vs. Irondale; and Edina East vs. Grand Rapids.

+Writing in the Detroit Lakes Tribune, Ralph Anderson indicated he feels the Detroit Lakes girls will be one of the favorites in Region 8AA high school basketball this winter. "This should be another fine season for coach Steve Sundby's team," said Anderson. "The Lakers will miss the contributions of starters Barb Barrett and Cyndi Carlson, who graduated in June, but Detroit Lakes has a veteran cast returning and the Lakers won't be hurting for experience." Sub region champions the past two years, the Lakers will have a definite edge when the new 1980 North Half Region 8AA format is used for tournament play. The eight-team event will be played in the Detroit Lakes gym where the Lakers have lost only one game in the past two seasons.

Grygla Girls Win Opener 51-36 Monday

A 20-point first quarter Monday started the 1979-80 Grygla high school girls basketball season off with a bang and the Eagles breezed to an easy 51-36 home court win over Strandquist.

"We shouldn't be too bad this year," pointed out Grygla coach Bill Radeunz who hopes to compensate speed for size. "We're not too tall," he admitted, "but we've got good speed. We hope to rely on our quickness."

Sherri Anderson and Jill Saurdiff led the Eagles with 12 and 11 points, respectively, in the opener. Grygla jumped out to a 20-2 first quarter lead and was never challenged.

Warroad Lakers Make Changes On Schedule

In a sudden and unsuspected move the Brandon Olympics — who just two years ago represented Manitoba in Western Allen Cup play — packed it in and told the Central Amateur Senior Hockey League (CASH) officials they were terminating their franchise, it was announced today by Cal Marvin of the Warroad Lakers.

In an emergency meeting Monday night in Winnipeg, league officials rescheduled games, which means the St. Boniface Mohawks will be at the Gardens in Warroad to face the Lakers Sunday afternoon at 2:30, following a 12:30 Thief River Falls vs. Warroad Squirt A game.

The Lakers, 4-4 in their first year of CASH league play, are led in scoring by Kim Marchuck who has eight goals, six assists and 14 points. A pair of Thief River Falls skaters on the Warroad squad, veteran Tom Goddard and rookie Scott Sabo, rank fifth and ninth on the Lakers scoring chart. Goddard has three goals, four assists and seven points in six games, with two penalty minutes. Sabo has three goals in six games and had collected 17 minutes in penalties.

Shooting 62% TRFalls Wins At Grafton 57-56

Senior guard Kyle Hams capped a 25-point performance with a game-clinching free throw with six seconds left on the clock Tuesday as the Lincoln high school Prowlers invaded North Dakota to claim a 57-56 win over the Grafton Spoilers.

Senior pivotman Greg Miller, sidelined with foul trouble much of the second half, broke a 51-51 tie with a three-point play with 5:30 gone in the final period to give the Prowlers a 54-51 cushion.

But only seconds later the Spoiler's talented six-foot, four-inch center Greg Feltman muscled in a lay-up and also converted a gift toss when fouled on the attempt, knotting the score at 54-all.

Forward Jim Nyland then took an alert feed from Hams and made a nifty move under the basket to score and put the visitors ahead 56-54. From that point, both teams played give-away in a frantic two minutes of excitement.

Hot from the free throw line most of the night, the Spoilers cooled off just when they could least afford it. Things looked like they were going the Prowlers' way when reserve Gregg Peterson rebounded a missed shot by Feltman after a muffed Grafton free thrown. Coach Glen Peters called a time out with 1:44 remaining to map strategy.

Plans went awry, however, when Feltman stole the ball on an aggressive defensive play which had Prowler followers crying "foul". Todd Young fouled Tim Praska of the Spoilers and in the exchange and Steve Herbel rebounded his teammate's missed free throw. A tipped pass resulted in two Spoilers scrambling for the ball shich squirted out of bounds.

Protecting a two-point margin, Thief River Falls brought the ball down court but Herbel blocked an attempted bounce pass with his knee and ran down the loose ball to give Grafton possession and new life. The Spoilers took time out to set up their own strategy with 21 seconds remaining.

Then it was the Prowlers' turn to be spoilers as they broke up a pass and Hams was fouled by Feltman as he dribbled under the basket with six seconds left on the clock. The first free throw stretched the mesh to ice the contest and when Grafton rebounded the missed second toss the Prowlers allowed an uncontested lay-up at the buzzer for a one-point victory.

Thief River Falls led 37-19 at the end of the first half with a spectacular shooting display and seemingly could have padded that lead except for numerous turn-overs. The Prowlers hit at an 81 per cent clip from the field in the first half, paced by the sharpshooting of co-captain Hams who hit for 16 points by the intermission. But they took few shots, mostly because of first half turn-overs.

In the third quarter the Prowlers were as cold as they had been hot in the first half, failing to score until Hams hit an 18-foot jumper with two minutes to play in the period. Meanwhile, Grafton had capitalized on additional turnovers to tie the game at 37-all. The quarter ended 43-41 for the Prowlers.

"It was like two different ball games," said Peters in describing the Prowlers first and second half play. "we had an excellent first half, but we did not play very well in the second half."

Thief River Falls finished with a dandy 62 per cent shooting mark from the field, hitting 24 of 39 shots. Grafton made 21 of 50 shots for 42 per cent. The Prowlers were 9-for-13 from the free throw line where the Spoilers were 14-for-20. The Prowlers held a 28-20 rebound edge, with Miller grabbing eight rebounds to go along with his 10 points. Thief River Falls was also charged with 17 turnovers, with Grafton losing the ball only nine times.

"We're really pleased with the effort of our kids," said Peters. "They all played well. Hams had a good night; he had the opportunities and he made the most of them."

Thief River Falls, 2-0, will host Kennedy Friday at 7:30 p.m. It was the season opener for the Spoilers.

Thief River Falls surrendered an uncontested lay-up at the buzzer to return home with a 57-56 win. Hams scored 25 points for the Prowlers who upped their record to 2-0. They'll host Kennedy Friday.

Swimmers Have Banquet Tuesday

Athletic letters were presented to 20 girls, special award winners were named and captains for 1980 were announced Tuesday as the Lincoln high school girls swimming team held its annual post-season banquet in the school cafeteria.

Betsie Hallstrom, Franki Kuyath and Joan Glauque were named tri-captains of the 1980 Prowlers.

Special award winners were Brenda Lund, named the team's most valuable player; Peggy Achenbach, named hardest worker and co-winner of the most improved swimmer award; and Mary Geatz, who shared the most improved swimmer award with Achenbach.

Coach John Hustad presented 1979 athletic letters to senior Johanna Desrocher; juniors Brenda Lund, Kathy Dillon, Andrea Lia, Franki Kuyath, Betsie Hallstrom, Joan Glauque and Peggy Achenbach; and sophomores Lisa Desrocher, Robyn Dallmann and Lori Swanson; freshmen Mary Ness, Sheri McGann, Sarah Green, Mary Geatz, Karen Dillon and Rochelle Farmes; eighth grader Karla Lokken; seventh grader Shelley McGann; and student manager Jan Suronen.

Northmen Defend Red River Title

Defending champion Northland community college will face the University of Winnipeg junior varsity in the 3 p.m. opener Friday of the third annual Red River community college invitational basketball tournament in Winnipeg.

At 5 p.m. the Red River alumni will play Saskatchewan technical institute, at 7 Red River meets Portage and a 9 o'clock game matches two Winnipeg independent teams, the Spaghetti Facotry and the Rockets.

Saturday's competition includes a consolation round beginning at 9 a.m., semifinals at 1 p.m., consolation championship game at 5, third place game at 7 and title game at 9.

"The edge we had last year was that we were in better condition than most people up there," explained Northland coach Chet Engelman. "I don't know if we'll have that edge when we play teams like Winnipeg. But if we play well I think we'll do all right."

Northland began its 1979-80 season with a 102-85 victory over a alumni squad Saturday. But the win was a costly one for the Northmen who lost the services of sophomore forward Mike Carriere in that game when he broke the small finger on his shooting hand. The Middle River product will be lost to the team indefinitely.

TRF YOUTH HOCKEY

Hockey Season Will Open Saturday For Prowlers

Talented veterans. That's a good way to describe the nucleus of the 1979-80 Lincoln high school hockey team heading into the season and home opener for the Prowlers Saturday in the sports arena against Mount St. Benedict of Crookston.

"We obviously expect to have a good year with so many people returning as we have," says Thief River Falls coach Wendall Grand matter-of-factly. "Experience has got to be our strong point. We have people like Bill Jury, Brian Ranum, Dave Geatz and Tom Bjorkman who have all played two years as regulars. And the rest of our forwards have been regulars for one year, or else they're coming off a very successful junior varsity program."

No less than ten seniors are back from last year's fine 16-7 team that finished second to Roseau in both the Section 8 regular season point standings and the Section 8 tournament. The 16 wins were the most for the Prowlers in 11 years.

But Roseau still reigned supreme, beating Thief River Falls three times last winter: 5-3 and 8-1 during the regular season and then 4-2 in the Section 8 finals.

Jury will anchor the Prowlers this year after an outstanding 1978-79 junior season when the all-section goalie showed a 2.9 goals against average and a 90 per cent save figure against 550 shots in 20 games. Junior Jeff Mongoven will serve as his back-up Saturday.

Two veteran lines are featured up front as Wade Hoppe centers Jim Thompson and Jeff Ulrich, while Bjorkman skates between Bob Fitzgerald and Paul Drees. They're all seniors who were regulars a year ago, with the exception of Drees who managed plenty of ice time as a space forward.

Top scorer Scott Sabo (18 goals, 16 assists and 34 points) graduated, but Hoppe ranked second in last year's balanced scoring charts with 12 goals, 16 assists and 28 points, followed by Thompson 10-13 for 23, Ulrich 9-13 for 22 and Fitzgerald 11-10 for 21.

"We've got some guys who can put the puck in the net," pointed out Grand. "I think we'll have scoring similar to last year as far as balance. Hoppe, Thompson, Bjorkman, Fitzgerald and Ulrich are all very capable scorers. I don't know if I'd care to point a finger at any one of them to be our leading scorer."

Grand is looking for a third line to perform with consistency. Saturday he'll use Tom Ose, Murray Jorde and Tony Loeffler. Either Ose, a sophomore, or Jorde, a junior, will be the center. Loeffler is a senior.

A fourth line that could see brief varsity playing time would include sophomore Rob Blankenfield who would center sophomore Jeff Imgund and junior Todd Bergland.

Ranum and Geatz headline the defense, but they'll be split up as Grand tries to compensate for the graduation losses of Joe Dee and Mark Huot. Ranum will skate with junior Scott Wiebolt, a letterman as a forward last winter, while Geatz is paired with newcomer Steve Olson, a top prospect from the Bantam ranks. Junior Dean Dokken and sophomore Mark Harder round out the blueline corps.

"Our biggest concern at this point is replacing those six guys we graduated," pointed out Grand, "and that means replacing 50 per cent of our defensemen." That's why Wiebolt was switched from a forward and Olson was brought up so quickly.

Hoppe and Geatz will serve as co-captains of the Prowlers this winter.

A SPECTACULAR fast break lay-up was scored by Thief River Falls guard Kyle Hams on this play Tuesday night at Grafton as he left two Spoilers flat footed with a slight pause before going airborne. Hams scored 25 points to lead the Prowlers to a 57-56 win and a 2-0 season record. Thief River Falls hosts Kennedy Friday.

Nordics Defeat Badger For First Win, 57-40

Tied at 38-38 early in the fourth quarter, Marshall County Central out-scored Badger 19-2 down the stretch to win a 57-40 North Border Conference high school basketball game played at Newfolden.

"We played pressure basketball all the way," noted Marshall County Central coach Ron Ueland, "and apparently it started to pay off at the end. I don't know if Badger committed any more turnovers in the fourth quarter than they did earlier, but we started to capitalize on them."

It was the first win for the Nordics after poor shooting performances cost them season-opening decisions against Karlstad and Argyle. Things weren't much different at the beginning last night when the Nordics shot just 22 per cent from the field in trailing 26-22 at halftime. But they shot at a better than 50 per cent clip in the second half to go ahead 38-34 at the end of the third quarter.

"The ball finally started to go down for us after ten quarters of not hitting anything," sighed Ueland. "That was the big difference."

A balanced Marshall County Central attack saw Ray Kvalvog score 16 points, Scott Peters 15 and Dan Maki 10. Bob Dostal and Brian Nelson had 15 and 12 points, respectively, for the Rockets.

Game totals showed the Nordics 21-for-57 from the field for 37 per cent. The Rockets were 16-for-47 for 34 per cent. A busy night at the free throw line included a 15-for-25 performance by the winners and an 8-for-17 showing by Badger. The Rockets finished with a 33-28 rebound edge, but also led the turnover department 20-10.

Marshall County Central will be at Roseau Friday before returning home to host Warroad Tuesday.

Grafton Tips Lincoln JV 62-60 Tuesday

A length of the court fast break lay-up off a jump ball in the final seconds gave Grafton a 62-60 victory over Thief River Falls Tuesday in a junior varsity high school basketball game played at Grafton.

Thief River Falls led 48-37 at the start of the fourth quarter. It was a 60-60 ball game when Grafton controlled the jump ball tip under the Thief River Falls basket with just five seconds remaining.

Dave Kays scored 100 points for Thief River Falls, a 34-29 leader at halftime after trailing 14-12 at the end of the first quarter.

The loss dropped the Thief River Falls record to 1-1.

Bobcats Stop Huskies 55-46

Oklee snapped a 37-37 third quarter tie by doubling Goodridge 18-9 in the final eight minutes Friday for a 55-46 high school basketball victory over the Huskies.

Goodridge led 14-10 at the end of the first quarter and the game was tied 20-20 at halftime.

"It was a good ball game until the last couple of minutes," pointed out Goodridge coach Rick Nelson. "We turned the ball over too many times and we missed our free throws."

Oklee featured the 1-2 punch of Kevin Vettleson and Steve Opdahl. It was Opdahl's impressive 7-for-11 outside shooting and Vettleson's inside work that produced 36 of the Bobcats' points. Vettleson scored 22 points before fouls caught up to him in the fourth quarter. Three Goodridge scorers reached double figures as Neil Race finished with 11 points and both Kurt Wiseth and Rick Cullen had 10.

The Huskies played without the services of standout Randy Henrickson, who suffered a severe ankle injury in a 42-38 win at Grygla Friday. He is sidelined indefinitely.

"We misseed Randy, no doubt about it," said Nelson.

Goodridge shot 39 per cent from the field, hitting 21 of 53 shots. Oklee shot 35 per cent by making 23 of 62 attempts. The Huskies were just 4-of-14 from the free throw line while the visiting Bobcats made nine of 13 gift tosses. Goodridge turned the ball over 18 times and allowed Oklee to grab 13 offensive rebounds, although the Huskies finished with a slight 30-28 edge overall on the boards.

It was the second win in two starts for Oklee. The Bobcats will host McIntosh-Winger Friday. Goodridge, 1-3, entertains Red Lake Falls Friday.

Northland Has Thin Defense

Northland community college hockey coach Bob Lundbohm says his Northmen will score a few goals this year. At least he hopes so, because Lundbohm also says the Northmen may be giving up a few goals, too.

"We're going to have our work cut out for us," admitted Lundbohm. "Offensively I think we're going to be all right. We've got a number of forwards who can score some goals for us. But we're kind of light on defensive experience. We might score a few goals, but we might give up a few, too."

It's not only the lack of experienced defensement that has Lundbohm concerned, its also lack of a sophomore goaltender, along with a group of "offensive-minded" forwards.

The Northmen, who open their 1979-80 season with a weekend series against defending MJCAA champion Hibbing Dec. 14-15 in the sports arena, have only one experienced defenseman on hand — sophomore Mike Olson of Thief River Falls.

Freshman Howard Beito of Hallock figures to be a strong MJCAA performer on the blueline, with sophomore Dan Guenin of Baudette and Rick Harger of Thief River Falls pairing up with Olson and Beito.

Charlie Sehler of East Grand Forks and Jerry Martin of Thief River Falls are the freshmen goaltenders. Sehler will be the started, with Lundbohm hoping to see him develop some consistency heading into the MJCAA schedule.

Up front, an all sophomore Thief River Falls unit features Scott Bergland, Steve Geatz and Jay Kverno, while Mark Koehn of Devils Lake, N.D. skates with Thief River Falls' Lyle Johnson and Kurt Klosterman. Koehn and Johnson are sophomores.

Centers on those two lines will also skate third line shifts with freshmen Luke Noreen of Thief River Falls and Roger Ehrhorn of Grand Rapids.

"We have some seasoned forwards who can score for us," pointed out Lundbohm, putting the finger on Geatz, Bergland, Kverno and Johnson."

He hopes then can score enough.

Wilderness Program Is For Adults

Minnesota Trailbound, a wilderness program for adults, is sponsoring its ninth annual New Year's ski and snowshoe expedition in the Superior national forest near the Canadian border from December 27 to January 1. Participants in this six-day outing will leave from the Twin Cities at noon Thurs., Dec. 27, and return Tuesday evening, January 1. Headquarters for the trip will be several heated log cabins on a remote lake near the Boundary Waters Canoe Area Wilderness (BWCAW). Winter tents, other equipment and instruction will be available to those who may wish to try winter camping for the first time. Along with cross-country skiing and snowshoeing, activities will include tree identification, animal track interpretation, dog sledding, Finnish saunas and special evening programs on French voyageurs, including accordion music, by Jacques Deseve, an old fur trader from the Minnesota historical society.

Fee of $70 covers transportation, lodging, snowshoes, sleeping bags and other gear. The cost is less for participants who have their own equipment. Reservations are limited and are on a first-come basis. For further information and a brochure of other winter activities and courses, call (612) 822-5955 or write Minnesota Trailbound, 3544½ Grand Avenue, Minneapolis, Minnesota 55408.

What Investment Risk Is Right For You?

Don't put all your money in one investment. Spread it around. Mutual funds may own shares in 50 or more companies. Find out how easily the investment may be sold. If you need to sell quickly, you may need to take a loss if buyers aren't interested.

If you were at a racetrack, would you bet on a long shot—or the favorite?

In investing, many people go for the closest they can get to a sure thing. A new study shows over half the working women surveyed said they would take only the barest minimum risk—or none at all—to get a greater return on their money.

Why are women so conservative? "I'm just not a gambler" said 30 percent of the survey's respondents. Another 20 percent said they couldn't afford to lose anything. Some also cited age and inexperience as reasons for being very cautious.

How much risk can you afford to take? Since everyone has different financial aims, everyone has different risk levels. Before investing, know what your assets and debts are. Consider any big expenses that are coming up—or ending. What's the size of your bank account? Insurance policy? What resources can you count on in an emergency? How far ahead can you look? Answers to these questions can help determine your risk level.

Are there ways you can reduce investment risks? Yes. Find out as much as possible about an investment from a professional such as a stockbroker or mutual fund representative. Know the firm's reputation.

Is there such a thing as risk-free investment? Absolutely not. Even if your investment is insured by the government—such as a bank account—inflation eats away at it. However, you can take advantage of high interest rates and get a good return with low risk. Check out money market funds, for example. Right now, they're paying much more than most regular savings accounts.

You can't expect to make money without taking some risks. But an informed investor can take steps to see they are prudent ones. If you'd like a free list of money market mutual funds, please write to the Investment Company Institute, Dept. MM, 1776 K Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006.

GIGANTIC CHRISTMAS AUCTION

FARM TRACTORS AND CONSTRUCTION EQUIPMENT

Friday, December 14, 1979
Starting at 10:30 A.M.

ATTENTION DEALERS AND FARMERS: Our Annual Gigantic Christmas Auction will be held Friday, December 14, in our heated pavilion. This is always our largest sales of the year. We will have over 100 late-model farm tractors, including 4-wheel-drives, and over 75 pieces of construction equipment. The farm tractors and construction equipment will all be sold together. This is an early listing; there will be many more items before sale date.

Due to the tight money situation that faces most people at this time, we have made arrangements with Thorp Sales Corporation to Clerk this Sale with Financing availble to all qualified buyers. Terms over $5,000.00, ¼ down and balance payable in monthly payments. (Out of U.S. Buyers Not Eligible).

We personally invite you to be with us as a buyer or guest. After the auction, we will have our annual Christmas party, with plenty of refreshments and lunch for everyone. Bring your wife or friend and join us.

MERRY CHRISTMAS,
GEORGE AND TOM

Parental Support Helps Child Artist

Red scribbles on paper. A purple dog. A doll with a broken arm. Is this art?

"Yes," says art therapist Robert Rice. "Definitely. We don't expect two-year-olds to talk in complex sentences; and we shouldn't expect kids to make pictures that make sense to us. But we do expect it, all the time!"

Rice holds a master's degree in clinical art therapy. He uses his knowledge to help people work through their feelings using art. As an intern at Minneapolis children's health center, he let children draw pictures that made sense to them. They got to express on paper their anger or sadness at being in the hospital.

Children see the work in their own special ways and draw it that way too, says Rice. A parent who wants a child to draw "right" isn't letting that child express himself-herself freely. "To a child, 'My drawing is me,' says Rice. "If parents don't accept a drawing for what it is, the child may not feel accepted either."

Children learn to walk and talk in stages. They also learn to draw that way, says Rice. "Until they are about four, most children are more interested in how it feels to draw than in making a picture adults will recognize. They like the feel of scribbling."

Rice points out that just as sounds come before words, scribbles come before pictures. "We reinforce children's sounds by making sounds along with them. We can do the same by letting children scribble and praising them for it."

As children learn to talk, says Rice, they will name their scribbles. "It doesn't matter whether it looks like a dog to you," he says. "To your child, it's a dog. So call it a dog."

But it may not always be a dog. Rice says children have such active imaginations that the same scribble may mean different things to them at different times. "Just go along with them," he advises.

Most children are drawing objects by the time they are four years old, according to Rice. But they tend to draw only objects important to their own worlds — men, women, trees, cars and, of course, themselves. Between the ages of seven and nine they often draw one object the same — all people look alike or all houses look the same.

But a special emotional experience — a good one like a vacation or a bad one like breaking a leg — will tend to change that symbol. "Because it is an unusual experience, a child who breaks a leg will very likely draw himself-herself with a broken leg for awhile," says Rice.

You might be alarmed to suddenly see your boy drawing lots of war pictures. Don't be, says Rice. The action in children's drawing is often fantastic and not like their everyday lives. "Drawing exciting pictures is one way children live out their fantasies," explains Rice.

Rice cautions that children's drawings develop in stages and lots of children reach these stages sooner or later, or progress through them faster or slower than other children. But by nine, a child is identifying more strongly with adults, and wants to be able to draw like them. So his or her drawings are probably becoming more realistic than before.

What can a parent do to encourage a child's creative ability? Lots and lots, according to Rice, and all of it very simple.

"We need to remember that we were all children once," he says. "Parents don't need to be artistic to help their children learn about art. They need to be supportive, and they need to make art materials available."

A child needs a place to be creative. If a playroom isn't possible then give your child a specific place where he-she won't need to worry about making a mess. Newspapers or inexpensive dropcloths on the floor help.

It's best if a child can experiment with lots of different materials. Crayons, clay, fingerpaints and big sheets of butcher paper are especially good. Materials can also be "junk" like egg cartons, cardboard tubes and packing scrap that be assembled into sculpture with glue.

A child also needs a place to display his or her works for family members and visitors. "You don't need an art gallery," says Rice. "The refrigerator door does just fine."

Finally, parents need to praise their child's efforts — even if they would have drawn a picture differently themselves. While parental support doesn't necessarily create great artists, it does help a child feel good about expressing his or her imagination. Ultimately, to feel good about oneself is the most important thing, believes Rice.

"I really believe that all children are artists," he says. "If a child does develop special abilities, I think parental support is the number one factor encouraging those abilities to bloom."

ENERGY UPDATE

Exotic Energy Sources — How Real Are They?

Dr. Richard E. Balzhiser, is Vice President for Research and Development at the Electric Power Research Institute.

Some of our "exotic" energy sources, such as wind, wave and biomass, may be practical, but we have to make sure we understand them and keep their scale in mind.

Wind is probably the closest thing to being a commercially viable option for generating electricity. People have seen windmills; we've used them in the past. But we're not talking about producing significant amounts of power to replace what would otherwise be generated from coal or nuclear plants. The large windmill that NASA (National Aeronautics and Space Administration) is developing stands as high as a 30-story building and produces two megawatts, or two million watts, compared to most coal or nuclear plants that produce from 500 to 1,000 or more million watts. Such windmills, I'm sure, will create some siting problems when, and if, people get around to them. But the economics of windmills are beginning to get into the right ballpark. They're still costly, however, and they only work when the wind blows. There aren't many places where you can count on the wind blowing constantly.

Then there's wave, or tidal power. To the British, with a lot of coastline, making use of the motion of waves to create electricity might look attractive. But I personally believe, as do most of the British scientists and engineers I've discussed it with, that it's not a very practical option. Nevertheless, it is being researched.

Biomass can clearly be a source of energy. We produce a lot of solid wastes in agriculture and timber areas that could be burned to produce steam to generate electricity, but the cost of doing this is high. Much of the cost is in collecting and hauling the materials. If you convert biomass to some other form of energy, like making methane gas, the cost gets even higher. Perhaps more importantly, however, we must consider that biomass would have its greatest impact if we grow crops specifically for energy purposes, rather than just using waste products. Then we would have to consider if this is the best use of land from the standpoint of availability, fertility and rainfall. And the requirements of producing fertilizers and pesticides and so forth, which would be needed to produce a crop, would add to the nation's energy requirements. I think biomass can contribute as a supplement, but not on a scale that would be required to meet this nation's energy needs.

Puffy has a problem. She's much better at climbing trees than she is at getting down again. Usually someone has to get a ladder and bring poor Puffy back to earth.

People share Puffy's problem. Their fears are forever driving them to do what they can't undo. They run away from reality only to wish they hadn't. We have even coined the idiom "up a tree" to denote the dilemma of a situation from which we cannot free ourselves.

With people, it takes more than a ladder to solve the problem.

Through the centuries men have found Faith an answer to fear. Our churches cultivate courageous Christians. For with confidence in God comes confidence in ourselves.

The man who knows he's never alone doesn't run away.

Offer Theories On Christmas Star

by Rita C. Bobowski
Smithsonian News Service

Nearly 2,000 years ago, the three wise men saw a light in the heavens, signaling to them an event of the utmost importance. In the words of the Book of Matthew: "There came wise men from the east to Jerusalem, saying, where is he that is born King of the Jews? For we have seen his star in the east, and are come to worship him."

Brief mention of the Star of Bethlehem has intrigued scientists, historians and theologians for hundreds of years because, other than descriptions in the New Testament, there are no other known accounts documenting this apparently short-term celestrial phenomenon.

Much speculation exists over whether there really was such a star, according to Von Del Chamberlain, an astronomer at the Smithsonian Institution's national air and space museum. In an annual public lecture, Chamberlain traces the various theories advanced to explain the Star of Bethlehem.

"Most of us assume that the Christmas star was an extraordinary sight to behold," he says. "It may not have been so spectacular. Actually, it may have been an event which only professional star gazers — such as the Magi — would even have noticed. And, perhaps what the wise men saw was not really a single star at all."

One theory holds that the Christmas star was a comet. Early records kept by the Chinese mention a comet without a tail visible in the spring of 4 B.C., a date which fits the most recent estimates of the year in which Jesus was born. (Scholars now believe that Jesus was born between 8 and 4 B.C. Since our present calendar system was not instituted until the 6th century A.D., more than 500 years after his birth, errors in calculation are possible.)

But comets move slowly from night to night through the starry sky. Moreover, comets were believed by the ancients to be omens of impending doom, not harbingers of glad tidings.

Another theory has it that the star might have been an unusually bright meteor, called a fireball. As fireballs flash through the atmosphere, they burn with an intense but fleeting light. But ancient records and modern knowledge indicate that fireballs are fairly commonplace occurrences lasting only a few seconds.

A third and more tenable explanation is that the Star of Bethlehem was a "nova," which means literally "new star." Actually, novas are not new but old stars that have reached the end of their evolution and have become unstable. These exploding stars abruptly rise to great brilliance, then lose their luminance slowly over a period weeks.

"This theory has potential," Chamberlain says. "A nova could be bright enough and last long enough to lead the wise men on a long journey to Bethlehem."

"In addition," he continues, "a nova would certainly be the most dramatic explanation. What could be more exciting than to have a 'new star' appear on the night that Christ was born?"

One recent study of ancient Chinese and Korean records indicates that a nova may have appeared in 5 B.C., but there is no definitive account that such an event took place.

Theory most widely accepted by astronomers today was put forth in the 1600s by German astronomer Johannes Kepler. Kepler suggested that the Christmas star was really a "conjunction" of planets.

A conjunction occurs when two or more planets appear to pass by each other in the sky. Using ancient sky records, astronomers have verified that the planets Jupiter and Saturn appeared in conjunction not once but three times between 7 and 6 B.C. — a relatively rare phenomenon.

A conjunction would explain the lack of other records, since it most likely would have gone unnoticed except by those, like the Magi, who were trained to watch the sky.

A conjunction takes on even more significance when viewed from an astrological standpoint. Ancient astrologers would have considered conjunctions to be highly symbolic events. To them, conjunctions of Jupiter and Saturn held special significance — Jupiter, symbolic of the king of the gods, and Saturn, said to be the protector of the peoples of the eastern Mediterranean.

In 6 B.C., the planet Mars joined Jupiter and Saturn following the third conjunction, according to the records. All three planets appeared in the constellation of Pisces (the Fishes), which signified to the astrologers the House of the Hebrews.

While the triple conjunction is the most widely accepted theory, it is unlikely that we will ever know for certain what produced the Christmas "star." But whether the star was supernatural or part of the natural order of things, the story of the Star of Bethlehem has endured as a symbol of Christmas.

Sidewalk Gallantry: Who Steps Aside?

Gallantry is alive and well on our sidewalks, although it is sometimes difficult to detect.

Pedestrians on a crowded street yield to other pedestrians who are deemed weaker because of their age, sex or health. But pedestrians also yield to those who possess obvious strength and status.

The two acts look the same but have very different social ramifications, according to "Correlates of Displacement in Pedestrians," a study in the autumn issue of the Journal of Communication, published quarterly at the University of Pennsylvania's Annenberg School of Communications.

Researchers Frank Willis Jr., Joseph Gier, and David Smith of the University of Missouri in Kansas City observed 1,038 displacements involving 3,141 pedestrians in a college restaurant and four shopping malls.

The researchers defined displacement as when pedestrians, singly or in groups, approach each other and one moves or turns his or her body for the other. Gender, age, race, and group size were among the characteristics monitored to determine who moved for whom.

The researchers found that:

—A man moved for a woman only 39 times while a woman moved for a man 79 times.

—The man in a couple was displaced 78 times while the woman was displaced only 54 times.

—Single pedestrians yielded more frequently to couples than couples yielded to them.

—Pedestrians carrying infants or pushing wheelchairs or strollers were more likely to displace other pedestrians than to be displaced themselves.

—Whites were more likely to be displaced by blacks in all cases, a fact which is not easily explained in the context of the study, the researchers said.

"The most important implication of these findings is that 'gallantry' may be as important as power in determining displacements," the researchers said.

"Yielding to someone stronger in status of physical attributes is a very different act from that of deferring to someone deemed weaker by the conventions attached to age, sex, and health," they said. "That the two kinds of acts look the same does not mean that their ramifications are equivalent, or that they serve the same functions in regulating the physical and social traffic that governs day-to-day life."

Tests Can Save Colon/Rectal Cancer Patients

Each year about 100,000 Americans are diagnosed with colon-rectal cancer. It is the second most common form of cancer in men and third in women. Because early detection of these malignancies has not been stressed and executed, 50 per cent of these people will die within five years.

If the American public and physicians were aware of simple early detection examinations, 75 per cent of all colon-rectal malignancies could be discovered at an early stage and patients could be cured, according to Dr. Frederic Nemer, colon-rectal surgeon in Minneapolis.

"Unfortunately, at the present time only about 20 per cent of colon-rectal tumors are being discovered at an early stage," says Dr. Nemer.

He recommends that every routine physician examination given to an adult over the age 40 include a hemoccult test. Hemoccult is an inexpensive, painless test that checks for hidden blood in the stool. Patients may collect a sample of stool in the privacy of their home and bring it to their physician's office for examination.

"This simple test can detect gastrointestinal bleeding before any other symptoms may be apparent," stresses Dr. Nemer.

Surgeon also urges all patients over age 40 to have their lower colon and rectum examined at least every two years.

For those colon-rectal patients who are not discovered during the early stages when major surgery could be avoided, new surgical techniques have been developed to save the rectum and avoid colostomy, which replaces the rectum with an artificial opening in the abdomen.

These new surgical techniques, along with hemoccult and other new methods of diagnosis and treatment of common and serious gastrointestinal problems will be discussed at a symposium in Minneapolis November 30 and December 1. Symposium is open to all physicians.

1985 Cars To Be Smaller, Still Lighter

The new car sold in 1985 will be far more fuel efficient, lighter in weight, loaded with electronics and much smaller, reports the Automotive Information council (AIC).

Four-passenger cars will be dominant, with only about 25 per cent of the total capable of carrying five or six people.

V-8 engines will decline from 1978's two-thirds of the total to perhaps 10 per cent, and those will be much lower in power than the V-8s of today.

Main reason for the great changes is the federal regulation which requires each car company to achieve an average of 27.5 miles per gallon for its cars made in the 1985 model year, compared with the requirement of 19 mpg for 1979 cars.

Smaller and lighter cars will be the result. And to meet that federal average, companies will be providing some two-passenger commuter cars.

Today's new cars already have been reduced in size and weight but in most cases there has been no sacrifice in interior and trunk room because of the engineering and design talents and through more extensive applications of materials such as plastics and aluminum. Entire hoods and door panels might be plastic by 1985.

But the cars of today will look big when compared with the cars of the mid-1980s because they will have to go through still another redesign.

As the quest for greater fuel economy continues, more emphasis will be placed on diesel engines and more sophisticated electronically controlled gasoline engines. Some turbines and electric cars also might come on the scene. There also might be some hybrids, combining a liquid-fuel engine with an electric motor.

Ingenuity of the entire auto industry will be taxed in the years ahead, but experience indicates that the next generation of cars will meet the requirements and still be attractive, comfortable and road-worthy, says AIC.

A Different Climate

Following editorial is from the Swift County News:

All through history, the lack of understanding between nations has been, if not the cause, the catalyst for all types of unpleasantness. Demagogues and fanatics know this by instinct and use their people to advance their ideas on religion, economics or plain, old-fashioned personal gain, either economic or political, or both.

Our posture vis-a-vis communism in the world after World War II has been an example of this lack. Too many of our leaders convinced Americans that we had to fight communism so we can return the people of eastern Europe, South and Central America and the Far East to their rightful freedom. Only a few weak voices tried to tell us that almost all of these people knew as much about freedom as an Amazonian Indian knows about polar bears. There is not a single communist country in the world today, with the possible exception of Czechoslovakia, where freedom has been known for centuries. Too often, a communist regime gave them a better life than the worse oppression of its predecessor.

The latest example of this lack of understanding is the Ayatollah Khomeini's insistence that Iran is not against the American people, but its government. This line is naturally picked-up by other government officials and the "students" holding Americans hostage in our embassy in Tehran.

Those, such as Ayatollah, who have only lived in freedom as exiles, and apparently learned nothing from their experience, can't understand the make-up of a republic such as the United States. They are completely unaware that you can't divorce Americans from their government as Iranians could overthrow the Shah.

What is difficult to understand is how the thousands of Iranians educated at universities and colleges, or who took military training in this country, can believe Americans and their government are two different things, or that we would cave-in to terrorism, or international blackmail.

There is no question that the Shah was a complete autocrat, who thought of himself as the restorer of ancient Persian greatness. There is also no doubt that he, as sole head of the government, used firing squads, hanging and torture to throttle all opposition. It is also a fact, that our Central Intelligence Agency was the key factor in the overthrow of the government of Mossadegh, which was trying to establish a republic in Iran and threatened nationalization of the oil fields.

No matter, attempting to force this country into sending the ailing Shah of Iran because of hostages held in the American embassy in Tehran demonstrates that too many Iranians don't understand either the American people or our system of government.

Nader And The Car Buyer

Following editorial is from the Morris Tribune:

General Motors has decided to forego the introduction of the airbag on the passenger side in its 1981 model cars. The airbag, it will be remembered, is a large sack which automatically inflates in the event of an automobile accident, for the purpose of preventing injury. At least, that is the theory.

General Motors decided not to use the airbag on the passenger side in its new cars because research indicated that small children who would otherwise be unhurt could be severely injured by the inflating airbag. The auto maker may still choose to offer airbags on the driver's side for the 1981 models.

Federal law already requires that airbags or automatic seatbelts be installed in the front seats of full-size cars in 1982 models and in all cars by 1984. There is little doubt that if the airbag is proven to be effective, Americans will demand to buy cars which contain the safety feature.

However, the benefits of the airbag are not established at this time and the American car buyer has shown no great interest in the device. Thus, it is not difficult to understand General Motors' reluctance to go ahead with the project before it becomes mandatory.

The GM decision was immediately attacked by self-appointed "consumer activist" Ralph Nader. Nader, who as been trying to reshape the American automobile to fit his specifications for years, claimed that GM wants to "continue its unfettered control over the automobile."

Nader's ridiculous statement ignores the obvious fact that automobile buyers make the real decisions about what kinds of cars will be made. General Motors does not produce cars for exhibition; they are designed to sell.

And if GM wants its cars to sell, they must appeal to the tastes and desires of the car buyer. Buyers who are not impressed with the new American-made cars may choose to purchase an import, and as government control over the auto industry has increased, import sales have soared.

Nader is not satisfied with real consumer control over the design of cars; rather, he imagines a time when auto design is regulated and controlled by some government agency. Nader and his followers would then have the comparatively simple task of lobbying in Washington and persuading the bureaucracy to alter the automobile to meet Naderian specifications. Apparently, Nader has given up on trying to convince those independent-minded automobile buyers of the value of his favorite "safety features."

The airbag will have to be judged on its merits. Future research will cast more light on the issue, and Americans will form their own opinions on the matter if and when the devices are installed.

But we resent the attempts of people like Nader to make our decisions for us. American industry was not built on efforts to please lobbyists and bureaucrats. The strength of our system lies in the right of the individual to make a free choice in a free market.

Right Cause, Wrong Result

Following editorial is from the Milbank (SD) Herald Advance:

In mid-November as Americans read their newspapers and watched the evening news, the reports on the national economic future were hardly encouraging. Prospects for balancing family budgets during 1980 seemed even dimmer than ever.

"What will happen if $12 billion in Iranian deposits in U.S. banks are withdrawn?" we asked ourselves. "Will there be a recession?" was not really the question anymore. It had become, "When will the recession occur and how bad will it be?"

The economic experts in the camp that has steadfastly refused to accept the notion that a nation can spend itself into prosperity seemed to have had the gift of prophecy.

As we continue to ask ourselves where it will all end, we might take a look at one government program that has not served the American people very well. We are talking about the unemployment insurance system.

At last there are statistics that show unemployment insurance is not doing what it was intended to do . . . aid the jobless workers. Although it still does that to some extent, it has become something more . . . an incentive not to work at all.

The U.S. general accounting office has completed a survey of 3,000 unemployment insurance recipients. Of these about 25 per cent were replacing 75 per cent of their former net pay with the insurance and seven per cent were actually getting more from unemployment than they had been taking home while working.

It was noteworthy that the GAO survey found the closer a recipient was to being able to replace his or her entire takehome salary, the likelier, it was that the person voluntarily had quit working.

May we say that any government programs that exist on the premise that they are of benefit to a nation are mislabeled if they destroy the incentive to be productive citizens. What is so discouraging is that unemployment insurance is not the only government program that eats away at what used to be called good old-fashioned character.

If we wanted to take the time and space, we could catalog dozens of others. To say that it is time for us as people to wake up, to try to forget about today's pleasures in deference to a better tomorrow and to damand better leadership from our elected representatives is understanding the case.

Gift Giving Hints For Car Owners

What to buy someone for Christmas poses a problem for most people, so to facilitate shopping the automotive informational council (AIC) has come up with a list of items for the car owner.

AIC put the gift ideas into three categories.

More expensive suggestions include a new set of tires, an anti-theft alarm system, a highway cruise control, a tape deck or a stereo radio.

AIC also suggests the possibility of a gift certificate for a complete engine tune-up, a brake job or other item of maintenance which should be performed periodically.

Too many motorists tend to neglect proper maintenance so a gift certificate for a needed service will provide them with a safer and more efficiently operating vehicle, AIC says.

Gifts in the more moderate category include a fire extinguisher, a portable spotlight, a vacuum cleaner which operates from the cigarette lighter, first aid kit, battery jumper cables, a set of emergency flares or reflectors which can be used as a warning if a flat tire has to be changed along the highway.

A subscription to one of the many automotive magazines also could be considered. Check a news-stand and select a magazine which might be most appropriate for the interest of the recipient.

Framed prints of famous cars and "coffee table" photo books of noted vehicles also have become very popular with car lovers.

In the stocking-stuffer category, the automotive information council suggests a pencil-type air pressure guage, which if used, will prolong the life of a car's tires; a compass which will be of benefit on trips, a road atlas, a litter bucket, a non-spill commuter coffee cup, or a certificate for a car wash or two.

Regardless of the cost, all of these items are practical and will make motoring more pleasurable, convenient of safer.

For additional ideas, AIC suggests a visit to an auto-supply facility, where other items might help ease the burden of Christmas shopping.

Movement Of Farm Products To Be Problem

Projecting that demand for agricultural transportation services will increase by 15 per cent or more in 1980, the head of the national Farmers Union proposed in Minneapolis that a "basic agricultural transportation network" be designated so that priority attention can be given to bottlenecks which may appear in rail, waterway or truck transportation.

Speaking at the 38th annual convention of Minnesota Farmers Union, Tony T. Dechant reported that despite strikes, bankruptcies and fuel shortages in 1979, the transportation industry moved a record 128 million tons of agricultural cargo to export locations.

"Next year, export demand is expected to reach 145 million tons and with the waterways already near capacity, most of that added volume will have to be handled by the railroads," Dechant explained.

"We need to have an officially designated basic agricultural transportation network so that essential parts of the rail, waterway and trucking services can be kept at or brought up to needed capacity," he told the farm group.

Considering recent estimates of a 7.6 billion bushel corn crop and a 2.2 billion bushel soybean crop, Dechant insisted, farmers will need to enlarge export markets next year and in the future, but "we need to be giving consideration to the logistics of moving the grain to the ultimate customers here or abroad."

He noted that the Welland canal locks on the St. Lawrence are already at full capacity, while delays at Alton Locks and Dam 26 are four to five days, and the turnaround time for Twin City to New Orleans barge shipments is now 50 days.

"If any essential parts of the Milwaukee road or the Rock Island line are allowed to go out of operation or if we have diesel fuel shortages which hamper truck movements, 1979's headaches could be small compared to 1980," Dechant declared.

He observed that the nation's railroads were short of grain cars at an average of 30,000 cars a day at the peak season this year.

"To handle their share of the increased grain shipments next year, the railroads would have to add 10,000 grain cars, but they may not add even half that amount," he stated.

Explaining that about 25,000 miles of rail lines are under "slow-orders" because of roadbed conditions, Dechant said that major steps must be taken to cure this problem and suggested nationalization of the railbeds as one option.

"There is plenty of precedent for a public right of way for railroads," he explained. "The barges travel on public waterways, trucks travel on publicly-maintained roads and airlines use public airways and airport facilities."

Dechant praised the U.S. House for its recent approval of bills continuing dairy supports at 80 per cent of parity, raising the 1979 wheat and feed grains target rates by seven per cent and amending the 1964 meat import act to provide a counter-cyclical formula for establishing meat import restrictions. Senate action on these bills is still needed.

Farmers Union spokesman said that he was hopeful that the Senate would amend the wheat and corn target price bill to provide for a further increase in 1980, citing recent USDA projections that total net farm income may drop by $6 to $8 billion next year, due to weak prices and inflating costs.

Special Veterans Administration efforts to alert Vietnam-era veterans to unused GI Bill education benefits, begun last year, are being expanded to a nationwide campaign in 1979. The initial awareness program, "Operation Boost," focused on 11 states where GI Bill participation was under 50 per cent.

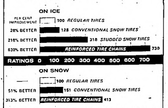
TESTS MEASURE STARTING AND PULLING ABILITY

One of the test vehicles makes a run on a glare ice course during the National Safety Council's 1979 test program at Stevens Point, Wisconsin. Stopping, traction and cornering ability are measured during this annual two-week test project.



As shown in the above chart, these tests have disclosed that conventional snow tires provide only a small improvement in pulling ability on glare ice although they produce half again as much pulling ability as regular tires in loosely packed snow. Studded tires are appreciably more effective on ice, providing about three times the pull of regular tires. Reinforced tire chains provide from four to seven times the pulling ability of regular tires on snow and ice.
